[b] A fact or right in issue determined specifically or generally by the decree of the court cannot be again not the same.<sup>61</sup> So also it is to be distinguished from "collateral attack," which is concerned solely with the right collaterally to impeach the validity of a judgment.<sup>62</sup>

(II.) As Affected by Time of Filing Suit. — A judgment may be pleaded as a bar to a suit begun prior to its rendition, since such judgment, being the first rendered on the cause of action, effectually merges the same without regard to the time or order of the filing of the suits.<sup>63</sup>

2. What Matters and Under What Circumstances They Are Concluded or Barred. — a. Matters Adjudicated by Former Judgment. A former judgment on the merits is conclusive, in a second suit between the same parties, as to every matter offered and received to sustain or defeat a demand, even where the second does not pertain to the same subject-matter or seek the same object.<sup>64</sup> So too, where litigated by the parties to that suit, over the winning party's objections without a modification or vacation of that decree. Triska v. Miller,<sup>86</sup> Neb. 503, 125 N. W. 1070.

[a] If the causes of action are different a plea of estoppel will not avail. McClellan v. McClellan, 142 Ga. 322, 82 S. E. 1069.

[b] Two suits by the same plaintiff against the same defendant for cutting timber on the same tract of land, are not upon the same cause of action, where one is for trees cut prior to a certain date, and the other for trees cut subsequent to such date. Avery v. White, 83 Conn. 311, 76 Atl. 360.

[c] When the second suit is upon a different cause of action but between the same parties, the former judgment operates as an estoppel to the latter suit only as to points and questions actually litigated and determined in the former. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co. v. Drake, 214 Fed. 536, 131 C. C. A. 82. See the title "Res Judicata."

[d] A judgment in a suit by the wife for damages for personal injuries, her administrator being substituted after her death, does not operate as an estoppel to an action by the husband against the same defendant for the loss of her society and services. Indianapolis & M. Rapid Transit Co. v. Reeder, 42 Ind. App. 520, 85 N. E. 1042.

[e] A judgment in an action on an express contract, is not a bar to a subsequent action on another express contract, alleged by defendant in the prior suit to be the one under which the services were performed. Stitt v. Rat Portage L. Co., 101 Minn. 93, 111 N. W. 948.

(II.) How Identity Determined.—(A.) SAME EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT. The true test of the identity of causes of action is the identity of the facts essential to their maintenance, and this identity is best determined by ascertaining whether the same evidence which is necessary to sustain the second action would have been sufficient to authorize a recovery in the first. Where this is found to be the case, the prior judgment is a bar to the second suit.<sup>94</sup> On the other hand, if the evidence submitted in the second action is sufficient to authorize a recovery therein, but could not have produced a result in the first action different from that obtained, the plaintiff's failure in the first suit will not operate to bar his recovery in the second action.<sup>95</sup>

(B.) DIFFERENCE IN RELIEF SOUGHT.—While the estoppel resulting from a former adjudication to a subsequent suit generally depends upon the character and extent of the relief sought and granted therein, a mere difference in the relief sought does not prevent an estoppel

bility of another, who was the immediate actor, and who, in an action against him by the same plaintiff for the same act, has been adjudged not culpable; the defendant may have the benefit of that judgment as an estoppel, even though he would not have been bound by it had it been the other way. Portland Gold Mining Co. v. Stratton's Independence, 158 Fed. 63, 85 C. C. A. 393. And where a husband authorizes his wife to sue for expenses incurred as a necessary result of personal injuries, and permits her to recover therefor without interposing a claim in his own behalf, he is estopped thereby to sue upon the same cause of action in his own name. *Neumeister v. (II.) Where All Parties Are Not Identical.—Where a former action was by several parties plaintiff or against several parties defendant, and the merits were litigated and adjudicated as to all, and a party plaintiff thereafter proceeds against a party defendant for identically the same cause of action, the latter action is between the "same parties" as the former, and the judgment rendered in the former action merged the cause of action and is a bar to the latter, although there were parties to the former action who are not joined in the latter, or vice versa.<sup>15</sup>

A judgment obtained by one or more of several joint owners or creditors, having claims against a common debtor, is not a bar to a subsequent action by the other claimants, or separate suits by each of them, for

[c] A suit to recover rent should be for the full payment period, and a judgment for an amount less than a quarter, when payable quarterly, is a bar to an action for the remainder of the quarter. Warren v. Comings, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 103. To same effect, see Burkhardt v. Greene, 26 Ohio Cir. Ct. 315, affirmed in 68 Ohio St. 711, 70 N. E. 1116, without opinion.

[d] An action by a landlord against his tenant for supplies and advances must include a claim for damages for the tenant's failure to perform a covenant in the lease to properly cultivate the land, and a judgment obtained in such action will bar an action for the breach of the covenant. Dixon v. Watson, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 412, 115 S. W. 100.

[e] Successive breaches of a bond, (1) will constitute separate causes of action only where the judgment recovered in the first action was prior to the subsequent breaches and did not include the penalty of the bond. Ahl v. Ahl, 60 Md. 207; Orendorff v. Utz, 48 Md. 298. (2) But where sureties on a second bond were erroneously sued and forced to pay for defalcations which occurred under the first bond, it did not bar an action against the first bondsmen who were liable for the losses occasioned by the speculations of their principal. White v. Smith, 47 N. C. 4.

[f] A recovery (1) for the principal of a debt will bar a subsequent action for interest on the same debt. Harty v. Harty, 2 La. 518; Saul v. His Creditors, 7 Mart. N. S. (La.) 425; Nugent v. Delhounne, 2 Mart. (La.) 307; Faurie v. Pitot, 2 Mart. (La.) 83; Gordon v. Omaha, 71 Neb. 570, 99 N. W. 242. (2) But where no interest was asked or recovered in the action for recovery of the principal debt, the judgment therein was not a bar to an action for interest under a separate contract. Florence v. Jennings, 22 C. B. (N. S.) 454, 3 Jur. (N. S.) 772, 26 L. J. C. P. 274, 89 E. C. L. 454.

[g] A recovery for the principal of two notes, and six per cent interest thereon, against the maker and endorser thereof, will bar a subsequent suit on a written undertaking of the maker to pay thirty per cent interest in consideration of a certain extension, such subsequent action being to recover the additional twenty-four per cent interest agreed to by the maker. McKay v. Fee, 20 U. C. Q. B. (Can.) 268.

[h] An action against a surety is not barred by a consent judgment against his principal, which is not paid, when the surety was not a party to the judgment on the contract on which he was bound as such surety. Maine Cent. R. Co. v. National Surety Co., 113 Me. 465, 94 Atl. 929.

[i] Where two separate contracts relate to the same subject-matter, an action on one is no bar to an action on the other. Peacock v. Coltrane (Tex. Civ. App.), 116 S. W. 389.

[j] A judgment granting the relief prayed for in a suit for specific performance of a contract to convey real estate, will bar a subsequent suit for the conveyance of other lands described in the contract. Collins v. Gleason, 47 Wash. 62, 91 Pac. 566.

the time of the trial thereof,<sup>37</sup> as it will bar any later action upon any claim in existence at the time and which could properly have been included in the prior suit. Where suit is brought for the recovery of damages for an entire breach of the contract, a recovery therefor bars further litigation thereon.<sup>38</sup>

A judgment for the defendant in one of several actions growing out of the same contract or subject-matter is not a bar to other actions arising thereon, unless it goes to the merits of the whole subject-matter, in which event it operates as an estoppel to any subsequent suit thereon.<sup>39</sup>

[a] But see Kennedy v. New York, 196 N. Y. 19, 89 N. E. 360, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 847, holding that each holding over at the expiration of the term and of yearly periods thereafter, by a tender under a lease for a definite term of years, constitutes a new term, separate and distinct from those that preceded it, so that a recovery for the rent due for one term after that for several has become due will not bar an action for the rent which accrued on the other terms.

(C.) WHERE SEVERAL INJURIES ARISE FROM SINGLE ACT. — (1.) In General. Where several injuries arise from a single act, the question of whether a recovery for any one of such injuries constitutes a bar to a recovery upon any other depends upon whether a single cause of action is created by such act, or whether several causes of action are created thereby. Thus the authorities are in conflict as to whether injuries resulting to both person and property from a single tortious act constitute two distinct causes of action or only one. Some cases hold that where injury to the person and damage to the property result from one and the same negligent act, distinct causes of action arise, upon which separate actions may be maintained, one for injury to the person and the other for injury to the property, and a recovery in one is not a bar to a recovery in the other.<sup>13</sup> But some authorities hold that the claim for both kinds of injuries constitute but a single cause of action, and that separate actions cannot be maintained therefor and that one recovery is a bar to further litigation on the same tortious act.<sup>14</sup>

Injuries to distinct kinds or parts of property,<sup>15</sup> or to different interests or rights, may constitute distinct causes of action, upon which separate suits may be maintained without the recovery on one of them operating as a bar to a recovery on the other.<sup>16</sup>

(2.) Several Persons Injured by Single Act.—Where several persons sustain injuries by a single tortious act, generally separate causes of action arise in favor of such persons and a recovery by one of such persons upon any cause of action in his favor will not bar a recovery by the others.<sup>17</sup> Thus where both husband and wife have a separate cause of action arising from the same subject-matter, a judgment in one action is not a bar to the other action.<sup>18</sup> So where an infant is injured through the negligence or fault of another, two distinct causes of action arise, one by the infant for his pain and suffering and permanent impairment of earning capacity after attainment of his majority; the other by the parent for loss of the child's services during minority, and for medical treatment; and upon these separate actions may be maintained, and a recovery in one will not operate as a bar to the other.<sup>19</sup>

[a] Adjudication of a defense of failure of consideration for three notes in a suit on one of them precludes that defense in an action on the other notes. Gross v. Todd, 94 Miss. 168, 47 So. 801.

[b] Where the defense of settlement can it be made the basis of a subsequent action.<sup>21</sup> But this rule does not extend to matters which are independent of the subject of the litigation,<sup>22</sup> or to defenses not embraced by the issues of the litigation or determined therein.<sup>23</sup>

(B.) NOT SET UP IN PRIOR SUIT, BUT WHICH MIGHT HAVE BEEN. — (1.) Generally. — Since a defendant is required to interpose all the defenses upon which he relies,<sup>24</sup> a recovery by the plaintiff in a former action is conclusive in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies as to every defense which was or might have been interposed thereto, so as to render them unavailable as either a defense,<sup>25</sup> or was set up in a suit upon two of a series of four notes and adjudicated in a recovery for the plaintiff thereon, such defense is not available in a subsequent action on the other two notes. Jones v. Laurens Banking Co., 137 Ga. 561, 73 S. E. 835.

[c] Where the validity of an agreement has been adjudicated against the defendant, he cannot set it up in defense of another action between the same parties or their privies under identical conditions and circumstances. Peoples' Water Co. v. Pittston, 241 Pa. 208, 88 Atl. 503.

[d] A defense unsuccessfully pleaded in a proceeding to revive a judgment, cannot be set up in an ejectment suit to recover possession of land purchased by plaintiff at execution sale under such judgment. Greer v. Major, 114 Mo. 145, 21 S. W. 481.

W. 282, holding that defenses not litigated or passed on in the former action are not barred in a subsequent suit, and that the burden is on the plaintiff to show that such defenses were actually made and passed on in the former action. (2) Jacobson v. Miller, 41 Mich. 90, 1 N. W. 1013, holding that where, in an action upon a lease for rent, the defendant's failure to deny under oath the execution of the lease, precluded him from disputing such execution, he was not barred by the judgment therein rendered from setting up such defense in a subsequent suit on the same lease for other rents accruing thereunder. (3) Farrell v. St. Paul, 62 Minn. 271, 64 N. W. 809, 54 Am. St. Rep. 641, 29 L. R. A. 778, holding that a tax judgment, entered upon default, against a lot for street improvement, being in rem, does not bar the owner of the lot from subsequently bringing an action for damages against the former plaintiff for the wrongful grading of the street to the injury of the lot. State v. Cooley, 58 Minn. 514, 60 N. W. 338; Adams v. Adams, 25 Minn. 72. Compare, Tudor v. Kennett, 87 Vt. 99, 88 Atl. 520.

[b] A defendant, in a suit for rent under a lease, who sets up the claim that the tenancy had been changed by agreement from a yearly rental into one from month to month, cannot, in a subsequent suit for the next month's rent, interpose a defense of surrender and release, or a violation of the contract by the lessor, since he should set up all his defenses in the first suit. Harrington v. Huff & Mitchell Co., 155 Mich. 139, 118 N. W. 924.

[c] A claim for the reduction of the amount of a judgment in condemnation proceedings, which the plaintiff omits to urge, cannot be set up in defense of mandamus proceedings, to compel payment of the full amount of the judgment. State ex rel. Cook v. Fairley, 45 Wash. 52, 87 Pac. 1052.

[d] A default judgment, against which defendant was prevented from setting up a defense by reason of accident and mistake, is conclusive, and equity will not restrain its enforcement upon such defense, where defendant had an adequate remedy at law for opening the default and neglected to avail herself of it. Weed v. Hunt, 81 Vt. 302, 70 Atl. 564.

[e] A probate decree adjudicating a widow's right to dower in the estate of her deceased husband was res judicata as to all defenses which might have been, but were not, set up in bar of her right. Briggs v. Manning, 80 Ark. 304, 97 S. W. 289.

[f] A decree foreclosing a mortgage is conclusive of all defenses which might have been pleaded therein. Livingston v. New England Mortgage Security Co., 77 Ark. 379, 91 S. W. 752.

[h] A satisfied judgment for salary due for two weekly instalments, under an employment for one year, based upon a claim of wrongful discharge, conclusively establishes the wrongfulness of the discharge, and estops the defendant from denying it in a subsequent action by the discharged employe for the recovery of salary for the balance of the year. *Allen v. according to the weight of authority, a defendant is required to plead a defense of usury in the action on the usurious debt, and his failure to do so will bar him from subsequently setting it up or maintaining an action for its recovery.<sup>35</sup>

It is incumbent upon the defendant to any action involving a claim of title to or trespass on real property, or a foreclosure of mortgage thereon, to plead all the defenses he has, since he will be estopped, by his failure to set up any title or claim in such action, from afterwards asserting the same.<sup>36</sup>

was voluntarily withdrawn by the defendant,<sup>46</sup> or where, for any cause, it is rejected or excluded by the court, so as to prevent its adjudication therein, it is not concluded by the judgment rendered in such action, and may, therefore, be made the basis of a separate action.<sup>47</sup> Even where a plaintiff voluntarily credits the defendant with any item or claim which would be available as a counterclaim or set-off, but fails to allow full value therefor, his judgment, if entered upon a default, is not a bar to a subsequent action by the defendant to recover the balance of the amount for which he should have received credit;<sup>48</sup> but credit for the full value will bar an action

[b] A judgment in the United States court on a note for fertilizers is not a bar to an action in a state court for damages to defendant's crops, caused by the use of such fertilizers, where the same question was raised in the United States court, but withdrawn by consent of the court. *Kirven v. [a] Where one partner buys the other's interest for a given sum less one-half the firm debts, a judgment for a balance due on the purchase price bars any claim which the judgment defendant may have had against the firm for services rendered. Evans v. Mackey, 189 Ala. 283, 66 So. 3.

[b] Failure of the payees of a note, on being sued thereon by their indorsee and on the maker's bankruptcy, to assert misrepresentations by the indorsee as to maker's solvency, which induced the payees to take the note, precludes subsequent suit by the payees, to recover on that ground, the amount they paid on the judgment obtained against them, the matter being defensive in its nature and not available as a counter-claim on which an independent suit might be brought. Jefferson, Noyes & Brown v. Western Nat. Bank, 144 Ky. 62, 138 S. W. 308.

[c] In Equity.—(1) Where the vendee under a land contract sues for rescission which is granted, the vendor must, in the same suit, set up any claim for rent for the occupancy otherwise his claim is barred. *Rogers v. But (2) the granting of the relief asked in a counter-claim, by rescinding a contract upon which the note sued on was given, does not estop the defendant from suing for purchase money paid under the contract. Wright v. Anderson, 117 Ind. 349, 20 N. E. 247.

[d] A previous agreement to pay the debt upon which plaintiff sues defendant, is a defense which must be pleaded by the latter, and not a counter-claim which may be sued on after judgment in the suit on the note. Lawrence Sav. Bank v. Stevens, 46 Iowa 429.

[e] A judgment that a contract had been performed, rendered in an action for making repairs, bars an action for damages from the defectiveness of the work of repair, foundation for the latter being taken away by the judgment in the former. Bell v. Mutual Mach. Co., 150 N. C. 111, 63 S. E. 680.

[f] Where malpractice results in a cause of action for damages, it is not merged in a judgment recovered by a physician for services rendered where it is not pleaded in the action. *Conly v. (III.) Cross-Actions. — As in the case of a counter-claim or set-off,<sup>60</sup> the failure of a party to interpose a cross-action available to him does not bar a subsequent independent action upon it unless the facts upon which it depends were adjudicated in the previous action.<sup>61</sup> Thus a recovery for work and labor or personal services does not, as a general rule, bar an action for damages for the negligent or unskillful performance thereof,<sup>62</sup> unless such negligence or lack of skill was set up as a defense or counter-claim in the first action,<sup>63</sup> or has been litigated as a cause of action.<sup>64</sup> Nor will a recovery for the purchase price of goods bar an action for breach of warranty,<sup>65</sup> or for the a merger or bar to the same extent as the judgments of other courts,<sup>71</sup> except as to matters of which they had no jurisdiction.<sup>72</sup>

The judgment of a probate court is a conclusive bar to another action upon the same matter,<sup>73</sup> unless it was without jurisdiction of the matter determined.<sup>74</sup>

Judgments of another state or country as a merger or bar will be found treated elsewhere in this article, and the same is true of federal judgments as a bar in state courts and vice versa.<sup>74½</sup>

So also, the decision of a special statutory tribunal upon a matter properly within its jurisdiction is conclusive of such question, but cannot be used for any other purpose.<sup>76</sup>

A decision rendered by an officer, or board of officers, in the proper exercise of judicial powers, which has under the law the force and effect of a judgment, will operate as a bar to any other action by the parties or their privies on the matters determined.<sup>77</sup> But if the law of the forum does not ascribe to the decision of such officer or board the force and effect of a judgment,<sup>78</sup> or if such officer or board act in a ministerial, instead of a judicial, capacity in the matter, further proceedings in relation thereto will not be thereby barred.<sup>79</sup>

b. As Affected by Nature or Form of Action or Proceeding.
(I.) In General. — The rules herein stated as to former judgments as merger or bar are not dependent upon the nature or form of the action in which the judgment was rendered;<sup>80</sup> they apply in all classes and forms of actions and proceedings in which a final adjudication is had.<sup>81</sup> Thus a final recovery in an action at law will bar a suit in itor;<sup>27</sup> ordinarily a cause of action is as effectually merged in a judgment entered upon confession as in the case of any other judgment, and therefore such judgment is as conclusive as any other as a bar to another action on the same cause of action.<sup>28</sup> But a confessed judgment does not bar an action on a counter-claim not presented in the first suit.<sup>29</sup>

By One of Several Joint Obligors.—In the absence of a statute otherwise providing, in an action against two or more joint obligors, a confession of judgment by one of them and the acceptance thereof by the plaintiff is a bar to a suit against the others by the same plaintiff.<sup>30</sup> A judgment confessed against a firm by one of its members, without authority from the others, bars another action against the firm on the same cause, though it binds only the member by whom it was confessed.<sup>31</sup>

(C.) JUDGMENTS BY DEFAULT.—Where the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the parties, a judgment by default operates as a bar to a further suit between the same parties upon the same cause consent judgment is not merged in or concluded thereby,<sup>42</sup> and after such a judgment is vacated by consent of the parties it ceases to operate as a bar.<sup>43</sup> A court of equity may decline to recognize a consent judgment which it finds to be erroneous and contrary to the right of the matter.<sup>44</sup>

(E.) JUDGMENTS ON PLEAS IN ABATEMENT AND BAR.—A judgment sustaining a plea in abatement does not go to the merits of the controversy, and therefore does not operate as a bar to another action based on the same cause.<sup>45</sup> Where matter in bar is pleaded in connection with matter in abatement, however, and a general finding of the jury or court in favor of defendant is had, without limitation or restriction, the judgment rendered thereon will be presumed to have been rendered on the merits, and will operate as a bar to another suit on the same cause,<sup>46</sup> unless it is clearly shown by the record that the judgment was based solely on the plea in abatement.<sup>47</sup>

(F.) JUDGMENT ON DEMURRER.—(1.) In General.<sup>48</sup>—A judgment rendered upon the sustaining or overruling of a demurrer may or may not be a judgment upon the merits, depending upon whether the demurrer required a determination of the substance of the claim, right, or title involved in the action or was based upon some defect in the method by which such claim, right, or title was presented in the pleadings. If the substance or merits of the matter at issue was passed upon, the judgment is as conclusive a bar to the relitigation of such matter as any other judgment on the merits, both as to the grounds of action or defense actually relied upon and those which might have been but were not presented.<sup>49</sup> Thus where a general demurrer goes to the strued, and if it appears that there was no trial on the merits, it is treated as in abatement. Harrison v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 102 Iowa 112, 71 N. W. 220, 47 L. R. A. 709.

tion of the controversy on the merits, where the record shows that the demurrer was sustained without stating upon what grounds.<sup>56</sup> But where the record shows that the demurrer was sustained upon all issues presented by it, the judgment constitutes a complete estoppel.<sup>57</sup>

A trial court is not bound by an interlocutory order overruling a general demurrer to a complaint, and may change its ruling when convinced that it was erroneous; and such order, being interlocutory only, does not operate as an estoppel.<sup>58</sup> And a decision overruling a demurrer to a defense does not bar the plaintiff from controverting or avoiding the effect thereof.<sup>59</sup> It has been held, however, that an order overruling a demurrer to a complaint, to which no exception is taken, conclusively determines the fact that a cause of action existed as stated by such complaint.<sup>60</sup> is unauthorized to bring or maintain the suit,<sup>95</sup> does not operate as a bar to another suit on the same cause of action.

(e.) For Defective Pleadings. — A judgment based upon defects in the pleadings does not, as a general rule, go to the merits of the cause, and will not, therefore, bar another suit on the same cause of action.<sup>96</sup> But where the material issues involved in the suit have been necessarily determined in sustaining a demurrer, the judgment thereupon rendered is a bar to a further action upon the same matter.<sup>97</sup> The fact that a matter was improperly pleaded does not affect the conclusiveness of the judgment rendered, where no objection was made at the time by the adverse party.<sup>98</sup> have it reversed on appeal, it is as conclusive against him as if on the merits.

ent form or name.<sup>6</sup> By statute or rule, however, it is sometimes provided that a judgment of nonsuit shall have the same effect as a judgment on the merits for the defendant, unless the court otherwise directs.<sup>7</sup> And if a judgment of nonsuit is given after a consideration of the cause upon the merits, it operates as a bar to a further suit upon the same cause of action.<sup>8</sup>

A judgment of non prosecution is in effect the same as a nonsuit; that is it turns the plaintiff out of court on the action, or part of the cause of action, non pressed, without barring a subsequent action thereon.<sup>9</sup>

it does not operate as a bar to a subsequent action,<sup>13</sup> although it may be final in its form,<sup>14</sup> and if a judgment does not have the effect of terminating the litigation, either by a conclusive adjudication of the question at issue, or throwing the case out of court, it is interlocutory in its nature.<sup>15</sup> But where an interlocutory decree ripens into a final decree after the institution of the second suit it thereby becomes a bar.<sup>16</sup>

A conditional judgment does not operate as a bar to a subsequent action on the same subject-matter until it becomes absolute by the performance, or failure to perform, the conditions upon which it was granted.<sup>17</sup>

(II.) Verdict or Findings. — A verdict or other findings of fact not followed by a judgment based thereon, will not operate as a bar,<sup>18</sup>

[a] Remittitur.—Where a judgment in ejectment is conditioned on a remittitur by plaintiff for certain interfering surveys, such remittitur is not a retraxit, and not a bar to another suit. Gibson v. Chouteau, 7 Mo. App. 1. See also Martin v. unless the parties have agreed that it shall serve the office of judgment as well as that of verdict, or have acquiesced therein, and thereby renounced their right to further litigate the matter.<sup>19</sup> But some cases hold that, where the time has elapsed in which a new trial may be had, or the verdict set aside, the verdict is a bar to a second suit.<sup>20</sup>

The decision of a court in a case tried without the aid of a jury, if followed by judgment, will as effectually bar another suit upon the same cause of action as if based upon a verdict.<sup>21</sup>

[b] The estoppel is limited to the point actually litigated and determined. Moorehouse v. Moorehouse, 7 Pa. Super. 287.

[c] In admiralty and maritime causes, an appeal suspends the decree or sentence appealed from, and it is not res adjudicata until the final judging an appeal operating as a supersedeas, the judgment cannot be regarded as final, and therefore is not a bar to another action,<sup>28</sup> although upon the withdrawal, abandonment, or failure to perfect the appeal, the judgment will operate as a bar to another action.<sup>29</sup> And where the statute provides that a judgment does not become final until the time for an appeal has expired, the judgment does not operate as a bar until the expiration of such time.<sup>30</sup>

[a] A question expressly decided by a court of equity, in a decree which is affirmed on appeal, is res judicata, although such question was not considered by the appellate court, whose

ment amended without jurisdiction before affirmance, when affirmed as thus amended, becomes res judicata.<sup>32</sup>

(C.) WHEN JUDGMENT VACATED OR REVERSED.—As a general rule, when a judgment is vacated or set aside by the court in which it was entered, or reversed by an appellate tribunal and remanded for further proceedings, it thereby loses its conclusive character as a bar to a subsequent action.<sup>33</sup> But where a reversal is upon the merits of the con-affirmance was based on other grounds. Russell v. Russell, 134 Fed. 840, 67 C. C. A. 436, reversing 129 Fed. 331.

[B] But a judgment rendered in an action prematurely brought, although affirmed on appeal, is no bar to another action brought after the right of action has accrued. Maloney v. Nelson, 12 App. Div. 545, 42 N. Y. Supp. 418.

[a] To make one a privy to an action, (1) he must be one who has acquired an interest in the subject-matter of the action, either by inheritance, succession, or purchase from a party to the action subsequent to its institution. Bryan v. Malloy, 90 N. C. 508. (2) “One who prosecutes or defends a suit in the name of another, to establish and protect his own right, or who assists in the prosecution or defense of an action in aid of some interest of his own, and who does this openly, such a party, by contract, estate, or blood,<sup>40</sup> or in law.<sup>41</sup> And a judgment on the merits operates as an estoppel against all parties of record participating in the action, both plaintiff and defendant, and their privies,<sup>42</sup> whether or not they are included in the judgment;<sup>43</sup> nor is the operation of such estoppel hindered by the fact that some of the parties to the former action are not joined in the second,<sup>42</sup> or that there are parties to the second action not included in the former.<sup>43</sup> A defendant is entitled to invoke this estoppel against a second recovery of the same claim, whether by the claimant himself or his beneficiary, representative or trustee.<sup>44</sup>

(II.) Strangers.—Since a judgment does not operate as an estoppel either against or in favor of a stranger to the litigation culminating therein,<sup>45</sup> a defendant cannot plead in bar of an action against him to the knowledge of the opposing party, is as much bound by the judgment, and as fully entitled to avail himself of it, as an estoppel against an adverse party, as he would be if he had been a party to the record." *Souffront v. (II.) Joint and Several Obligors. — While satisfaction of a joint and several obligation by one of the joint and several obligors operates as a release of all of them,<sup>65</sup> an unsatisfied judgment against one of the obligors on a joint and several obligation, such as a maker, endorser, drawer or acceptor of a promissory note or bill of exchange,<sup>66</sup> or other obligation both joint and several in its nature, does not bar an action against another obligor on the same obligation, since such debt or undertaking is not merged in the former judgment.<sup>67</sup>

Effect of Joint Judgment.—A joint judgment against all of the debtors on a joint and several obligation is generally held to be a bar to another suit on the same demand,<sup>68</sup> though in some states a plaintiff's remedy is regarded as double, rather than elective, where the obligation is both joint and several, and a joint judgment is no bar to a several action.<sup>69</sup>

[a] "If the plaintiff brings suit against two joint promisors and ac- cepts a judgment against one, that would of course put an end to the cause as against the other; it is called a merger of the whole cause of action. Practically there is no difference in this respect between a joint and a joint and several cause of action." Hutch- inson v. Brown, 8 Mackey (D. C.) 136.

[b] The merger of a debt into a joint judgment will not bar a resort to the original note and the relations of the parties to it, for the purpose of enabling him to disclose and assert an equitable set-off. Baker v. Kinsey, 41 Ohio St. 403.

[a] But see Taylor v. Sartorius, 130 Mo. App. 23, 108 S. W. 1089, hold- ing that even where, by statute, part- nership obligations are made both joint and several, a judgment in favor of some of the partners signing a joint partner on a partnership debt will bar not only a subsequent action on the same claim against the firm or any partner,<sup>71</sup> but also an amendment of the judgment so as to include another partner subsequently discovered to have been such, but who was not a party to the action.<sup>72</sup> This is true though the latter were dormant partners of the defendant in the original action, and this fact was unknown to the plaintiff when that action was commenced,<sup>73</sup> or were non-residents of the state, and without the jurisdiction of the court.<sup>74</sup> But a judgment against an individual who is severally liable with a co-partnership of which he is a member, does not bar an action against the partnership.<sup>75</sup>

[a] In Bennett v. Fairfield, 13 R. I. 139, 43 Am. Rep. 17, it was held that where a person leaves in a town highway an object calculated to frighten horses, and the town negligently suffers it to remain, with the result that plaintiff's horse took fright at it and did damage, the person, who left the object on the highway, and the town are not joint tort-feasors, but that they are collaterally liable by reason of distinct though related torts for the same injury, and a judgment against the individual, from which he was discharged in bankruptcy, did not bar an action against the town.

86. Anderson v. West Chicago St.

5. Waiver of Benefit of Bar.—Where a party fails to take advantage of a former adjudication by claiming the benefit thereof, as a bar or defense, he will be deemed to have waived his right to the benefit of estoppel arising therefrom and the case may be determined without regard thereto.<sup>87</sup> But it has been held that the court on grounds of public policy and convenience may refuse to relitigate matters which have already been litigated between the same parties.<sup>88</sup>

One who seeks the reversal of a judgment is estopped from pleading the same in bar of an action pending the appeal.<sup>89</sup>

C. RES JUDICATA.—While the term “res judicata” is frequently used in a more extensive sense, it does not cover or embrace the doctrine of merger or bar,<sup>90</sup> though the principles which govern them are to some extent the same. The scope and application of the doctrine of res judicata will be found elsewhere in this work.<sup>91</sup>

D. PLEADING AND PRACTICE.—1. Necessity of Pleading Former Adjudication.—a. As Res Judicata.—A party who desires to rely on a former judgment merely as a conclusive determination of a fact material in a pending action, is not required to plead such judgment, since it may be given in evidence in proof of the fact determined, whenever it becomes material, without being specially pleaded.<sup>92</sup> A dis-

[a] “It is no surprise as the existence of the judgment is equally well known to each party.” Stancill v. James, 126 N. C. 190, 35 S. E. 245.

[b] “While as a general rule, in order to render evidence available in support of a defense based upon matters of estoppel, such matters must be pleaded, the rule does not apply to the statement of a cause of action by plaintiff. Indeed, under our system of inction in this respect must be made between a judgment merely as res judicata and as a merger or bar,<sup>93</sup> but this distinction does not always seem to be clearly drawn in the cases.

The general rule is as applicable to a defendant as to the plaintiff, although less frequently involved in such cases,<sup>94</sup> and applies whether the judgment is determinative of a question of law or a question of fact.<sup>95</sup>

b. In Bar.—Generally in order to rely upon the estoppel of a former adjudication, in bar of the prosecution of another action, the former judgment must be pleaded specially in the subsequent action.<sup>96</sup>

pleading, no opportunity is afforded for such pleading on the part of plaintiff. Nevertheless, the record may be given in evidence with the same conclusive effect as if it had been specially pleaded." Ahlers v. Smiley, 11 Cal. App. 343, 104 Pac. 997.

[c] Under Former United States Equity Rule 45.—When a former recovery is to be relied on by the plaintiff it is not "necessary" to amend the bill, setting up the former recovery, where such recovery is relied upon as evidence of a material fact. Southern Pac. R. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 18 Sup. Ct. 18, 42 L. ed. 355.

93. See generally, supra, XVII, B, 1, b, (I); the title "Res Judicata;" and infra, XVII, D, 1, b.

[a] Distinction Between Former Judgment as Bar and as Res Judicata.—"A former judgment on the same cause of action, being a complete bar to a second action, must always be pleaded by way of defense. . . . But a former judgment is no bar to a second suit upon a different cause of action. It merely operates as conclusive evidence of the facts actually litigated in the first action, and upon the determination of which the finding or verdict therein was rendered, and need not be pleaded any more than any other evidence. In such a case it is proper for a party to plead his cause of action or defense in the ordinary form, leaving the judgment to be used in evidence to establish his general right." *Swank v. In the present case the plaintiff became entitled to attack this judgment as obtained by fraud or that the court was without jurisdiction to render it, or to prove any other matter which might overthrow it, and for this reason the provision [of the statute] is salutary and should be enforced." [a] "Prior to the code, a former suit and recovery for the same cause of action could be given in evidence under the plea of the general issue, in actions, like ejectment and trover, in evidence under a general denial.<sup>98</sup> The same general rule applies to suits in equity.<sup>99</sup>

But under the common law system of pleading, the general issue being pleaded, evidence of a former judgment is admissible in those classes of actions<sup>1</sup> in which other matters in discharge of the action which special pleas were not allowed.

. . . But now the answer of the defendant, in every case, must contain a statement of any new matter constituting a defense (Code, §149). Hence a former recovery, whether obtained before or after the joining of the issue, cannot be given in evidence, in any action whatever, under a general denial of the allegations in the complaint." Hendricks v. Decker, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 298.

might be proved under the general issue, though inadmissible in other actions.<sup>2</sup>

c. By Reply or Subsequent Pleadings.—In jurisdictions in which a replication or reply is necessary, a plaintiff must plead therein a former judgment upon which he relies as a bar to matter contained in the answer.<sup>3</sup> But where replications have been abolished obviously it is neither necessary nor possible for a plaintiff to plead a former adjudication in bar of matters set up by the defendant.<sup>4</sup> The same rules would hold good as to pleadings subsequent to the replication.<sup>5</sup>

d. Where No Opportunity To Plead.—A former recovery may always be given in evidence, without being specially pleaded, when either party seeking to rely on the estoppel has had no opportunity to interpose the defense,<sup>6</sup> and it is as conclusive under such circumstances as General issue with notice of special defense, see infra, XVII, D, 2, a, (I).

[a] Even if the practice is proper in assumption it is not allowed in trespass. "In Bird v. Randall (3 Burr. 1353), Lord Mansfield took a distinction between actions on the case, and actions for torts. He says, a former recovery, release, or satisfaction, cannot be given in evidence in actions for torts; but must be pleaded. But an action on the case is founded on the mere justice and conscience of the plaintiff's case, and is in the nature of a bill in equity; and in effect is so; and therefore in such a former recovery, etc., need not be pleaded, but may be given in evidence. Chitty adopts the same distinction. (1 Chitty Pl. 472, 475, 496.)" Coles v. Carter, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 691.

[b] Garnishment Proceedings.—Where a statute provided that upon traverse of the answer of a garnishee, "the court shall direct without the formality though it had been pleaded specially.<sup>7</sup> This rule applies to both domestic and foreign judgments<sup>8</sup> and is applicable where special replications are abolished and a plaintiff has no opportunity to reply to new matter set up in the answer,<sup>9</sup> and also where the estoppel of the judgment would be a complete defense to the issues raised by a plea of the general issue.<sup>10</sup> If it does not appear from the complaint that plaintiff relies upon or denies a fact which has already been adjudicated, evidence of such adjudication may be given by the defendant at the trial without pleading it, when plaintiff attempts to make use of the fact.<sup>11</sup> Where the former judgment is not rendered until the pleadings in the action are closed, it is not necessary to plead it.<sup>12</sup>

v. Waiver and Effect of Failure To Plead.—(1.) Generally. — Failure to plead the prior adjudication, where special pleading is required, is generally a waiver of the right to rely upon it as a bar,<sup>21</sup> since the relitigation of the matter does not involve any question of jurisdiction.<sup>22</sup> It has been held, however, that a court may refuse, on grounds of public policy and convenience, to entertain an action on the same cause of action which is already being litigated before it by the same parties in an action previously instituted and in which they can obtain the same relief sought in the subsequent action.<sup>23</sup> But where

In fact the expense to the public is often greater than it is to the parties. It is for the public good, therefore, that there be an end of litigation. . . . And when a cause both parties try the case and allow it to be submitted on the theory that a former adjudication is an issue, they will be deemed to have consented to the trial of that issue and are bound by the result as though the issue had been raised by the pleadings.<sup>24</sup> A failure to object to evidence of the former judgment on the ground that it has not been specially pleaded,<sup>25</sup> or to take an exception, on that ground,<sup>26</sup> is a waiver of the irregularity arising from a failure to plead the judgment.

(II.) As Affecting Conclusiveness. — By the weight of authority the conclusiveness of a former adjudication as an estoppel is not affected by the fact that it was not specially pleaded, where it is has been proved;<sup>27</sup> thus a former judgment, admitted in evidence by consent,<sup>28</sup> has been once fairly tried, it ought not to be tried over again, even if the parties are willing. Such a course would be unjust to other parties whose causes might be thereby delayed."

[a] "In cases of this description, where nearly everything that shows the plaintiff has no subsisting cause of action, may be given in evidence under the general issue, there can be no good reason why a former judgment, . . . should have any greater effect when pleaded, than when shown in evidence. Judgments, it is said, ought to be final; because it is for the public interest that there should be an end to litigation; and a man ought not to be twice vexed with the same cause of action. But to make the weight of the evidence to depend upon the form of the issue, is to disregard these reasons, in all cases where a judgment is held not to be conclusive; and if it is not conclusive, upon what principle is it admissible at all?" Bell v. Raymond, 18 Conn. 91.

[b] "There must, at some time, be an end to litigation upon the same facts; and it has been well remarked that it appears inconsistent that the authority of a res judicata should govern the court, when the matter is referred to them by pleading, but that a jury should be at liberty altogether to disregard it when it referred to them in evidence." Chamberlain v. Carlisle, 26 N. H. 540.

28. "A former decree may be good as a plea in bar, or may be available as evidence. It was said in the Duchess or on a stipulation that proceedings had been brought and a judgment rendered<sup>28</sup> is conclusive though not pleaded. In some jurisdictions, however, a former adjudication does not operate as a conclusive estoppel, unless it has been pleaded as such (if there has been an opportunity to plead it) but is merely prima facie or persuasive evidence of the matters adjudged.<sup>30</sup>

b. Judicial Notice.—Generally a court may not judicially notice without pleading or proof, its proceedings or judgment in other wholly independent cases before it,<sup>31</sup> but this rule is not strictly adhered to under all circumstances and in all jurisdictions,<sup>32</sup> and in case of apparent necessity or otherwise courts have judicially noticed a former adjudication for the benefit of a party who neither pleaded nor proved it,<sup>33</sup> as where both cases were pending before it and under submission at the same time.<sup>34</sup> Adjudications which are part of the case at bar will, of course, be judicially noticed.<sup>35</sup> of Kingston's Case, 11 State Tr. 261, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. (6th Amer. ed.) 663, that such decree is 'as a plea, a bar, or as evidence conclusive.' . . . It is certainly true that, without respect to pleading, wherever a former recovery is properly in evidence—as here it was by agreement of the parties—full effect should be given to it, so far as it bears upon the issue presented. The issue here being novelty of invention, and that fact having been determined by the prior adjudication, the former decree becomes conclusive evidence of the validity of the patent as between the parties affected by such prior adjudication." [a] "When a judgment is not pleaded, and could have been pleaded,

'in evidence,' such a judgment is not conclusive to estop a party from proving the truth of a fact in dispute. To this extent the rule laid down in the case of the Duchess of Kingston, 20 Howell's State Trials 355, has been modified." Meiss v. Gill, 44 Ohio St. 253, 6 N. E. 656.

2. Manner of Pleading. — a. Character of the Pleading. — (I.)

Generally. — Where specially pleaded an estoppel by a former adjudication is properly set up by way of a special plea or answer.<sup>36</sup> As heretofore shown, however, in some jurisdictions or under some circumstances, a former adjudication is provable under the general issue;<sup>37</sup> but even where this practice prevails it is not improper to plead the defence specially, in connection with the general issue, unless the special plea amounts to no more than the general issue,<sup>38</sup> or it may be incorporated in the notice attached to the general issue.<sup>39</sup> It is improper to plead res judicata in abatement.<sup>40</sup>

In equity practice the defense of res judicata or former adjudication may be raised either by answer or plea,<sup>41</sup> though more properly by plea.<sup>42</sup>

(II.) Pleading by Amended or Supplemental Pleadings. — An amendment setting up the plea of res judicata is properly allowed.<sup>43</sup>

[a] Where the special plea is for some reason, defective, evidence of the former adjudication may be received under the general issue. Whitaker v. Bramson, 2 Paine 209, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,526, p. 947.

[b] "The defendant had the right to elect whether he would make defense under the special plea or submit the case on the general issue," and a refusal to allow a special plea in connection with the general issue is reversible error. Brown v. Cook (W. Va.), 87 S. E. 454.

[c] In Virginia although a statute provides that in ejectment the defendant shall plead the general issue only, a special plea of a judgment in bar may still be made. Elk Garden Co. v. T. W. Thayer Co., 206 Fed. 212.

39. Where the plea is the general issue "with leave to give in defense any matter that can be well pleaded," the defense of res judicata is available. C. H. Austin & Sons v. Hunter (Ala.), 69 So. 113.

Kentucky C. & T. Dev. Co.* (Del. Ch.), 97 Atl. 617, 619.

Supplemental Pleadings.—Where the judgment relied on as an estoppel is rendered and becomes final after the institution of the action in which it is sought to be used, it should be set up in a supplemental pleading,<sup>44</sup> rather than by an amendment,<sup>45</sup> or by a plea of puis d'arrien continuance,<sup>46</sup> and at such times as will not prejudice the rights of the other party to a speedy determination of the cause.<sup>47</sup> The former adjudication may be set up as a bar even after an interlocutory decree has been entered in the case.<sup>48</sup> be set forth, since it is insufficient for the pleader to give merely his conclusion as to its legal effect.<sup>70</sup>

The date on which the former judgment was rendered should be given,<sup>69</sup> though this is not always considered to be necessary, at least in the absence of an objection to the uncertainty<sup>71</sup> of some issue rendering the date important or essential.<sup>72</sup> The plea of res judicata is not waived by independent affirmative allegations of the facts adjudicated in the previous action,<sup>73</sup> and a separate plea of setoff does not affect it,<sup>73</sup> nor is the defense of an estoppel by former judgment, specially pleaded, waived by the interposing of a separate plea to the merits of the case.<sup>74</sup>

(II.) Jurisdiction of the Court. — (A.) In General. — The jurisdiction of the court by which the former judgment was given must be shown by the pleadings,<sup>75</sup> but since there is a presumption that a court of general jurisdiction properly acquired and exercised jurisdiction over both the parties and the subject matter, it is not necessary to set forth

[a] "We think its failure to state the time when the judgment was obtained, rendered it substantially defective. In pleading a judgment, either the term of the court at which it was recovered, or the exact date of its rendition, should always be stated, and when taken in vacation, as this one was, the time of its entry by the clerk should be stated. (Freeman on Judgments, sec. 450.) If such be the general rule, it should certainly be applied with more stringency in cases like the present where the judgment is obtained after the commencement of the suit." Mount v. Scholes, 120 Ill. 394, 11 N. E. 401.

[a] An allegation that due and legal notice of the time and place of such hearing was given in the manner provided by law, and said administrator caused said citation in full to be thereafter published for six consecutive weeks, etc., was not an attempt to set out the manner of service but only to recite due and legal service and therefore did not disclose a want of jurisdiction in the court. *Nolan v. As to the application of such statutes in actions on judgments, see the title "Judgments and Decrees, Enforcement of."

85. Hunt v. Dutcher, 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 538.

[a] "Words to the same effect and substance must be used. . . . To say that a judgment is entered, is merely to allege the single fact of the entry of the judgment, without including an averment that it was properly or lawfully done. All this is embraced in the language of the code, that the judgment was 'duly given or made.' The word entered, or perfected, may be equivalent to the word made, or given; but the word duly is most essential. It can hardly be dispensed with and satisfy the terms of the statute. I can imagine no single word that will supply its place." Hunt v. Dutcher, 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 538.

[b] Duly Rendered.—"Where the party resorts to this general mode of pleading, he must use, if not the precise language of the statute, at least that which has the same signification. The answer in this case avers that proceedings were had before a justice, which were terminated by a 'judgment being duly rendered,' etc. We think this language equivalent to that of the

it is not necessary that the precise language of the statute should be used.<sup>86</sup> It is necessary, however, even under such a statute, to either allege the facts conferring jurisdiction or to substantially adopt the statutory form.<sup>87</sup>

(III.) Identity of Parties.—A pleading of a former judgment which fails to show that the former action was between the same parties or their privies, is insufficient.<sup>88</sup> Identity of parties is ordinarily presumed from an identity of names.<sup>89</sup> Where the parties are nominally different and privity between a party to the pending action and a party to the former adjudication is relied on, the nature of the relations between the parties must be set forth.<sup>90</sup> If the judgment in the prior statute." Roys v. Lull, 9 Wis. 324. But see contra, Young v. Wright, 52 Cal. 407.

[c] An averment that "judgment was rendered" is insufficient. Kriste v. Int. Sav. & Exch. Bank, 17 Cal. App. 301, 119 Pac. 666.

[d] But an allegation that an ordinance "was adjudged void," was held sufficient in Waldron v. Snohomish, 41 Wash. 566, 83 Pac. 1106.

[e] "The word 'duly,' when used, does not refer to the regularity of the judgment, or its freedom from error, for that cannot be collaterally called in question, but it is equivalent to an allegation of facts showing jurisdiction. The allegation that the judgment was rendered in an action pending is to the same effect, and is sufficient." Scanlan v. Murphy, 51 Minn. 536, 53 N. W. 799.

[f] "The pleader in this instance uses the phrase 'duly adjudged,' and he also avers that the judgment was rendered 'in due form of law.' These phrases fully cover the statutory language" [of "duly given or made"]. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. People, 44 Colo. 557, 98 Pac. 828.

[g] Allegation that a judgment was recovered and was "duly docketed" is "equivalent to stating that such judgment had been 'duly given or made.'" Pierstoff v. Jorge, 86 Wis. 128, 56 N. W. 735.

[h] Franchise Granted.—In Gurnsey v. Northern California Power Co., 7 Cal. App. 534, 94 Pac. 858, an allegation that "after the requirements of law had been duly complied with" the board of supervisors "granted" a franchise was held sufficient. "The word 'grant' is synonymous with 'give' (Webster's Dictionary), and we can see no substantial difference between 'duly given' and given 'after the requirements of law had been duly complied with.'"

[i] Judgment Obtained.—"This averment [that judgment was duly rendered] is not formally made in the petition here, but the fact may be fairly inferred from the statements therein that the judgment of the justice was duly and regularly obtained." State ex re. Dillard v. Johnson, 78 Mo. App. 569.

[a] In an action against the indorser of a promissory note, an averment that judgment had been rendered thereon is insufficient; "In construing action was obtained against a party under a different name, that fact must be alleged.<sup>91</sup> Where the party sought to be bound was not a party of record but it is claimed that he was connected with a party and participated in the action, the facts must be stated with particular clearness and definiteness,<sup>92</sup> though a direct allegation of participation in the former action is unnecessary.<sup>93</sup>

a pleading, the rule is that it must be taken most strongly against the pleader. . . . As to who the judgment was against the answer is silent. It may have been against the makers of the note alone, or even one of them, and still the answer be true. The want of an averment that the indorser was a party to the judgment compels the inference that he was not." Gibson v. Parlin, 12 Neb. 292, 13 N. W. 405.

[b] Party relying on the judgment must allege his privity with the parties of record: "The rule is elementary that the party asserting an estoppel by means of a former judgment, must allege facts which show his relation to the former action was such as to make the judgment therein conclusive in his favor." Spargur v. Romine, 38 Neb. 736, 57 N. W. 523.

[c] Assignment.—Where a previous action by plaintiff's assignee is relied upon by defendant, an averment is insufficient which states that the plaintiff in that action sued as assignee, since it fails to state that he was in fact the assignee of the present plaintiff. Cheney v. Patton, 134 Ill. 422, 25 N. E. 792. And see Brandt v. Albers, 6 Neb. 504.

[d] An allegation that the plaintiff is an assignee of an agent of the owner of bonds sued on, such owner having been plaintiff in a former action, is sufficient without expressly alleging that the assignment was made with the owner's knowledge and consent, these facts appearing inferentially. Abilene v. Cornell University, 118 Fed. 379, 55 C. C. A. 205.

91. Walker v. Ogden, 192 Ill. 314, 61 N. E. 403, where the person was in fact an "unknown owner" as described in the former action.

92. King v. Bender, 116 Fed. 813.

[a] "The pleas aver merely that the plaintiff 'appeared in court' on the trial of the former suit, [which was brought against his servant for a trespass] and this is the only connection which he is alleged to have had with that suit. We think that this averment of an appearance in court is not sufficiently definite to show that the plaintiff had any connection with the suit or took any part in the proceedings on the trial. The pleas should show not only that the plaintiff 'appeared in court,' but that he also defended the suit, or took upon himself the burden of its defense, either upon his voluntary appearance, or after being cited by the defendant in the suit to appear and make defense to it. The pleas do not show that the plaintiff took any part in conducting the defense, and the averment that he 'appeared in court' would be supported by proof that he appeared as a witness or spectator, as much as by proof that he appeared in any other character." Goodrich v. Judevine, 40 Vt. 190.

[b] In an action by a church it was pleaded that in a former action the "rector, wardens, and vestry-men, . . . or some of them," participated in the action. This was held insufficient: "It may be that the rector or some one not having authority to represent the plaintiff in its corporate capacity, was present as a participant in the trial. If the church is bound by the result of that action by reason of the fact that it was represented in its defense, it must appear that it was represented by those having authority to do so." St. John's Episcopal Church v. Berg (Miss.), 2 So. 254.

93. "It is not necessary for the complainant to allege in direct terms that the respondent had such control over the former action as to be bound by the proceedings had therein, but he is required to state such facts as will enable the court to determine whether, if true, he is so bound. Theller v. Hershey, 89 Fed. 575.

that the judgment was rendered on the same cause of action,<sup>94</sup> and that the same property or subject matter was involved,<sup>95</sup> but where the judgment is pleaded as res judicata of certain issues it is sufficient to show that these same issues were adjudicated in a former suit.<sup>96</sup> The identity of such issues must, however, be shown,<sup>97</sup> and particular-

[b] Statutory Form.—“The form of the plea of res adjudicata, as provided by the Code, Art. 75, sec. 23, subsec. 54, contains the allegation ‘that said judgment was rendered in the same cause of action mentioned in the plaintiff’s declaration,’ etc. The appellant’s plea contains no such averment, nor its equivalent. The averment made is that the former case was an action of ejectment between the same parties ‘to recover the same land claimed in the declaration in this case.’ But nothing is set forth as to the extent of the plaintiff’s claim in the former case; whether it was a claim of title in fee, for life, or for years; or whether the claim was for a term that has since expired.” Brooke v. Gregg, 89 Md. 234, 43 Atl. 38.

[c] But that the former action was the same need not be shown by the plea. Johnson v. Knudson-Mercer Co. (Ind.), 79 N. E. 367, “it is enough to show that the particular controversy was in issue and judicially determined between the same parties.”

[d] That the proceedings were taken for the same purpose, must be alleged. Morton v. Harrison, 111 Md. 536, 75 Atl. 337.

[e] Failure to allege identity of the causes of action becomes immaterial where the former judgment is introduced in evidence by consent and from it, the identity appears. Montrose v. Wanamaker, 134 N. Y. 590, 31 N. E. 252.

Layton v. Lawson, 4 Boyce (Del.) 143, 86 Atl. 520.

[a] "The plaintiff claims in support of his demurrer to the portion of the answer quoted that it is insufficient because it does not set forth in detail the facts that were alleged in the complaint in the first action, so that the court may decide by comparison whether the facts claimed in the two actions were the same; that the allegation of the answer to the effect that the facts in the two cases were identical is a conclusion, and not an allegation of fact. The claim is without merit, for the answer alleges the ultimate facts to be proven on the trial, viz., that the facts set forth in the complaint in this action are the same facts alleged in the complaint in the former action, in which there was a judgment on the merits dismissing the action. These ultimate facts constituting the former adjudication are properly alleged, in form and substance, in the answer." Whitcomb v. Hardy, 68 Minn. 265, 71 N. W. 263.

[b] Allegation that in the prior action "the identical claims of the said defendant Parkhurst against the defendant [plaintiff] Rynearson, were tried and determined by said court, and all matters of difference between them fully tried and adjudicated," is sufficient. Rynearson v. Parkhurst, 88 Ind. 264.

[c] "In pleading a former adjudication at law, it is convenient and sufficient to say that the cause of action was the same or identical with that set forth in the complaint in the new action, or with some branch or feature of the case made in the bill if it be a suit in equity and the plea is only to a part of the bill, as often happens. . . . In 3 Chitty Pl. 928, a precedent is given of a plea of a former judgment, in which it is simply stated that the plaintiff impleaded the defendant in a certain term, before a certain court, in a certain plea of trespass on the case on promises 'for the not performing the very same identical promises and undertakings in the said declaration mentioned,' upon which the plaintiff had judgment." Wythe v. Salem, 4 Sawy. 88, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,121.

[a] Scope of Former Adjudication. Where it is claimed that matters not involved in the pleadings in the former action were in fact litigated, this fact must be shown by the party claiming the benefit thereof. Silberstein v. Silberstein, 218 N. Y. 525, 113 N. E. 495.

[b] Jurisdiction.—Where by statute it is sufficient to allege that a judgment was duly given or made by a court of inferior jurisdiction, if such an allegation is denied, the pleader must prove the existence of the jurisdictional elements. Miller v. Miller, 47 Mont. 150, 131 Pac. 23.

[a] An entry on the minutes of the court, setting aside a judgment cannot be received as evidence against the record of the judgment. "A record imports verity, and can only be tried by itself. The vacatur ought to be enrolled, or entered of record, as much as the rule for judgment." Croswell v. Byrnes, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 287.

[b] "The rule as laid down in treatises upon evidence is, that when the existence of a record of a court is put in issue on the plea of nul tiel record in proceedings of the same court, it should be proved by the production of the record itself, . . . and that when the record denied by the issue is of another court, it is to be proved by the production of an exemplification of it." Boteler v. State, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 359.

[a] "In making good the defense of res judicata, the evidence must necessarily vary with the nature of the issues presented in the first trial. Sometimes the record makes full proof of the subject-matter both of the suit and the defense, as it does of the judgment pronounced. In others, the identity and scope of the contestation do not appear on the face of the papers. When such is the case, other sources of information must be resorted to. If necessary, it is permissible to prove what testimony was given on the former trial, and the rulings of the court, as a means, and the only means of showing precisely what issues and inquiries of fact had been submitted to the trying body. This, with the view, and solely with the view, of determining the identity of the two contentions." Haas v. Taylor, 80 Ala. 459.

[a] "Under the common-law system, the pleadings being more accurate and precise than at the present day, and having as their object to reduce the controversy to a single issue, there was but little difficulty in determining the question adjudicated, and the rule prevailed of trying the plea of estoppel by former judgment by an inspection of the record alone; . . . but as, under the modern system of pleadings, records are sometimes vague and uncertain, this rule has been modified, but not to the extent of destroying the integrity and conclusiveness of the judgment as to matters that do appear on the record." *Cropsey v. [a] "If the phraseology in which the judgment is narrated in the plea is to be taken as descriptive of the divergences between the two will be disregarded.<sup>48</sup> The judgment sought to be introduced in evidence must be between the same parties as the judgment pleaded, unless privity of relationship is properly alleged in the plea.<sup>49</sup> A variance between the judgment pleaded and that proved must be taken advantage of when the evidence is offered;<sup>50</sup> it cannot be first questioned on appeal.<sup>51</sup>

d. Province of Court and Jury.<sup>52</sup>—Broadly speaking, a plea of estoppel by a former judgment presents an issuable fact to be left to the determination of the jury.<sup>53</sup> But if the issue is to be determined solely from the record evidence, it is for the court.<sup>54</sup> The question of record evidencing such judgment, no departure from it in the proofs can be allowed. A record described as determining the rights of the party by the consideration and judgment of the court, and the conviction of the defendant, would not be identical with one directing the same results, but in a different way. . . . The current of the cases, and the principles on which they rest, clearly tend to show that all the particulars set forth in pleading, descriptive of the record or instrument on which the party relies, must be established by his proof, or the variance will be fatal. . . . As his [the defendant's] plea makes various allegations prout patel, or as contained upon the record, it is manifest that it assumes to describe the precise contents, so as to identify the record on which the defendant relies. The record produced not comporting with this description, the variance is fatal." Whitaker v. Bramson, 2 Paine 209, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,526.

the proper construction of the terms of a prior judgment,<sup>55</sup> or its effect,<sup>56</sup> is also for the court. In the United States.—While judgments of the courts of sister states of the federal union are sometimes designated as foreign judgments,<sup>70</sup> strictly speaking, they are not foreign judgments in the same sense as a judgment of a foreign country is,<sup>71</sup> for in some respects, they are put upon the same footing as domestic judgments by the operation of the "full faith and credit" clause of the federal constitution.<sup>72</sup> But for such constitutional provision, however, it has been held that the judgments rendered by the courts of the different states would be foreign judgments in a court of any of the sister states.<sup>73</sup> State court judg-

[a] Before the ratification of the confederation of the United States, all the courts of the several provinces, colonies or states were at common law deemed to be foreign to each other and judgments rendered by any one of them were considered by the others as foreign judgments. The confederation recognized the doctrine of full faith

R. JUDGMENTS OF SISTER STATES.<sup>76</sup> — 1. Basis of Recognition. Judgments and decrees of sister states are, independently of constitutional and statutory provisions declaring their effect, entitled to recognition under the well recognized rule of comity.<sup>77</sup> This rule of comity has, however, been strengthened and enlarged and the law upon the subject made definite and fixed by the full faith and credit clause of the federal constitution and the act of congress passed in furtherance thereof.<sup>78</sup> Statutes of similar import exist in some states, giving to the judicial record of a sister state the same effect as is given to it in the state where made.<sup>79</sup>

[a] The conflicting rulings based on comity induced positive legislation upon the subject. "At first," says the court in Lieber v. Lieber, 239 Mo. 1, 143 S. W. 458, "this general rule was founded upon comity alone, between the various states, and then other countries, without any fixed and definite law upon the subject, and consequently so variant and conflicting became the rulings of the courts of the various states and other countries upon the subject that the people of this country undertook to remedy that great evil and establish a uniform rule upon the subject by adopting section 1 of art. 4 of the constitution of the United States."

78. Section 1, art. 4, of the constitution of the United States provides: "Full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other state. And the congress may by general laws prescribe the manner in which such acts, records and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof." In compliance with that mandate, the congress in 1790 enacted what is now section 905, U. S. Revised Statutes, as follows: "The records and judicial proceedings of the courts of any state, . . . shall be proved or admitted in any other court within the United States, by the attestation of the clerk, and the seal of the court annexed, . . . together with a certificate of the judge, chief justice, or presiding magistrate, that the said attestation is in due form." As to the interpretation and application of this act of congress, see 10 ENCY. OF EV. 1005, 1015, et seq., and supplement thereto.

[a] Nature of the Provision.—The full faith and credit clause of the organic law of the United States and the act of congress passed in conformity therewith serve to establish a rule of evidence, rather than to fix a criterion of jurisdiction. De Vall v. De Vall, 57 Ore. 128, 109 Pac. 755. And see Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co., 127 U. S. 265, 8 Sup. Ct. 1370, 32 L. ed. 239.

As a result of these constitutional and statutory provisions, the judgment of a sister state is put upon the same basis practically as a domestic judgment,<sup>81</sup> and is entitled, when sued on, pleaded, or introduced in evidence, in another state, to full faith and credit.<sup>82</sup>

[a] Prior to the decision in Mills v. Duryee, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 481, 3 L. ed. 411, many states extended no greater credit to a judgment of a sister state than if it were rendered in a foreign country. The constitutional provision and act of congress in question were interpreted as merely designating the method of getting judgments of other states in evidence. [a] A liberal policy should be followed in dealing with judgments of other states. "Unless the public acts and judicial proceedings of one state invade the sovereignty of another, the courts of a sister state should not be astute to find or search for an excuse to deny that full faith and credit which they have required in the federal constitution, but each state should recognize and enforce the public acts and judgments of a sister state when not coming clearly within one or more of the exceptions." *Interstate Savings & Trust Co. v. [a] Gambling Transaction.—A judgment of a Missouri court allowing recovery upon a transaction in Mississippi expressly prohibited by a statute of that state as a gambling transaction, is entitled to full faith and credit in Mississippi notwithstanding the prohibitory statute, which should have been applied by the Missouri court. *Fauntleroy v. [c] Bastardy.—Though statutes imposing a penalty for failure to support a bastard child are local police regulations, and entitled to no extraterritorial force, a judgment recovered for such penalty has been accorded due recognition in another state under the full faith and credit clause. State v. Helmer, 21 Iowa 370.

[b] In determining whether statutes are penal, so as to deprive judgments enforcing them of extraterritorial effect, the judicial decisions of the state enacting such statutes, construing them will be considered. Interstate Savings & Trust Co. v. Wyatt, 27 Colo. App. 217, 147 Pac. 444.

[c] “The test is not by what name the statute is called by the legislature or the courts of the state in which it was passed, but whether it appears to the tribunal which is called upon to enforce it to be, in its essential character and effect, a punishment of an offense against the public, or a grant of a civil right to a private person.” Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 13 Sup. Ct. 224, 36 L. ed. 1123.

[a] Usury.—A judgment recovered by a private citizen for double the dial will be enforced, even though no such penalty exists in the forum.<sup>94</sup>

3. Operation and Effect. — a. Generally. — Within the limitations herein stated,<sup>95</sup> the same force and effect will be given to the judgment of another state as is accorded to it in the jurisdiction where rendered.<sup>96</sup>

b. By What Court Determined. — The court in which the judgment is pleaded or proved, rather than the court in which it was rendered, amount of usurious interest paid is entitled to full faith and credit when the law imposing the penalty is not penal in an international sense. "The statutes of Texas provide no other way to insure obedience to its usury law; and the taking of interest, more than the rate prescribed, is not denominated a crime or misdemeanor, nor is any fine imposed for its violation, nor is there any provision permitting the state to recover anything itself by reason of the law; hence it is in no sense a criminal law, nor strictly penal, in an interstate sense." *Interstate Savings & Trust Co. v. Under the foregoing rules, a judgment recovered in another state merges the cause of action sued on, and is a bar to an action on any claims or items, which either were or might and should have been, adjudicated therein,<sup>10</sup> and is conclusive of all defenses which actually were, or might and should have been set up therein.<sup>11</sup> But such judgment is not conclusive of a counterclaim or set-off which by the laws of that state the defendant was not required to set up in such action,<sup>12</sup> nor does a judgment in a proceeding in rem in one state bar an action in personam<sup>13</sup> or against other property<sup>14</sup> in another state, upon the same obligation for any part of the indebtedness not satisfied by the previous proceedings.

A judgment on the merits against the plaintiff in one state, will bar another action against the same defendant on the same cause of action in another state.<sup>15</sup>

Judgment on Judgment. — The cases are in conflict as to whether the unsatisfied judgment rendered in an action on a judgment previously obtained in another state merges the latter so as to bar an action thereon, or prevent the enforcement thereof in the state where it was rendered. On the ground that the two securities or indebtedness are of equal degree, some courts hold that there is no merger in such case.<sup>17</sup> The contrary view proceeds upon the ground that the allowance of a new suit would entail a vexatious encouragement of litigation.<sup>18</sup> But it has been held that an action may be brought in the state of the rendition of the first judgment on the foreign judgment recovered on the first.<sup>19</sup>

(II.) Defendants Non-Resident or Not Served.—(A.) IN GENERAL. A judgment in personam against a non-resident without actual service or voluntary appearance but based on constructive service by publication will not be given force and credit in the courts of another state,<sup>20</sup> but this does not prevent due recognition being given to a

But this reason does not exist where there has been a recovery in another state in debt upon a judgment rendered here. For one judgment being of as high a nature as another, a judgment in another state, cannot extinguish or determine a judgment rendered here." Weeks v. Pearson, 5 N. H. 324.

(C.) FOREIGN CORPORATION. — A judgment against a foreign corporation doing business in the state based on service of process on an agent appointed to receive service is accorded recognition in another state.<sup>27</sup>

e. Extraterritorial Effect on Property. — The full faith and credit clause does not extend the jurisdiction of the courts of one state to property situated in another but only makes the judgment conclusive on the merits of the claim or subject-matter of the suit. A decree as to the title to land located in another state will not be recognized beyond the jurisdiction in so far as it attempts to directly affect the title,<sup>28</sup> nor will a deed executed by an officer of the court pursuant to such a decree, be recognized.<sup>29</sup> The court, however, acting in personam

[a] "The territorial limitation of the jurisdiction of courts of a State over property in another State has a limited exception in the jurisdiction of a court of equity, but it is an exception well defined. A court of equity having authority to act upon the person may indirectly act upon real estate in another State, through the instrumentality of this authority over the person. Whatever it may do through the party it may do to give effect to its decree respecting property, whether it goes to the entire disposition of it or only to effect it with liens or burdens. . . . In French, Trustee v. Hay, 22 Wall. 250, 252, this court said that a court of equity having jurisdiction in personam has power to require a defendant 'to do or to refrain from doing anything beyond the limits of its territorial jurisdiction which it might have required to be done or omitted within the limits of such territory.' ity to thus enter the judgment is strictly pursued.<sup>39</sup>

g. Method of Enforcement of Judgment.—Since the sister state judgment does not operate directly upon property of the forum, it is not there enforceable by means of process upon the judgment itself,<sup>40</sup> nor generally by a creditor's bill.<sup>41</sup> Its benefits can be secured only by using it as the basis of an action,<sup>42</sup> or a defense, or as evidence upon some issue to which it is relevant.<sup>43</sup>

670, it was held that a power to confess judgment given to "any attorney of any court of record" was not authority to a prothonotary in Pennsylvania to enter such confession, which would be recognized outside Pennsylvania, although authorized by the laws of that state.

[c] The instrument must clearly show the sum to be confessed. As was said in Central Pennsylvania Conference Educational Society v. La Rue, 164 Mo. App. 93, 148 S. W. 152: "While a prothonotary in a foreign state may enter a judgment as by confession, when duly authorized in the writing evidencing the defendant's debt, and such judgment will be given full faith and credit in a suit upon it in this state (Randolph v. Keiler, 21 Mo. 557; Crim v. Crim, 162 Mo. 544, 63 S. W. 489, 54 L. R. A. 502, 85 Am. St. Rep. 521), yet, if the duty of the prothonotary cannot be ascertained from the provisions of the obligatory paper, and the precise sum for which judgment should be rendered cannot be ascertained from the paper, and an inquiry aliunde the paper is required, it must pass under judicial scrutiny and direction and cannot be acted upon by the prothonotary."

[d] Affidavit Wanting or Defective. As between the parties a confession of judgment without affidavit or upon defective affidavit is good and will be enforced in another state. Irose v. Balla, 181 Ind. 491, 104 N. E. 851.

h. Equitable Relief Against. — A ground of equitable relief against a judgment available where the judgment is rendered is available in another state,<sup>44</sup> providing the courts of the latter state are not wanting in jurisdiction to enforce the particular remedy.<sup>45</sup> Thus if fraud in procuring the judgment authorizes the courts of the sister state to restrain its enforcement, it will likewise be restrained in the courts of the state where it is sought to be enforced.<sup>46</sup>

4. Impeachment of Judgment. — a. Grounds in General. — The grounds upon which judgments may be impeached, have been elsewhere discussed with respect to judgments generally,<sup>47</sup> and these grounds, with some limitations, as will hereafter appear, are equally available in case of judgments of sister states.

b. Jurisdictional Inquiries. — (I.) Generally. — The requirement that full faith and credit be given to a judgment of a sister state does not preclude an inquiry into the jurisdiction of the court rendering the same. It is always permissible to impeach the judgment by showing that the court in which it was recovered had no jurisdiction of the parties or the subject-matter or, when it assumes the character of an action or proceeding in rem, that jurisdiction of the res was

[a] Preventing a Meritorious Defense. — Fraudulent conduct of plaintiff in violation of an agreement to dismiss the suit, whereby the defendant was deprived of a meritorious defense, if ground for restraining the enforcement of the judgment in the state where rendered, will justify the courts of a different state in restraining it. Babcock v. Marshall, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 145, 50 S. W. 728. Upon this subject the court in this case said: "Now, it is clear that the judgments of a sister state are entitled to no more respect or credit than is given to the domestic judgments of the state where they are afterwards sought to be enforced, and, as said in the opinion quoted, they do not carry with them the rights that flow from domestic judgments. Equity acts upon the person; and where the owner of a domestic judgment, which was obtained by fraud in the courts of this state, seeks to enforce it, they will, in a proper case, where the complainant has not been guilty of laches, interpose their remedial relief by injunction, and restrain the person guilty of the fraud from consummating his wrong. And in cases of this character, it is upon the person of the wrongdoer that equity fastens its restraining power; and, if the courts of this state have the power—which they undoubtedly have — to restrain the fraudulent owner of a domestic judgment from enforcing it, a like power could be exercised to restrain one who comes into the courts of this state, and seeks to enforce the judgment of another state."

[a] A decree of divorce may be impeached collaterally in the courts of another state when it appears that the party obtaining the divorce was not domiciled in the state wherein he instituted the proceedings and this notwithstanding any record recitals of jurisdiction. German Sav. & L. Soc. v. Dormitzer, 192 U. S. 125, 24 Sup. Ct. 221, 48 L. ed. 373.

[b] In the leading case upon this subject, Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897, the court said that if it once be conceded that "the validity of a judgment may be attacked collaterally by evidence showing that the court had no jurisdiction, it is not perceived how any allegation contained in the record itself, however strongly made, can affect the right so to question it. The very object of the evidence is to invalidate the paper as a record. If that can be successfully done no statements contained therein have any force. If any such statements could be used to prevent inquiry, a slight form of words might always be adopted so as effectually to nullify the right of such inquiry. Recitals of this kind must be regarded like asseverations of good faith in a deed, which avail nothing if the instrument is shown to be fraudulent."

[c] "A judgment of a court of record of another state differs in its conclusive effect from a judgment of a court of record of this state in one material respect, viz., that it is always open to the person against whom the judgment is attempted to be used to show by evidence other than the record of the judgment, and even by evidence opposed to recitals contained in such record, that the court purporting to give the judgment was without jurisdiction either of the cause or of the parties. If such lack of jurisdiction in one or the other of these respects is not made to appear, the judgment is as final and conclusive on collateral attack as would be a judgment of one of our own superior courts; but, if such lack of jurisdiction is made to appear, the judgment must be regarded as a nullity." In re Hancock's Est., 156 Cal. 804, 106 Pac. 58.

(B.) JUDGMENT RECITALS. — Recitals of jurisdictional facts in the judgment are not conclusive but are open to contradiction by any competent evidence.<sup>59</sup> Thus recitals of appearance whether in person or by attorney, may be overcome by extrinsic evidence showing no appearance to have in fact been made, or that the attorney assuming to appear did so without authority.<sup>60</sup>

(C.) ADJUDICATION OF JURISDICTION. — The court may have expressly passed upon its own jurisdiction, in which case its determination, like every other adjudication which it had jurisdiction to make, is res judicata and cannot be questioned in proceedings on the judgment in another state.<sup>61</sup> The foregoing statement applies, however, only to the effect that the defendant had a residence there and that he served the writ by leaving it at her last and usual place of abode, may be contradicted when it is sought to enforce the judgment in another state. Bryant v. Shute's Exr., 147 Ky. 268, 144 S. W. 28.

[a] In Sipe v. Copwell, 59 Fed. 970, 8 C. C. A. 419, where the defense was that the judgment was void because jurisdiction was obtained by service of process upon defendants thereto when they were in attendance upon the supreme court of Rhode Island as parties defendant to a suit then pending for trial it was said: "This presented an issue for adjudication. It was decided adversely to the contention then and now urged by appellants. The determination of that question was clearly within the jurisdiction of the Rhode Island court. Its solution depended upon the statute or where the facts found by the court would, if true, give it jurisdiction; for the court's determination that it has jurisdiction upon a state of facts which though true, would not confer jurisdiction is not entitled to any faith and credit in other courts.<sup>62</sup>

c. Fraud.—Fraud which would suffice to impeach a domestic judgment<sup>63</sup> may be successfully urged against the judgment when sought to be enforced in another state. It must be fraud practiced in the very procurement of the judgment depriving the court of jurisdiction to render the same,<sup>64</sup> and not fraud inherent in the cause of common law of that state. It decided that the Rhode Island statute, exempting witnesses from arrest or summons while in attendance as witnesses, did not apply to any other than witnesses. . . . Whether these questions were rightly or wrongly decided is a matter of no importance in the present aspect of the question. The court had jurisdiction to determine these issues. The soundness of the adjudication cannot be questioned in a collateral attack."

[b] In Tootle v. McClellan, 7 Ind. Ter. 64, 103 S. W. 766, the language was: "The finding of the Missouri court that the plaintiff had not fraudulently induced the defendant to enter its jurisdiction, or that he was not there for the purpose of taking depositions, or that he had had time to leave, or that, under the Missouri law, he was not entitled to an exemption because there voluntarily as a party, is a final adjudication of the whole question, and the only remedy left to the defendant was an appeal to the higher courts of Missouri."

[c] Where there is a dispute between the return of the sheriff showing a proper service and affidavits in opposition showing irregularity in the service, the decision of the court is binding and cannot again be litigated in an action on the judgment in another jurisdiction. Chinn v. Foster-Milburn Co., 195 Fed. 158.

[a] The term fraud in the procurement of a judgment includes all such facts and circumstances as would induce and enable the courts of equity or courts having jurisdiction of the matter in the state where the judgment was rendered to interfere to prevent the enforcement of an unconscionable recovery. Mottu v. Davis, 151 N. C. 237, 65 S. E. 969.

[b] Judgment Confessed on Paid Note.—Where the note upon which judgment was confessed by warrant of attorney had been paid by those who were jointly and severally bound to pay it, it was extinguished by payment as was also its incident, the warrant of attorney, which could not survive it. Consequently the proceedings which ended in the procurement of the judgment by confession were without authority and were a patent fraud action and which could be interposed as a defense.<sup>65</sup> Mere perjury is not sufficient.<sup>66</sup>

d. Errors and Irregularities.—Since the validity of the sister state judgment is, in general, tested by the laws of the jurisdiction where it is rendered, any inquiry into the question of how far irregularities in the procedure effect the binding force of the judgment would involve the same matter treated elsewhere in discussing collateral impeachment of judgments.<sup>67</sup> If, as there shown, mere errors and irregularities, not jurisdictional, do not invalidate the domestic judgment collaterally, no more will such errors and irregularities render the judgment subject to impeachment in a sister state.<sup>68</sup> Where, however, the irregularities are such that under the upon the defendant and the administration of justice. Hester v. Frink, 189 Mo. App. 40, 176 S. W. 481.

[c] In Malone v. Bocker, 82 Misc. 438, 143 N. Y. Supp. 1095, the defendant, in defense to a judgment confessed in accordance with power contained in a lease to appear and confess judgment, was permitted to show that he was induced to sign the lease by false representations that it did not contain such a provision. Malone v. Bocker, 82 Misc. 438, 143 N. Y. Supp. 1095.

[a] The illegality of the original law of the state whence it comes the alleged judgment would not be operative as such, it is not entitled to recognition elsewhere.<sup>69</sup>

5. Divorce Decrees.—a. Generally.—Domicil of one of the parties, presumably the plaintiff, within the state in which the decree is rendered, is generally held to be essential to jurisdiction to decree a divorce which will be given extraterritorial recognition. A divorce granted in a state where neither of the parties is domiciled, will not be enforced in another state,<sup>70</sup> even though valid in the state where procured.<sup>71</sup> However, a deserted wife may acquire a domicil in another state sufficient to give the courts of that state jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the divorce, within the meaning of the foregoing rule.<sup>72</sup> The protection of the full faith and credit clause of the con-cause of action upon which the judgment is based cannot be relied upon to defeat the judgment in another state. Fauntleroy v. Lum, 210 U. S. 230, 28 Sup. Ct. 641, 52 L. ed. 1039; Dunsmuir v. Scott, 217 Fed. 200, 133 C. C. A. 194.

[b] Gaming Transaction.—If the equity courts of the state where the judgment was rendered would not grant relief against it as having been based upon a gambling transaction, it must be accorded the same conclusive effect in other states. Mottu v. Davis, 151 N. C. 237, 65 S. E. 969.

[c] An erroneous construction of a statute or other law of one state by the courts of another affords no ground for denying its judgment faith and credit. Fauntleroy v. Lum, 210 U. S. 230, 28 Sup. Ct. 641, 52 L. ed. 1039; Roller v. Murray, 71 W. Va. 161, 76 S. E. 172.

[a] A decree obtained in Kentucky against a wife resident in New York with the consent of her husband is mination of the meaning of "matrimonial domicile" as here used, though it has been held by the United States supreme court that a husband who has never changed the domicile which he had when married may obtain a divorce against his deserting wife residing in another state, upon constructive service, which is entitled to full faith and credit in the latter state.<sup>78</sup> And other courts have held that the husband deserted by his wife may change the matrimonial domicile and obtain a decree of divorce binding everywhere, without personal service or appearance,<sup>79</sup> though a similar right has not been accorded the deserted wife.<sup>80</sup> And the rule is now definitely settled that mere domicile of one of the parties, as distinguished from matrimonial domicile, does not give the court jurisdiction, upon constructive service or upon personal service beyond the jurisdiction, to grant a divorce which will be entitled to any obligatory recognition in other states.<sup>81</sup> entitled to full faith and credit in New York, where it appears from the facts in the case that the matrimonial domicile was in Kentucky notwithstanding the residence of the wife in New York. Atherton v. Atherton, 181 U. S. 155, 21 Sup. Ct. 544, 45 L. ed. 794.

[a] "Where the domicile of the husband is in a particular state, and that state is also the domicile of matrimony, the courts of such state having jurisdiction over the husband may, in virtue of the duty of the wife to be at the matrimonial domicile, disregard an unjustifiable absence therefrom, and treat the wife as having her domicile in the state of the matrimonial domicile for the purpose of the dissolution of the marriage, and as a result have power to render a judgment dissolving the marriage which will be binding upon both parties, and will be entitled to recognition in all other states by virtue of the full faith and credit clause." Haddock v. Haddock, 201 U. S. 562, 571, 26 Sup. Ct. 525, 50 L. ed. 867.

[b] A husband who abandoned his wife in New York and acquired a domicile in Connecticut in good faith, obtained a divorce in the latter state upon constructive service. Such divorce, though enforceable perhaps in Connecticut, was not entitled to obligatory enforcement in other states by virtue of the full faith and credit clause. Haddock v. Haddock, 201 U. S. 562, 572, 26 Sup. Ct. 525, 50 L. ed. 867.

[c] Matrimonial Domicil Same as

Domicil of Innocent Party.—Referring to the Haddock case, the court says in Montmorency v. Montmorency (Tex. Civ. App.), 139 S. W. 1168, 1171: "The decision impresses us with the belief that the reasoning of that decision gives the court of the domicile of the innocent party jurisdiction to render a judgment binding everywhere, and deprives the court of the domicile of the guilty party of jurisdiction to render a judgment binding save in the state where rendered."

[d] "This matrimonial domicile may be distinct from the present domicile of both husband and wife. Presumptively it is identical with the domicile of the husband. But where the wife has acquired a separate domicile it is the place where they last lived together as husband and wife with the intent of making that place their fixed home." Callahan v. Callahan, 65 Misc. 172, 121 N. Y. Supp. 39.

80. Berney v. Adriance, 157 App. Div. 628, 142 N. Y. Supp. 748, where the wife, after having been abandoned by her husband in New York, went to South Dakota, and after residing there the jurisdictional period, obtained a divorce based upon service made upon the defendant in the state of New York. In an action for criminal conversation the New York court refused to recognize such divorce.

[a] By statute in Kansas the recognition of foreign divorce decrees based on substituted service is made obligatory. Laws 1907, p. 297, c. 184. Commenting upon this statute the court in McCormick v. McCormick, 82 Kan. 31, 107 Pac. 546, said: "It is perfectly clined to extend such decrees recognition at least in so far as the dissolution of the marriage status is involved.<sup>85</sup>

b. Impeachment for Want of Jurisdiction.—Inquiry may always be made into the jurisdiction of the court rendering the decree even to the extent of contradicting record recitals of jurisdictional facts.<sup>86</sup> clear that this statute was intended to make the recognition and enforcement of foreign divorce decrees based upon substituted service obligatory in this state. The option left by the decision in Haddock v. Haddock, to each state to give to such decrees within its own borders whatever efficacy they may be entitled to consistent with its public policy was exercised by the legislature, and such decrees were placed upon the same basis as the judgments of our own courts."

[a] Effect of Full Faith and Credit Clause.—In Sistare v. Sistare, 218 U. S. 1, 30 Sup. Ct. 682, 54 L. ed. 905, Chief Justice White sums up the authorities as follows: "First, that, generally speaking, where a decree is rendered for alimony and is made payable in future installments the right to such installments becomes absolute and vested upon becoming due, and is therefore protected by the full faith and credit clause, provided no modification of the decree has been made prior to the maturity of the installments, since, as declared in the Barber case, 'alimony decreed to a wife in a divorce of separation from bed and board is as much a debt of record, until the decree has been recalled, as any other judgment for money is.' Second, that this general rule, however, does not obtain where by the law of the state in which a judgment for future alimony is rendered the right to demand and receive such future alimony is discretionary with the court which rendered the decree, to such an extent that no absolute or vested right attaches to receive the installments ordered by the decree to be paid, even although no application to annul or modify the decree in respect to alimony had been made prior to the installments becoming due."

[b] Effect of Re-marriage.—Where the statute of a sister state provides that upon a new marriage being contracted by either of the parties, a new trial may be granted as to alimony, the original decree remains in full force, and as such has the protection of the full faith and credit clause. Taylor v. Stowe, 218 Mass. 248, 105 N. E. 208, 890; Bolton v. Bolton, 86 N. J. L. 622, 92 Atl. 389.

[c] The power to annul, vary or modify a judgment as to alimony given to the court by the statute of the state where rendered, confers no retroactive power to alter the judgment as to past-due installments, and the annulment, variation or modification can only affect installments which have not fallen due, and such decree as to past-due installments is entitled to faith and credit in other states. Bolton v. Bolton, 86 N. J. L. 622, 92 Atl. 389.

[d] Suit for Alimony Out of Real Estate in Forum.—An independent suit to recover alimony out of real estate of the husband situated in the forum, is not barred by a decree for alimony rendered in a sister state, when in rendering such decree the court could not without consent of the parties consider the extraterritorial real estate and such consent not having been given, a reasonable sum only was allowed, based upon the property owned by the husband, situated within the jurisdiction of the court. Bodie v. Bates, 95 Neb. 757, 146 N. W. 1002. And see Pinkley v. Pinkley, 155 Ky. 203, 159 S. W. 795.

c. Custody of Children.—A provision in a divorce decree establishing a right to the custody of a minor child will be given force and effect in another state.<sup>91</sup> But such award of custody is only conclusive as to facts and conditions before the court upon the rendition of the decree.<sup>92</sup> It is, therefore, not a bar to a proceeding in another state to modify it upon proof that the situation and character of the respective parties has so changed as to render it to the interest of the infant that it be committed to the care of the other party.<sup>93</sup>

[a] In Horn v. Lockhart, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 570, 21 L. ed. 657, Mr. Justice Field said: "We admit that the acts of the several states in their individual capacities, and of their different departments of government, executive, judicial and legislative, during the war, so far as they did not impair or tend to impair the supremacy of the national authority, or the just rights of citizens under the constitution, are, in general, to be treated as valid and binding. The existence of a state of insurrection and war did not loosen the bonds of society, or do away with civil government or the regular administration of the laws. Order was to be preserved, police regulations maintained, crime prosecuted, property protected, contracts enforced, marriages celebrated, estates settled, and the transfer and descent of property regulated precisely as in time of peace. No one, that we are aware of, seriously questions the validity of judicial or legislative acts in the insurrectionary states touching these and kindred subjects, where they were not hostile in their purpose or mode of enforcement to the authority of the national government, and did not impair the rights of citizens under the constitution."

[a] In Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565, it was said: "Whilst they" (the federal courts) "are not foreign tribunals in their relations to the state courts, they are tribunals of a different sovereignty, exercising a distinct and independent jurisdiction, and are bound to give to the judgments of the state courts only the same faith and credit which the courts of another state are bound to give to them."

[b] Where concurrent jurisdiction exists between the state courts and the federal courts, the judgment in the one is binding on the other. Reynolds v. Lyon County, 121 Iowa 733, 96 N. W. 1096.

[c] Law Involved.—This rule holds true whether the question determined was one of federal, general or local law. Sperry & Hutchinson Co. v. Blue, 202 Fed. 82, 120 C. C. A. 354.

[d] Judgment based on State Employers' Liability Act is conclusive on the federal courts. Mazzariello v. Doherty, 204 Fed. 245, 122 C. C. A. 513.

[e] No greater effect need be given to the state judgment when sued on in the federal courts than it enjoys in the state where rendered. Higgins v. Eaton, 188 Fed. 938.

[f] Bankruptcy.—A judgment of a state court against a bankrupt is conclusive on the federal courts unless want of jurisdiction, or fraud or collusion appears. In re Wenatchee-Stratford Orchard Co., 205 Fed. 964.

[a] In Indian Territory.—By Act May 2, 1890, c. 182, 26 St. at L. 96, the federal constitution was given "the same force and effect in the Indian Territory as elsewhere in the United States." The full faith and credit clause of the constitution, therefore, applies to the courts of the Indian Territory. Tootle v. McClellan, 7 Ind. Ter. 64, 103 S. W. 766.

on the merits, of every kind,<sup>3</sup> procured in the state courts are, therefore, generally conclusive in the federal courts, whether the question determined was one of federal, general or local law.<sup>4</sup> A judgment rendered in a state court will be given the same force and effect as

[b] A judgment (1) of dismissal when on the merits, is conclusive upon the federal court. Thus a judgment rendered on motion to dismiss because the complaint does not state a cause of action can be set up as res judicata to an action subsequently brought in the federal court. Coram v. Ingersoll, 148 Fed. 169, 78 C. C. A. 303; Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Benson, 128 Fed. 277, 63 C. C. A. 591; Haug v. Great Northern Railroad, 102 Fed. 74, 42 C. C. Pendleton*, 167 Fed. 997.

[c] A judgment of non suit is not a judgment on the merits and, therefore, the entry of such a judgment in a state court is no bar to another suit in the federal court on the same cause of action. Bixler v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 201 Fed. 553. See supra, XVII, B, 3, d, (II), (H).

[d] That (1) an appeal is pending in the United States supreme court from the judgment of the state court does not suspend its operation as an estoppel (Straus v. American Pub. Assn., 201 Fed. 306, 119 C. C. b. Jurisdictional Inquiries.—To be entitled to any force and effect in a state court, the judgment of the federal court must have been pronounced by a tribunal possessing jurisdiction. The fact that the federal court possessed jurisdiction, neither over the parties nor the subject-matter may always be shown, even though proper jurisdiction appears by the record.<sup>28</sup>

[a] Comity of Nations Defined. Comity in the legal sense, is neither a matter of absolute obligation on the one hand nor of mere courtesy and good will on the other, but it is the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive, or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience and to the rights of its own citizens, who are under the protection of its laws. *Hilton v. 2. Requisites of Judgment.—To receive any faith and credit in another country the foreign judgment must fulfill the same requirements as in the case of domestic judgments<sup>38</sup> or the judgments of sister states.<sup>39</sup> It must be a final disposition of the case,<sup>40</sup> must not be penal in its character, or in the nature of a domestic police regulation,<sup>41</sup>

[a] In Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 113, 16 Sup. Ct. 139, 40 L. ed. 95, it was said: "It appears, therefore, that there is hardly a civilized nation on either continent, which, by its general law, allows conclusive effect to an executory foreign judgment for the recovery of money. In France, and in a few smaller states—Norway, Portugal, Greece, Monaco, and Hayti—the merits of the controversy are reviewed, as of course, allowing to the foreign judgment, at the most, no more effect than of being prima facie evidence of the justice of the claim. In the great majority of the countries on the continent of Europe—in Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Germany, in many cantons of Switzerland, in Russia and Poland, in Roumania, in Austria and Hungary (perhaps in Italy), and in Spain—as well as in Egypt, in Mexico, and in a great part of South America, the judgment rendered in a foreign country is allowed the same effect only as the courts of that country allow to the judgments of the country in which the judgment in question is sought to be executed."

3. Direct Enforcement.—A foreign judgment has no executory force; its validity must first be passed upon by the courts of the country in which it is sought to be enforced. Until that time it does not form a lien upon defendant's real estate located in the forum.<sup>44</sup> The plaintiff cannot have execution on such judgment,<sup>45</sup> nor can a successful defendant have execution thereon for costs.<sup>46</sup>

4. Judgments in Personam.—The present tendency of American decisions is to apply the same principles of conclusiveness to personal judgments of foreign countries as to those of domestic tribunals and to regard such judgments as conclusive upon the merits when jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter exists and no invalidating fraud appears.<sup>47</sup> The courts of England are unquestionably com-daughter married in France cannot be prosecuted here upon a decree of the French court, requiring him and his wife to pay an annuity for the support of their son-in-law. The laws of France requiring such payment are local in their nature and operation. They are designed to regulate the domestic relations of those who reside there and to protect the public against pauperism, consequently they have no extraterritorial significance but must be executed upon persons and property within their jurisdiction. Such orders of the French tribunals are in this respect like orders of filiation and orders made under local statutes to guard against pauperism and in the nature of local police regulations and are not founded upon principles which, irrespective of local statutes, are of universal acceptance like judgments for a sum certain founded upon contracts or other recognized private rights. *De Brimont v. [a] As Basis of Action by Plaintiff. "At the time of the Revolution, it appears to have been understood, as the law of England, that a judgment offered as evidence of a debt, in an action by the plaintiff to obtain its fruit, was merely prima facie evidence, and examinable upon the merits. Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 113, 187, 16 Sup. Ct. 139, 40 L. ed. 95. This view was followed by the early American cases, among which is the case of Robinson v. Prescott, 4 N. The American cases, however, adopted in full the distinction made in Phillips v. Hunter, which, it is said by Story, 'has been very frequently recognized as having a just foundation in international justice,' upon the ground that where a defendant sets up a foreign judgment as a bar to the proceedings, 'if it has been pronounced by a competent tribunal, and carried into effect, the losing party has no right to institute a new suit elsewhere, and thus to bring the matter again into controversy; and the other party is not to lose the protection which the foreign judgment gave him. It is then res judicata, which ought to be received as conclusive evidence of right; and the exceptio rei judicatee under such circumstances is entitled to universal conclusiveness and respect.'" *MacDonald v. prima facie evidence of the matter which they decided and therefore an inquiry was permissible into the merits of the case. The principle of reciprocity would, of course, permit an examination into the merits of judgments rendered in countries such as France, whose courts treat our judgments in a like manner.<sup>54</sup> A judgment in personam in a court of a foreign country, while it constitutes a good cause of action in a domestic court, does not merge the original cause of action, or extinguish the original debt, and it is no bar to an action thereon in a domestic court unless it has been paid or satisfied.<sup>55</sup>

[a] "It has been said that 'all the American cases agree that, where a foreign judgment comes incidentally in question, it is conclusive' (Cummings v. Banks, 2 Barb. 602, 605); and that 'it is, an established rule that a foreign judgment, when used by way of defense, is as conclusive to every intent as those of our own courts' (Griswold v. Pitcairn, 2 Conn. 85, 92). 'Foreign judgments are never re-examined unless the aid of our courts is asked to carry them into effect by a direct suit upon the judgment. The foreign judgment is then held to be only prima facie evidence of the demand; but when it comes in collaterally, or the defendant relies upon it under the exceptio rei judicatae, it is then received as conclusive.' . . . Smith v. Lewis, 3 Johns. 157, 169, 3 Am. Dec. 469; Monroe v. Douglas, 4 Sand. Ch. 126, 181; Williams v. Preston, 3 J. J. Marsh. 600, 20 Am. Dec. 179. The only American case apparently questioning the conclusiveness of a foreign judgment when offered as a defense which has been discovered is Burnham v. Webster, 1 Woodb. & M. 172, Fed. Cas. No. 2,179. The general expressions used by the distinguished author of the opinion in this case, if carried out, would render a foreign judgment of little value, and would, it has been said, 'destroy the force and effect of judicial proceedings, and make the judgments of a foreign tribunal, no matter how high its rank, or how binding its decisions within its own jurisdiction, of little greater effect than the original contract or promise sued upon.'" *MacDonald v. showing that the court was not legally organized,<sup>66</sup> or that the judges thereof were for some reason disqualified.<sup>67</sup>

b. Jurisdictional Inquiries.—(I.) Generally.—No rule of comity requires that effect be given to a judgment of a foreign court, whether in rem<sup>68</sup> or in personam,<sup>69</sup> when jurisdiction to render the same was wanting. It is always permissible for the party assailing the judgment to show by any competent evidence, even in contradiction of the record, that jurisdiction of the subject-matter was wanting, or that no jurisdiction of the person was acquired by domicile, service of process, or voluntary appearance.<sup>70</sup>

after due citation or voluntary appearance of the defendant, and under a system of jurisprudence likely to secure an impartial administration of justice between the citizens of its own country and those of other countries, and there is nothing to show either prejudice in the court, or in the system of laws under which it was sitting, or fraud in procuring the judgment, or any other special reason why the comity of this nation should not allow it full effect, the merits of the case should not, in an action brought in this country upon the judgment, be tried afresh, as on a new trial or an appeal, upon the mere assertion of the party that the judgment was erroneous in law or in fact. The defendants, therefore, cannot be permitted, upon that general ground, to contest the validity or the effect of the judgment sued on." Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 113, 16 Sup. (II.) Presumptions as to Jurisdiction.—Judgments of foreign countries are upheld by the same presumptions that attach to those of domestic tribunals. Where the judgment, therefore, was rendered by a court of general jurisdiction, it will be presumed that the court had jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter and the burden rests upon the party seeking to defeat the judgment of showing the contrary.<sup>71</sup>

(III.) Judgments Affecting Non-Residents.—A person who as plaintiff selects the tribunal of a foreign country wherein to prosecute his claim could not afterwards dispute the jurisdiction of such court over him.<sup>72</sup> But no extraterritorial recognition will be given to a judgment against a non-resident foreigner who has not submitted to the jurisdiction of the court,<sup>73</sup> even though personal service be made upon defendant in

The debts were contracted in the country in which the judgments were given, whilst the debtor resided in it." Douglas v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 686, 703, 130 Eng. Reprint 933. (2) In Schibbsby v. Actions on judgments by assignee bond,<sup>85</sup> or an undertaking to stay the enforcement of the judgment,<sup>86</sup> so that the assignee may sue the sureties thereon, though upon this proposition, there is authority to the contrary.<sup>87</sup> The assignment of a judgment against a guardian operates as an assignment of a right of action on the guardian's bond.<sup>88</sup> So also an assignment of a judgment in a claim and delivery or replevin suit, transfers to the assignee any undertaking executed in the action for the delivery of the property to the plaintiff, so that he may sue thereon.<sup>89</sup> But an assignment of a judgment in an attachment suit does not transfer the benefit of an attachment bond, unless the assignment expressly purports to do so.<sup>90</sup>

Such an assignment carries with it the right of action against a sheriff for negligence in the care of property seized under an attachment,<sup>91</sup> for neglect in not collecting an execution, taken out and delivered to him by the assignee,<sup>92</sup> or for a false return.<sup>93</sup> It does not carry with it the right to sue the sheriff and the sureties on his official bond for a breach of the condition thereof occurring prior to the assignment by reason of his failure to return, in the time and manner provided by law, a forthcoming bond taken upon such judgment.<sup>94</sup>

[a] Reason.—Where no assignment is made of the undertakings given on appeal and to stay proceedings, the assignee of the judgment cannot sue on such undertakings; such contracts are separate and distinct and do not pass by the assignment of the judgment as necessary incidents thereto. Chilstrom v. Eppinger, 127 Cal. 326, 59 Pac. 696, 78 Am. St. Rep. 46.

92. McGregor v. Walden, 14 Vt. 450.

[a] But it does not carry the right to recover against the sheriff for a neglect to collect on an execution issued before the assignment. Com. v. Fuqua, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 41.

93. Goodrich v. Bowē, 1 N. Y. City Ct. 338.

94. Com. v. Wampler, 104 Va. 337, 51 S. E. 737.

[a] Com. v. Wampler, 104 Va. 337, 51 S. E. 737, criticizes Citizens Nat. Bank v. Loomis, 100 Iowa 266, 69 N. W. 443, 62 Am. St. Rep. 571, in the following language: "The reasoning upon which that decision is based is not satisfactory. It proceeds upon the false premise that the right to sue for the breach of official duty must exist somewhere, and as the assignor cannot sue, having parted with the judgment, the right of action must rest in the assignee—whereas, we apprehend, it appears by the weight of authority, that the right of action for the previous breach of duty by the officer, is a mere personal right which appertains to the judgment creditor. The right to recover damages for the tort, it is true, is an incident to the judgment in the qualified sense that it belongs to the owner of the judgment at the time the injury is committed; but it is separate and distinct from the right to the judgment, both in its character and in respect to the persons liable to respond in damages for the wrong. It is a collateral right, over which the judgment cred-

Nor does it carry with it the right of action which the assignor has against the clerk of the court for failure to properly index the judgment.<sup>95</sup>

The assignee of a judgment stands in no better position than his assignor, and the judgment may be vacated, reversed, or set aside in his hands, for the same reasons that would justify such in the hands of the assignor.<sup>96</sup>

B. SETTING ASIDE OR RESCINDING.—An assignment of a judgment may be vacated or set aside for good cause upon motion and notice to the adverse party, in the absence of an express statute requiring the bringing of an action therefor.<sup>97</sup> But a suit or action to vacate or set aside the assignment of a judgment is proper where sufficient ground for such relief exists.<sup>98</sup> Such an action has been considered to be a local one,<sup>99</sup> which must be brought in the county in which the land to be affected thereby is situated.<sup>1</sup> No order setting aside an assignment of a judgment can be made except upon notice to the assignee.<sup>2</sup> itor possesses exclusive dominion, which he may enforce or forbear to enforce, and may assign or withhold at pleasure. The assumption, therefore, that the right to sue the officer exists in the assignee of the judgment, proceeds upon the hypothesis that it is such an incident as must necessarily pass by the assignment of the judgment, a conclusion which the authorities do not sustain.”

96. Cal.—Northam v. Gordon, 23 Cal. 255 (assignee of judgment by default takes it subject to right of defendant to have default and judgment set aside upon proper showing); *Reynolds v. [a] That no tender was made of the money received in consideration of the assignment does not affect the right to maintain such a suit, where provision is made in the decree to return the money. Lee Line Steamers v. Robinson (C. C. A.), 232 Fed. 417.

99. See Mahoney v. Mahoney, 70 Hun 78, 23 N. Y. Supp. 1097, wherein the plaintiff sought a judgment vacating and setting aside the assignment and adjudging that the lien of the judgment be restored and again made a lien upon the land.

Proceedings for contempt were the original mode of enforcing decrees.<sup>8</sup> But the more direct remedy of execution has long been the usual method of carrying decrees into effect.<sup>9</sup> A writ of assistance,<sup>10</sup> a writ of possession,<sup>11</sup> a writ of sequestration,<sup>12</sup> are also remedies for the enforcement of judgments or decrees.

Agreement as to Mode of Enforcement. — If a judgment is rendered in pursuance of an agreement of the parties which directs a particular mode of satisfying it, equity will not permit it to be enforced in any way inconsistent with the agreement.<sup>13</sup>

A proceeding to enforce a judgment is collateral to the judgment.<sup>14</sup>

What Law Governs. — The law regulating the enforcement of judgments, which is in force at the time judgment in a particular case is rendered, must govern in that case.<sup>15</sup> And the law of the place where the judgment is rendered governs the mode of its enforcement.<sup>16</sup>

II. BY EXECUTION. — A. DEFINITIONS AND GENERAL STATEMENT.

1. In General. — An execution may be said to be the writ which authorizes the sheriff or other officer either to enforce a judgment or decree, or to endeavor to produce a satisfaction thereof.<sup>17</sup> The term utes, §916 (U. S. Comp. St., 1913, §1540) providing that one recovering a judgment at common law shall be entitled to like remedies, by execution or otherwise, to reach the property of the judgment debtor, as are provided in like cases by the laws of the state in which the court is held, applies to Porto Rico. Bravo & Co. v. Gomez, 1 P. R. Fed. 303.

The levari facias is expressly enumerated among the species of execution in Jacob's Law Dictionary, and is defined to be a writ of execution directed to the sheriff for levying a sum of money upon a man's lands, tenements, goods and chattels."

[a] A levari facias is the ordinary writ for collecting charges upon land, as in the cases of mortgages, mechanics' liens, and municipal charges. Hart v. Homiller's Exr., 23 Pa. 39; Stewart's Heirs v. Miller, 2 Pearson (Pa.) 358. See also McClelland v. Devilbiss, 1 Pa. Co. Ct. 613.

[a] Compare, Holmes v. McIndoe, 20 Wis. 657, 669, wherein the court said "that a venditioni is not an execution in the proper sense of that word."

[b] A venditioni exponas is a writ of execution, and confers upon the officer authority to sell, pursuant to the levy, advertisement, and command of the writ, without re-advertising the property. Young v. Smith, 23 Texas 598, 76 Am. Dec. 81, citing Lockridge v. Baldwin, 20 Tex. 303, 70 Am. Dec. 385.

[c] "A writ of venditioni exponas is undoubtedly a writ of execution. Bouvier Law Liet. tit. Execution-venditioni exponas. It was so denominated in Kane v. McCown, 55 Mo. 196; and in Wood v. Augustine, 61 Mo. 46. In

Webb v. Armstrong, 5 Humph. 379, it was held that a writ of venditioni exponas was an execution within the meaning of the statutes authorizing motions against sheriffs for failure to return executions. It is an execution or writ to satisfy the judgment on behalf of the plaintiff. It is sometimes spoken of as a branch of the writ of fieri facias, and it may contain a fieri facias clause." Hicks v. Ellis, 65 Mo. 176, 186.

[d] In Nature of Alias Execution. "In Dryer v. Graham, 58 Ala. 623, the supreme court of Alabama said: 'It rests in the election of the plaintiff in execution to take out an alias execution, or a writ of venditioni exponas. If he desires merely a sale of the property on which a levy has been made, and not of other property, or the acquisition of a lien on other property, a venditioni exponas is the proper writ. The venditioni exponas continues the lien of the execution which has been levied, as to the property on which the levy was made, whether the property be real or personal. The writ is, indeed, merely for the continuation and completion of the original execution. And if its mandate is for the sale of land on which there has been a previous levy, it not only compels a sale, but confers the authority to sell, and the title of the purchaser has relation to the date of the lien of the execution. . . . A venditioni exponas is in its nature and operation, as to the property on which the levy may have been made an alias execution. It merely commands and authorizes, as to real estate, the completion of the execution already begun.'" Beebe v. United States, 161 U. S. 104, 16 Sup. Ct. 532, 40 L. ed. 633, 636.

[b] "It is said by Freeman in his work: 'That the venditioni exponas was so frequently used as to create the impression that it was a writ of authorization as well as compulsion, and was necessary to enable the officer to proceed with the sale. Such is not the fact. It gave the officer no authority not previously possessed by him. If he was willing to proceed, the issue of this writ was a clear superfluity.' Herman, in his work on Executions (sec. 215), says: 'A vendi. confers no power or authority on an officer which he did not possess under the execution. . . . The execution is the effective writ, and the officer may sell under it without a vendi.'" Hastings v. Bryant, 115 Ill. 69, 3 N. E. 507.

[a] Historical.—"At common law no judgment lien existed in favor of the judgment creditor. The nearest approach to a modern judgment lien was found in St. 13 Edw. I, called the 'Statute of Westminster II,' which created the writ of elegit. The only remedy offered the judgment creditor under this was sequestration of the profits of the land by writ of levari facias, or the possession of a moiety of the lands by writ of elegit, and in certain cases of the whole of it by extent." Thompson v. Avery, 11 Utah 214, 229, 39 Pac. 829. See also Hulbert v. Hulbert, 216 N. Y. 430, 436, 111 N. E. 70.

[a] In Hulbert v. Hulbert, 216 N. Y. 430, 436, 111 N. E. 70, the court said: "The writ of elegit, however, has been said to be 'almost unknown in the United States.' (Freeman on Executions, §370.) There are, however, instances of its use in Virginia, Alabama, North Carolina and Delaware. (Freeman on Executions, §370.) Although authorized in New York, in practice it is doubtful if it was ever adopted. In commenting upon it Chancellor Lansing said: 'Whether the elegit was ever introduced in practice, is doubtful, as the small value of the income of real estates, afforded little inducement to resort to it, as a means of satisfying a debt due upon a judgment' (Catlin v. Jackson, supra, at p. 547 [8 John. (N. Y.) 520])."

[b] The reason for the existence of the writ of elegit never existed in the United States, and the slight countenance given to it in the United States was discontinued shortly after the a writ of distringas,<sup>29</sup> are species of execution. An attachment-execution, a process provided for in some states to enforce a judgment, is in substance, if not in form, an execution.<sup>31</sup>

An execution is not a cause of action;<sup>32</sup> but it is process in an action within the meaning of a statute providing that such must be directed to the sheriff of the county.<sup>33</sup>

The purpose or object of a writ of execution is to authorize the officer to whom it is directed and delivered, to seize and hold the property of the debtor for the satisfaction of the amount ordered to be paid by such writ;<sup>34</sup> in other words, to enforce the judgment or decree.<sup>35</sup>

2. Classification of Executions.—Executions may be generally divided into two classes, general and special.<sup>36</sup> Again they are some-

(vol. 1, p. 590), a writ of distringas is a writ directed to the sheriff, commanding him to distrain one of his goods and chattels to enforce a compliance with what is required of him, and it was used to compel an appearance where the party could not be found 'and in equity may be availed of to compel the appearance of a corporation aggregate.'" [a] Writ Not a Security.—The office of an execution is not to secure but to enforce payment of a debt, and an attempt to make use of it for purposes of security merely, postpones it to other executions subsequently issued. [a] "A further distinction between a special and a general execution is to be found in the fact that ordinarily a special execution issues only in proceedings where the defendant has not been brought into court by personal service of process, but his property has been seized, and hence the execution to satisfy the judgment is limited to the specific property seized, though by statute there are cases where even when the defendant is personally brought into court, the judgment is a special one against certain property belonging to the defendant, and in such cases no general judgment is entered; whereas a general execution, which may be levied upon any property the defendant owns, follows a general judgment based upon personal service." *Smith ex rel. [b] Upon a general judgment in an attachment suit, it is error to award a special execution against the property attached. Kritzer v. Smith, 21 Mo. 296.

[c] In Illinois, except in cases provided by statute, executions are general. Rev. St. ch. 77, §4. The right of the party in whose favor the writ was issued, to elect on what property not exempt from execution he will have the same levied, does not, as is contended, give him a right to a special execution. Brown v. Duncan, 132 Ill. 413, 418, 23 N. E. 1126, 22 Am. St. Rep. 545.

[d] As the property attached in an action commenced by attachment where there is no personal service of process, but the defendants are notified by publication, is not released by the defendant's appearance, a special execution may properly be issued, although the award of execution is general only. Kerr v. Swallow, 33 Ill. 379. See also Keeley Brewing Co. v. Carr, 198 Ill. 492, 64 N. E. 1030.

An amendment of a void judgment does not validate a previously issued execution or the proceedings thereunder.<sup>48</sup>

An execution cannot issue upon the mere finding of the court or jury, even after the expiration of the term at which it was rendered,<sup>49</sup> or upon an award, before a judgment has been entered upon it.<sup>50</sup>

Wherever an order of court has the effect of a judgment, it will support a writ of execution;<sup>51</sup> but not otherwise.<sup>52</sup> Under some statutes, an order or rule for the payment of money will support an execution.<sup>53</sup> But the order or rule must not be conditional.<sup>54</sup>

Upon a judgment revived by scire facias, the execution should issue on the original judgment.<sup>55</sup>

A court without the means of executing its judgment and decrees would be an anomaly in jurisprudence, not deserving the name of a judicial tribunal. [b] The right to use the process of decree; but the award is made as a matter of course.<sup>66</sup>

(C.) NECESSITY FOR ENTRY OR DOCKETING OF JUDGMENT.<sup>67</sup> — The cases are not in accord as to whether it is a necessary prerequisite that the judgment shall have been formally entered or docketed, some holding that such procedure is necessary,<sup>68</sup> while others hold that writs of execution may be issued without the necessity of docketing or entering the judgment.

the court to enforce the collection of the debt arises from the decree of obligation to pay, and not from any language of the judgment. Ryan v. Raley, 48 Tex. Civ. App. 187, 106 S. W. 750.

[c] "Award of execution is not an integral part of a judgment." Gill v. State, 39 W. Va. 479, 20 S. E. 568, 45 Am. St. Rep. 928, 26 L. R. A. 655.

[d] In Richards v. Harrison, 218 Fed. 134, the court said that "while it is true that ordinarily judgments contain the recital that, if not paid, a writ of execution shall issue therefor, such recital is a mere repetition of that which the law has already pronounced. The method for the enforcement of the judgment is that prescribed by statute and the rules of the court, and such method can neither be enlarged by additional recitals, nor can it be said to be defective because the judgment does not recite the terms and conditions of the law."

[e] "The rule that the law awards an execution on a decree or judgment for a specific sum of money is not entirely superseded by the Court's declaration of a lien on particular property and an order of sale. The only effect of such declaration and order upon that rule is to delay the issuance of the execution until the order of sale is complied with and the net proceeds of the sale credited. This delay fully meets the provisional portion of the decree or judgment, and finds the unsatisfied balance of the recovery in the same legal plight as the whole recovery would have been in originally if there had been no declaration of lien and order of sale, and, this being true, the clerk is authorized to issue an execution for such balance without the Court's special direction to do so." Hyder v. Butler, 103 Tenn. 289, 52 S. W. 876.

[f] Judgment Against Executor. Where a statute makes it the duty of the clerk to issue an execution against the estate when the judgment is against an executor, it is not necessary that the judgment expressly so direct. Croom v. Winston, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 1, 43 S. W. 1072.

[a] Until the judgment is entered in the judgment book, there is no judgment to authorize or support an execu-ment, such procedure being considered merely a ministerial act.<sup>69</sup> In some jurisdictions, a judgment rendered in term time need not be tion. This entry is a condition precedent to the right to the writ. King v. French, 2 Sawy. 441, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,793.

[b] Under a statute providing for the issuance of execution within five years after the entry of judgment, no execution can issue until after such entry. Aultman & Taylor Co. v. Syme, 163 N. Y. 54, 57 N. E. 168, 79 Am. St. Rep. 565; Kupfer v. Frank, 30 Hun 74, 65 How. Pr. 396; Locke v. Hubbard, 9 S. D. 364, 69 N. W. 588.

[e] A substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute providing for docketing the judgment before issuing execution thereon, is all that is necessary. Appleby v. Barry, 2 Robt. (N. Y.) 689.

[f] In South Carolina, the failure of the judgment creditor to enter his judgment, before issuing execution to enforce the same, is an irregularity of which no one but the defendant in the action in which the judgment was recovered has the right to take advantage. Kennedy v. Kennedy, 86 S. C. 483, 497, 68 S. E. 664; Mason & Risch Co. v. Killough Music Co., 45 S. C. 11, 22 S. E. 755.

[g] When the mandate of the supreme court goes to the court below, it is necessary that that court, with a view to execution, should enter a further judgment in accordance with the mandate. Schell v. Cochran, 107 U. S. 625, 628, 2 Sup. Ct. 827, 27 L. ed. 543.

[a] The right of a party, in whose favor any judgment is rendered, to have execution, follows eo instanti, upon the rendition of the judgment; the rendition of the judgment is the judicial act upon which the execution rests, its entry upon the record is a mere ministerial act evidencing the judicial act, but not essential to its validity, or giving to the judgment any additional force or efficacy. Fontaine v. Hudson, 93 Mo. 62, 5 S. W. 692, 3 Am. St. Rep. 515.

[b] A valid judgment rendered will support and validate an execution issued in conformity therewith, although the formal record evidence of its rendition may not have been in existence at the time the execution issued. It is sufficient if the record evidence is in existence when proof of the judgment becomes necessary. Fontaine v. Hudson, 93 Mo. 62, 5 S. W. 692, 3 Am. St. Rep. 515.

[c] In Bernhardt v. Brown, 122 N. C. 587, 29 S. E. 884, 65 Am. St. Rep. 725, the court said: "Our conclusion upon the authorities is that docketing is only for the purpose of giving a lien, and is not a condition precedent to issuing an execution. If there is a docketed judgment in force at the sale of realty under execution, the sale relates the title back to the date of such docketing. If no docketed judgment is in force under which the execution is issued, the title as to the defendant relates back to the levy, but formally written upon the record before execution may be issued;<sup>70</sup> but where the judgment is entered by the clerk in vacation upon a confession, such judgment must be formally written up by the clerk before an execution can be legally issued.<sup>71</sup>

Entry Nunc Pro Tunc.<sup>72</sup> — It is held that the irregularity caused by the issuance of an execution prior to the entry or docketing of the judgment may be cured by the making of an entry nunc pro tunc.<sup>73</sup>

(II.) Judgment by Confession.<sup>74</sup> — Execution may properly issue on a judgment by confession,<sup>75</sup> but only, however, where the judgment is is subject to docketed judgments, in favor of other plaintiffs, in force at the date of the sale.<sup>76</sup>

[a] The entry of the judgment nunc pro tunc effects a relation back and vitalizes the original judgment as of the date of its original rendition, and cures the irregularity in the issuance of the execution or order of sale. Hubbart v. Willis State Bank (Tex. Civ. App.), 152 S. W. 458.

[b] In Rogers v. Cherrier, 75 Wis. 54, 43 N. W. 828, the court said: "We see no reason for holding that in such case it is necessary to withdraw the execution from the hands of the sheriff, and redeliver it to him, or to issue a new execution, in order to make it effective."

[c] During the pendency of the motion to quash the writ of execution, the judgment may be entered nunc pro tunc, with the effect of removing the ground of quashal, and making good the writ and the acts done under it. Graham v. Lynn, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 17, 39 Am. Dec. 493.

[a] Warrant of Attorney.—Execution may issue on a judgment entered upon bond and warrant of attorney for a stated sum given as indemnity to the plaintiff without seire facias, suggestion, or other proceedings to ascertain the damages. McCann v. Farley, 26 Pa. 173. See also Bauduy v. Bradun, 1 Har. (Del.) 182, holding that "on a judgment confessed on bond with collateral condition an execution may issue."

[b] Execution (1) issued on a judgment confessed to defraud creditors is not void but only voidable. Pitkin v. Burnham, 62 Neb. 385, 87 N. W. 160. (2) See also Shallcross v. Deats, 43 N. J. L. 177, holding that the defendant in a confessed judgment cannot be relieved, although it appears that there was no consideration for the judgment, final,<sup>76</sup> and other statutory requirements have been complied with.<sup>77</sup>

(III.) Judgments by Default and Without Service of Process.<sup>78</sup> — Execution issues upon a judgment by default, taken after due service of process in the cause.<sup>79</sup> But where there is no personal service of process on the defendant, and no appearance by him, in a suit which is merely in personam, a general execution against his property is invalid.<sup>80</sup> Early statutes allowing execution in such case upon the

if it also appears that the judgment was confessed with intent to defraud creditors. Such a judgment may be questioned, however, by other judgment and execution creditors of the defendant, and, as to them, the judgment and the execution thereon will be vacated and set aside.

[c] Equitable Control.—Executions upon such judgments are controlled under the equitable powers of the courts in some states, in such manner that no injustice may be done to defendants. McCann v. Farley, 26 Pa. 173.

[d] The misnomer of a defendant in a judgment by confession upon a warrant of attorney by such wrong name is no defense to an execution on the judgment. Holten v. Pyle, 6 Houst. (Del.) 432.

[e] For Portion of Debt Not Due.

(1) A warrant of attorney to confess judgment may authorize the attorney to consent to the immediate issuance of execution for the part of the debt not yet due, but unless such consent is given in the answer, or otherwise, execution for that part of the debt is unauthorized and should be set aside. Sloane v. Anderson, 57 Wis. 123, 13 N. W. 684, 15 N. W. 21. (2) See also Jones v. Dilworth, 63 Pa. 447, wherein the court said: "The party in issuing execution upon a judgment entered by warrant of attorney, proceeds at his peril; and if he issues his writ when nothing is due, or for too much, he subjects himself to the summary correction of the court to set it aside or reduce it, and payment of costs for his untrue demand."

76. On a judgment by confession entered by the clerk in vacation, execution may not issue before the record of the judgment is complete. Knights v. Martin, 155 Ill. 486, 40 N. E. 358; Cummins v. Holmes, 109 Ill. 15; Ling v. King & Co., 91 Ill. 571; but in term time it may. Swaim v. Humphreys, 42 Ill. App. 370; Poppers v. Meager, 33 Ill. App. 20; Weigley v. Matson, 24

77. Rasmussen v. Hagler, 15 N. D. 542, 108 N. W. 541.

[a] A judgment by confession in the clerk's office on warrant of attorney, without process regularly issued and served upon or accepted by defendant is void on its face; hence execution thereon is void. Farquhar v. Dehaven, 70 W. Va. 738, 75 S. E. 65.

78. Judgments by default generally, see 14 STANDARD PROC. 854, et seq.

79. See Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204, 37 Pac. 218. But see Patterson v. Mayfield's Curator, 10 La. 220, holding that "in cases in which the party has actually been served with process, but has neglected to plead, and judgment was taken against him by default, the Code of Practice disallows a resort to the via executiva."

[a] Where the sole entry of judgment is on the trial docket, and minutes of the court, in the words, "judgment by default," execution is improperly issued. Page v. Coleman, 9 Port. (Ala.) 275.

[a] Service by publication is insufficient, where the suit is merely in personam, to authorize a general execution against the property of a non-resident or absent defendant. In fact, no execution can issue unless property of such non-resident or absent defendant is previously brought under the control of the court by seizure or some giving of a bond<sup>81</sup> are in contravention of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution.<sup>82</sup>

(IV.) Foreign Judgments. — Executions will not issue on foreign judgments;<sup>83</sup> it is enforced through a new judgment obtained in an action brought for that purpose.<sup>84</sup>

(V.) Satisfied Judgments.<sup>85</sup> — The issuing of an execution upon a judgment which has been paid or otherwise wholly satisfied is unauthorized and void.<sup>86</sup> An execution, issued in such a case, cannot

[a] Reason.—"It would not be for the plaintiff and defendant, under such circumstances, to complain, as the injury would result from their own fraud, or negligence, in not causing satisfaction to be entered on the judgment. It would be imposing upon a purchaser at sheriff's sale the necessity of ascertaining whether the debt had been paid. He has a right to purchase on the faith of the records of the court, which import verity." Hoffman v. Strohecker, 7 Watts (Pa.) 86, 32 Am. Dec. 740.

[b] Doctrine of Estoppel.—In Wood v. Colvin, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 566, 38 Am. Dec. 598, it is said: "If a purchaser can acquire a title under a satisfied judgment, it must be on the ground that there has been some fault on the part of the judgment debtor. If he stands by without taking any measures to arrest the sale, and without giving notice of the payment, and suffers a purchaser in good faith to part with his money, he may be estopped from afterwards alleging the payment to defeat the title of the purchaser."

91. Where a judgment is joint, against two defendants, both are regarded as principals, unless by proof, aliunde, one of them is shown to be surety for the other; and when one of such defendants, claiming to be surety for the other, pays off the judgment, without any judicial determination of the question of his suretyship, he cannot have execution for his use on the judgment. Laval v. Rowley, 17 Ind. 36. And see Ga.—Patterson v. Clark, 101 Ga. 214, 28 S. E. 623. Ill.—Russell v. Hugunin, 2 Ill. 562, 33 Am. Dec. 423. Ia.—Drefahl v. Tuttle, 42 Iowa 177; Bones v. by an officer holding the writ of execution,<sup>92</sup> or by any stranger to it,<sup>93</sup> operates as an extinguishment of it, and will preclude the issuance of an execution, unless the judgment is assigned to such person or he is subrogated to the rights of the judgment-creditor.

The partial satisfaction of a judgment does not prevent the issuance of an execution so long as there is a balance due thereon.<sup>94</sup>

(VI.) Vacated Judgment. — After a judgment or decree has been vacated or set aside, no execution can issue.<sup>95</sup> If issued, it falls with the judgment, when set aside, without any express order to quash the execution.<sup>96</sup>

(VII.) Lost Judgments. — The fact that the record of the judgment has been lost does not destroy the judgment-creditor's right to an execution.<sup>97</sup>

92. If an officer pays off an execution (1) to the judgment creditor, without an assignment or purchase of the judgment, it is an absolute discharge of the execution, and the officer cannot hold the execution, as unsatisfied, and enforce it for his own benefit. Harwell v. Worsham, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 524, 37 Am. Dec. 572; Lintz v. Thompson, 1 Head (Tenn.) 456, 73 Am. Dec. 182. And see Garth v. McCampbell, 10 Mo. 154; Carpenter v. Stilwell, 11 N. Y. 61; *Sherman v. [a] Where a joint judgment is entered against two, and the judgment is subsequently, on motion, opened as to one of the defendants, execution should not issue against the other defendant, until the issue as to the liability of the first has been disposed of. Struthers v. Lloyd, 14 Pa. 216. And see Merrifield v. Cottage Piano Co., 238 Ill. 526, 87 N. E. 379.

[b] Pendency of an action to vacate the judgment does not deprive the judgment creditor of his right to an execution. Livermore v. Hodgkins, 54 Cal. 637.

[c] The mere pendency of a motion to open a judgment does not of itself stay proceedings without an order to that effect, but the court, when it makes a rule absolute to open judgment, may order execution to proceed, just as it may impose any other conditions on which the relief asked will be afforded. But in the absence of any special order it would seem that an opened judgment is not a final judgment in the full sense of the term, upon which execution may issue without special leave. Savage v. Kelly, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 525.

(VIII.) Dormant Judgments.—While the authorities agree that an execution cannot regularly issue upon a dormant judgment unless it be revived,<sup>98</sup> they do not agree as to the result, if it be issued without revivor a few holding that it is void,<sup>99</sup> and that a sale thereunder is void,<sup>1</sup> especially as to one who acquired title to the property from the judg-

ings taken to rehear the case upon its merits, execution may issue to enforce the same, though the record of the judgment be lost. Childress v. Marks, 2 East. (Tenn.) 12.

[b] The proper practice, is to apply, after notice, to the court where the judgment was rendered, and upon satisfactory proof of the rendition of the judgment and of the loss of the record, execution may be awarded. Ky.—Fleece v. Goodrum, 1 Duv. 306. Tenn.—Shannon's Code, §4800; Boyers v. Webb, 1 Lea 696; Faust v. Echols, 4 Coldw. 397. Tex.—Vernon's Sayle's Civ. St., §6778, et seq. Eng.—Cheeswright v. Franks, 6 Dowl. P. C. 471.

[c] Issuance of execution irregular where made before substitution of destroyed judgment record (Beekham v. Medlock, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 61, 46 S. W. 402. And see Brown v. Reese, 67 Tex. 318, 3 S. W. 292; Cyrus v. Hicks, 20 Tex. 483), and may be enjoined. Brown v. Reese, 67 Tex. 318, 3 S. W. 292; Cyrus v. Hicks, 20 Tex. 483. Compare, McCormick v. Nichols (Tex. Civ. App.), 35 S. W. 526, holding that the issuance of the execution after the loss of the judgment record and before its substitution, is but an irregularity, which is not available collaterally.

[d] Presumption.—Where an execution states the existence of a judgment upon which it is founded, but the record is lost, it is a natural presumption that such a judgment did in fact exist and if the question is contested it should be left to the jury to determine whether it did exist. Walker v. Emerson, 20 Tex. 706, 73 Am. Dec. 207.

5. Catlin v. Merchants Bank, 36 Vt. 572, right to object to irregularities in this respect may be waived.

[a] Objecting to the issuance of the writ upon certain grounds is waiver of irregularities not specified and such waiver will not be allowed to be repudiated and avoided, without an assertion or claim of payment or other substantial defense. McKeithen v. Blue, 149 N. C. 95, 62 S. E. 769.

[b] Consent may be presumed from failure to object to the writ or by the act of the defendant in paying money on the execution. Lawrence v. Grambling, 13 S. C. 120.

fails to seasonably raise the point.<sup>6</sup> Where the latter rule prevails, a stranger to the judgment, who purchases thereunder, without notice gets a title, good<sup>7</sup> at least as against collateral attack.<sup>8</sup>

(IX.) Transcripts or Abstracts of Judgments of Inferior Courts.—(A.) IN GENERAL.—Statutes sometimes provide for the filing with the clerk of a superior court of a transcript or abstract of the judgment entered in an inferior court, and for the issuance of executions thereon in the same manner and with the same effect as though the judgment had been rendered in the superior court.<sup>9</sup>

7. Lytle v. Lytle, 94 N. C. 683; Ripley v. Arledge, 94 N. C. 467.

[a] It is erroneous for a court to set aside an execution issued on a dormant judgment where property has been purchased under it. The purchaser of property at a sale, under an execution issued on a dormant judgment, has a right to intervene and appeal from an order of the court setting such execution aside. Murphrey v. Wood, 47 N. C. 63.

[b] Even if it had been necessary to have leave of court to issue the execution, the execution having issued and sale upon it without objection from the judgment debtor, it cannot afterwards be questioned, and the sale made upon it would be valid and cannot be questioned by other judgment creditors. Leonard v. Broughton, 120 Ind. 536, 22 N. E. 731.

8. A sale under a dormant judgment is not void but only voidable, and can only be attacked in a direct proceeding instituted for that purpose. It cannot be attacked in a collateral proceeding. Taylor v. Doom, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 59, 95 S. W. 4.

(B.) HOW AND WHEN TRANSCRIPT OBTAINED AND FILED. — (1.) In General. A strict compliance with the statutes is necessary before the judgment of the lower court can be converted, for the purposes of execution, into a judgment of the superior court by filing a transcript thereof.<sup>10</sup> Under some statutes, it is the duty of the justice, upon the filing of an affidavit setting forth that there are not sufficient goods and chattels belonging to the judgment-debtor liable to execution, within the county in which the judgment was rendered, to issue the transcript.<sup>11</sup>

Nature of Proceeding To Obtain. — The proceeding to obtain a transcript of a judgment for the purpose of an execution thereon is wholly an ex parte one.<sup>12</sup> No notice to the defendant is necessary.<sup>13</sup>

Richards v. Belcher, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 284, 25 S. W. 740, judgment must be recorded in minutes of district court before execution issues. Wash.—Grant v. Cole, 23 Wash. 542, 63 Pac. 263. W. Va.—Code, 1913, §2672; Sterringer v. Mackie & Co., 57 W. Va. 63, 49 S. E. 942; Erb v. Hendricks, 50 W. Va. 28, 40 S. E. 338. Wis.—St., 1898, §2900; Sullivan v. Miles, 117 Wis. 576, 94 N. W. 298.

[a] The proceeding is a special one, authorized only by the statute, is not according to the course of the common law, and, after execution has been issued from the circuit court, certiorari will lie to review the proceedings for the purpose of ascertaining their validity. Wedel v. Green, 70 Mich. 642, 38 N. W. 638.

[b] Transcript Must Be Actually Filed.—Carr v. Youse, 43 Mo. 28, 39 Mo. 346, 90 Am. Dec. 470; Sterringer v. Mackie & Co., 57 W. Va. 63, 49 S. E. 942.

[c] Failure To Enter.—The failure of the court to observe a purely administrative duty in entering and docketing a transcript from a justice's court will not invalidate an execution issued on such transcript. Shepard v. Schrutt, 162 Mich. 485, 128 N. W. 772.

[d] Transcript on Appeal Not Sufficient.—A transcript filed in pursuance of the statute that regulates appeals from the justice court cannot be made to serve as a transcript to become the basis of a judgment lien and of an execution. Chapman v. Raleigh, 3 Ore. 34.

[e] Transcript of Revived Judgment.—A transcript of the proceedings under which a judgment is revived before a justice warrants the issuance of an execution from the superior court. Bauer v. Miller, 16 Mo. App. 252.

[f] When Abstract Insufficient.

Where the statute provides for the filing of a transcript of the judgment, the filing of an abstract merely is not a compliance with the statute, and confers no authority upon the clerk of the superior court to issue an execution on such judgment. Sterringer v. Mackie & Co., 57 W. Va. 63, 49 S. E. 942. And see Dearborn v. Patton, 4 Ore. 58.

[g] Constitutionality of Statutes. A statute providing for the issuance of executions upon a justice's transcript held not to be unconstitutional in that it does not comply with a law relative to the amount in controversy, as affecting the jurisdiction of the superior court. Joseph Speidel Grocery Co. v. Warder, 56 W. Va. 602, 49 S. E. 534.

13. Matthews v. Miller, 47 N. J. L. 414, 1 Atl. 464.

(2.) At Whose Instance Obtained. — The transcript or abstract is issued at the instance of the person in whose favor the judgment is rendered,<sup>14</sup> or his agent,<sup>15</sup> or any person interested therein, whether by assignment or otherwise.<sup>16</sup> The justice of the peace has no authority, on his own motion, however, to certify a transcript of the judgment to the superior court.<sup>17</sup>

(3.) When Filed. — Such a transcript cannot regularly be filed before execution can lawfully issue upon the judgment.<sup>18</sup> And where an execution in the inferior court is necessary, a transcript of the judgment cannot be filed before the return day of the execution issued by the justice.<sup>19</sup> Nor can it be filed after the expiration of the statutory period allowed for issuing execution from the justice's court, without a revivor.<sup>20</sup>

[a] But see contra, Enderlin Invest. Co. v. Nordhagen, 18 N. D. 517, 123 N. W. 390, holding that the section providing that execution "may issue at any time within five years after entry of judgment" rendered in the justice's court, simply limits the right to have execution within such time only to the justice's court, and that it does not limit the right to transcript it to the district court and have execution issued thereon after the expiration of such period of time. And see Holton v. Schmarback, 15 N. D. 38, 106 N. W. 36.

[b] Under a statute limiting the time during which a judgment remains a lien, a sheriff's sale of lands under an execution, issued upon a transcript of a judgment of the justice's court filed after the statutory period, is not void for want of revival and leave of

An execution issued on a transcript prematurely filed,<sup>21</sup> or issued before the transcript has been filed,<sup>22</sup> is void.

(4.) Form and Sufficiency of Transcript or Abstract—The right to file the transcript depends, not upon the facts existing, but upon the transcript reciting and showing the requisite facts.<sup>23</sup> And where the transcript is insufficient, the execution issued thereon is void.<sup>24</sup> The transcript should show on its face the rendition of a judgment in the inferior court,<sup>25</sup> and where an execution and a nulla bona return are required as a condition precedent to filing the transcript,<sup>26</sup> it should show that a valid execution was issued by the lower court,<sup>27</sup> and duly returned nulla bona by the proper officer.<sup>28</sup>

25. Johnson v. Hubbard, 269 Ill. 532, 109 N. E. 975, the judgment written up in the justice's docket cannot be looked to as an aid to issuance of execution.

26. See infra, II, B, 1, i, (IV).

27. Ill.—Merrick v. Carter, 205 Ill. 73, 68 N. E. 750; Wooters v. Joseph, 137 Ill. 113, 27 N. E. 80; Hobson v. McCambridge, 130 Ill. 367, 22 N. E. 823 (in favor of plaintiff in the judgment). Mo.—Ruby v. Hannibal & St. Joe R. Co., 39 Mo. 480, prior to the amendment of 1907. Can.—Jones v. Paxton, 19 Ont. App. 163; Burgess v. Tully, 24 U. C. C. P. 549.

[a] A copy of the execution and the return of the officer upon the same is sometimes required in the transcript. See the statutes and Wooters v. Joseph, 137 Ill. 113, 27 N. E. 80, 31 Am. St. Rep. 355, holding that the failure of the copy of the execution issued on the judgment to show that it was signed by the justice was fatal. But it has been held that it is not essential to the validity of the execution issued from the superior court, or the sale under it, that the transcript embrace a copy of the execution by the justice and the nulla bona return by the officer, where the sheriff's deed recites the fact of such issue and return. Waddell v. Williams, 50 Mo. 216.

28. Ill.—Merrick v. Carter, 205 Ill. 73, 68 N. E. 750; Wooters v. Joseph, 137 Ill. 113, 27 N. E. 80; Hobson v. McCambridge, 130 Ill. 367, 22 N. E. 823. Mo.—*Ruby v. Hannibal & St. Jo R. Can.—Jones v. Paxton, 19 Ont. App. 163; Burgess v. Tully, 24 U. C. C. P. 549.

[a] Sufficient Returns.—Under a statute requiring that the return on the execution shall state that "defendant has no goods or chattels whereon to levy the same," a return of "No property found" has been held sufficient. Bick v. Paris, 124 Mo. App. 341, 101 S. W. 716.

[b] So also, a constable's return: "This execution returned not satisfied, there being no property found to levy the same on," has been held sufficient. Ruby v. Hannibal & St. Jo R. Co., 39 Mo. 480. See Scharff v. McGaugh, 205 Mo. 344, 103 S. W. 550; Littlefield v. Ramsey, 181 Mo. 613, 80 S. W. 949; Poineer v. Bagnall, 49 N. J. L. 226, 7 Atl. 858; Newman v. Van Dyne, 42 N. J. Eq. 485, 7 Atl. 897; Nimmo v. Howard, 42 N. J. Eq. 487, 10 Atl. 712.

[c] In Scharff v. McGaugh, 205 Mo. 344, 353, 103 S. W. 550, the court said: "If such returns comply with the spirit of the statute and are substantially in form, they are well enough."

Authentication. — The transcript of the judgment must be properly authenticated.<sup>29</sup>

(C.) EFFECT OF FILING TRANSCRIPT. — It is sometimes provided that after the filing and docketing of the transcript in the superior court, the judgment of the inferior court shall have the same effect as a judgment of the superior court.<sup>30</sup> These statutes, however, do not generally contemplate making the judgment of the justice's court a judgment of the superior court, except for the purposes of issuing execution.<sup>31</sup>

[d] The following returns have been held insufficient: (1) "Not satisfied." Langford v. Few, 146 Mo. 112, 47 S. W. 927. (2) "Wholly unsatisfied." McDowell v. Clark, 68 N. C. 117. (3) "No part satisfied." Merrick v. Carter, 205 Ill. 73, 68 N. E. 750.

[e] An execution returned "not satisfied by levying on the property of A. and making $29," is insufficient; it must show that A. had no more goods, etc. Burke v. Flournoy, 4 Mo. 116.

[f] A return stating, "I return the within execution, after searching the premises, dissatisfied, not finding any goods to cover the amount of the judgment," is not a compliance with the statute as it, in effect, merely declares that the officer could not find enough to pay the entire amount of the execution. Tasto v. Kloppling, 43 N. J. L. 448.

29. An authentication of a transcript of a judgment by a justice of the peace in the following form: "I certify that the foregoing contains an entry made on my docket. (Signed) A. B., J. P.," is sufficient. Franse v. Owens, 25 Mo. 329.

[a] It is not absolutely necessary that the certificate be a part of the transcript, if admitted without objection. Bauer v. Miller, 16 Mo. App. 252.

[b] The certificate of the justice is prima facie evidence on which the clerk of the circuit court may issue execution though defects may be shown on motion to quash. Ruby v. Hannibal & St. Jo R. Co., 39 Mo. 480. See also Johnson v. Latta, 84 Mo. 139, 142.

[a] The judgment still remains the judgment rendered by the justice of the peace; the statute but gives an additional means of having execution: i. e., it may be satisfied in the same manner as a judgment of the superior court.

[b] On the abolishing of a common pleas court the clerk of the circuit court has authority to issue executions on transcripts of judgments of justices of the peace, duly recorded and dock-

When a cause is transferred from one court to another on account of the incompetency of the judge, the execution issues from the latter court.<sup>44</sup>

(II.) After Appeal. — Statutes sometimes provide that an appellate court may award an execution to carry its decision into effect.<sup>45</sup> At the common law, such was the practice where the original record was sent up to the court to which the review was taken.<sup>46</sup> But when a judgment has been affirmed and the cause remanded by the appellate court to the court wherein the judgment was originally rendered, the general rule is that the prevailing party is entitled to have execution issue upon such judgment from the court thus reinvested with the custody of the record.<sup>47</sup> The same practice also obtains in some states

Co. v. Lowery* (Ala.), 57 So. 260;

[d] Judgment Against Sureties on Supersedeas Bond.—(1) But when a judgment for money is, upon appeal with a supersedeas bond, affirmed with judgment against the appellant and the sureties on the bond, execution should issue on the judgment of the appellate court and not upon the judgment appealed from. Irvin v. Ferguson, 83 Tex. 491, 18 S. W. 820. See also Blair v. Sanborn, 82 Tex. 686, 18 S. W. 159. (2) The judgment of the appellate court fixes the liability of every person and determines the highest sum for which execution may issue; while the judgment of the lower court does not fix the liability of the sureties on the appeal bond, nor authorize an execution for the costs of appeal, nor for any damages that may be awarded by the appellate court. Irvin v. Ferguson, 83 Tex. 491, 18 S. W. 820.

where the judgment of the lower court is reversed and an original money judgment entered in the appellate court.<sup>48</sup> If an appeal is dismissed by consent,<sup>49</sup> or abandoned,<sup>50</sup> execution should issue, as if no appeal had been taken.

If upon appeal, there is a trial de novo, the judgment rendered is the judgment of such appellate court, and execution is to be issued from such court.<sup>51</sup>

(III.) Duty of Clerk. — The duty of issuing the execution usually devolves upon the clerk of the court which rendered the judgment.<sup>52</sup>

48. The same practice that applies in respect of affirmed judgments also is applicable in all cases wherein any original affirmative judgment is rendered in the appellate court, and where the judgment below is reversed and an original money judgment is entered, it has always been the practice to certify such judgment to the court from which the appeal was taken to the end that it should there be enforced and for execution upon it to issue out of that court, and not out of the appellate court. "This practice probably originated in the considerations that this [supreme] court is in a general sense without jurisdiction to try in the first instance issues arising upon the levy of executions, its jurisdiction being appellate only, and that it is also without the equipment of a jury to which the parties to executions would be entitled on issues growing out of levies." But now in addition to these underlying considerations, by provision of the legislature the clerk of the supreme court is required to certify to the clerks of the courts from which appeals have been taken, the judgment of the supreme court whether it be an affirmance or a reversal of the judgment below, or other action of the supreme court upon such causes, to the end that execution may issue in the court below. *Anniston Loan & Trust Co. v. [a] An execution from the county court, issued by the clerk de facto and signed by him officially, is not illegal because the clerk practiced law at the time, and was one of the attorneys of record for the plaintiff in the execution. Blount v. Wells, 55 Ga. 282.

[b] "It is not indispensable to the regularity of an execution, that it should be issued by the clerk, or a duly qualified deputy. If the clerk thinks proper, he can engage the services of an assistant to write for him; and if the execution is made out and subscribed with his name, by his direction, and under his supervision, or if made and subscribed with his name, and afterwards adopted by him, it would in point of law, be as much his act, as if the labor had been performed

And since the issuance of an execution is a mere ministerial act,<sup>53</sup> if the judgment-creditor regularly applies for execution on his judgment within the period of the statute of limitations,<sup>54</sup> the clerk can exercise no discretion as to whether or not he will issue it.<sup>55</sup>

d. For Whom Issued.<sup>56</sup>—As a general rule, no person but the party in whose favor a judgment is rendered, his agent or attorney of record, can control or order execution to enforce the judgment.<sup>57</sup> And while it is generally the duty of the clerk of the court in which the judgment is rendered to issue an execution when called upon to do with his own hand." McMahan & Evans v. Colclough, 2 Ala. 68.

[c] When the court has no clerk, the judge or justice himself must perform the imperative duty of issuing execution; but when the court has a clerk in whose hands is intrusted the court seal, and who is charged with the keeping of the court records and the issuance of process under the seal of the court, the imperative duty of issuing the writ of execution manifestly devolves upon him, unless in a particular case the judge elects to perform the duty himself instead of intrusting it to his ministerial officer. [a] When applied to for the issuance of an execution, if the application proceeds from a proper party, the only inquiry the clerk can make is, whether the record of the court shows a judgment or decree authorizing the same. Beyond that he cannot look, and inquire whether there is not matter which will discharge the parties, or any of them, from liability. Hudson v. Modawell, 64 Ala. 481.

[a] Officers of court, or witnesses to whom fees are due, cannot order execution on a judgment owned by another. Ex parte Hampton, 2 Greene (Ia.) 137.

[b] But in Cortez v. San Francisco Superior Court, 86 Cal. 274, 24 Pac. 1011, it was held that a commissioner to whom fees and expense money had been decreed had such an interest as to entitle him to an execution.

[c] An attorney (1) may have execution issued on a judgment obtained through him. Rogers v. Marshal, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 644, 17 L. ed. 714; Erwin v. Blake, 8 Pet. (U. [a] Where, in the entry of a judgment, by agreement of the parties, it is ordered by the court that an execution shall issue thereon, but shall not be levied on the defendant's property for a specified period, except in a certain event, it does not thereby become the duty of the clerk to issue such execution without directions so to do from the plaintiff, his agent or attorney. State v. Wilkins' Admr., 21 Ind. 216.

[b] Custom of Clerk.—The fact that it has been the custom of the clerk of the court to issue executions upon all judgments rendered at the next preceding term whether directed to do so or not, does not change the rule requiring the direction of the plaintiff. Davis v. McCann, 143 Mo. 172, 44 S. W. 795.

[c] A justice who has given a judgment for the plaintiff, and has been directed by him not to issue an execution until after the time for taking an appeal has expired, is not bound to issue an execution until the plaintiff requests it. Tingle v. Pullium, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 442.

[d] Presumption of Direction.—The presumption is, in the absence of proof otherwise, that a clerk issues an execution only under the direction of some person authorized to control the issuance of the writ. Niantic Bank v. Dennis, 37 Ill. 381. And see Smith v. Perkins, 81 Tex. 152, 16 S. W. 805, 26 Am. St. Rep. 794.

judgment had been recovered in a personal action, to resort to an original action of debt on the judgment.<sup>65</sup> But in real actions, where the judgment was for land, and the action of debt could not lie, a writ of seire facias could be taken out to revive the judgment, and call the defendant to show cause why execution should not issue.<sup>66</sup> But by an early statute in England the remedy of seire facias was extended to personal judgments on which execution had not issued for a year and a day,<sup>67</sup> so that execution might be sued out upon such revived judgment in the same manner as if the time within which an execution might legally have been issued had not been suffered to lapse.<sup>68</sup>

(B.) STATUTES in this country have variously limited the time within which a party in whose favor judgment is given may have execution thereon as of course.<sup>69</sup>

[a] The provisions of a statute giving plaintiff three years in which to issue execution, applies to a judgment pending at its adoption. Harris v. Ricks, Hill & Co., 63 N. C. 653. See also Henry v. Thisler (Colo.), 155 Pac. 1177.

[b] Where proceedings to enforce stockholders' liabilities and obtain executions against them are brought before the judgment becomes dormant, and are diligently prosecuted, no statute of limitations will run against the judgment creditor pending the litiga-

On Registered Judgments. — Statutes sometimes provide for the registration of a judgment and thereby extend the time during which an execution may issue.<sup>90</sup>

(III.) In Vacation or Legal Holiday. — The right to issue executions in vacation,<sup>91</sup> or upon a legal holiday,<sup>92</sup> has been recognized.

Sunday. — Statutes have provided that upon a proper showing the writ may issue on Sunday.<sup>93</sup>

(IV.) Computing Time. — (A.) IN GENERAL. — The day of the entry of judgment should be excluded in computing the time within which tion, and his right to proceed to the end will not be barred because more than six years have elapsed since the last execution on the judgment was issued. Steffins v. Gurney, 61 Kan. 292, 59 Pac. 725.

[c] In Iowa although the lien of a judgment upon real estate expires in ten years as against subsequent purchasers, yet an execution may issue at any time within twenty years, and any land the debtor may own may be levied upon and sold subject to the right of redemption. Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Maxwell, 119 Iowa 672, 94 N. W. 207; Stahl v. Roost, 34 Iowa 475.

[d] It will be no sufficient legal excuse for not suing out an execution within a year and a day from the time final judgment was rendered, that a prior attachment had been in continued existence upon the real estate of the debtor, upon which the creditor had his attachment lien. Catlin v. Merchants' Bank, 36 Vt. 572.

[e] The suspension of the powers of an administrator whose power and duty it was to cause the writ to issue will not suspend the running of the statute. Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 202.

Effect of failure to take out execution within time limited, see supra, 11, B, 1, b, (VIII).

[a] Executions always issue upon original judgments and the effect of statutes providing for the registration of judgments is not to give a new judgment, but to create a lien and preserve to the holder the right to have execution at any time within life of the lien, on the original judgment. Jefferson County Savings Bank v. Miller, 145 Ala. 237, 40 So. 513.

91. Christler v. Locke, 103 Mich. 86, 61 N. W. 263.

[a] "Where judgment is rendered at or near the close of a term of court, so that there is no time during the same term to move for a new trial, or in arrest of judgment, and no such motion is made, the prevailing party is not required to wait until the following term for his execution to issue, but may have it at once." People ex rel. Gibson v. Clerk of Court, 14 Mich. 169.

[b] In Iowa the judge is authorized, on application made to him, to enter an order in vacation directing the clerk or sheriff as to the issuance or enforcement of an execution. Code, 1897, §3843. But such an order can be made only after notice to the opposite party. Code, 1897, §§3834-3841; McConkie v. Landt, 126 Iowa 317, 101 N. W. 1121.

an execution may or may not issue, according to some authorities.<sup>94</sup> Where it is a prerequisite to the right to issue execution that the judgment be docketed,<sup>95</sup> the term of limitation in which the execution may or must issue begins to run from the time when the judgment is docketed.<sup>96</sup>

Sundays have been excluded in computing the time within which executions may not issue.<sup>97</sup>

(B.) EFFECT OF SUPERSEDEAS OR STAY.—(1.) Generally.—If execution upon a judgment is stayed by order of court,<sup>98</sup> or by operation of law,<sup>99</sup> or upon the agreement of the parties,<sup>1</sup> the time during which it is so stayed must be excluded from the computation of the period within which execution may issue as of course and without a revivor of the judgment.

(2.) Pendency of Writ of Error or Appeal.<sup>2</sup>—The bringing of a writ of error, where it operates as a supersedeas, stops the running of the time within which the execution may issue as of course,<sup>3</sup> and upon the affirmance of the judgment, or other final disposal of the writ of error, the judgment creditor may proceed to execution without a revivor of the judgment.<sup>4</sup> But some statutes provide that a writ of error will not operate as a supersedeas, until bond and security are given; in which event the allowance of the writ of error alone is not sufficient to lengthen the time of issuance of the execution.<sup>5</sup> Where the pendency of an appeal operates to stay proceedings for the enforcement of the judgment the time expiring in consequence thereof will not be included in computing the time within which execution may issue.<sup>6</sup>

Underhill v. Devereux, 2 Wms. Saund. 68, 72, 85 Eng. Reprint 698, note.

[a] Where after an execution had issued, an agreement for a stay of proceedings was made, with a condition that on failure by the defendant to comply with the agreement an execution might issue, it was held that it could be issued after the statutory time without a scire facias. Halliday v. Johnson, 7 N. J. Eq. 638.

[b] The reason assigned for this is that the cesset executio is with the consent and for the benefit of the debtor and he should not be permitted to take advantage of the lapse of time. Hutsonpiller's Admr. v. Storer's Admr., 12 Gratt. (53 Va.) 579. And see Wakefield v. Brown, 38 Minn. 361, 37 N. W. 788, 8 Am. St. Rep. 671; Michell v. Cue, 2 Burr. 660, 97 Eng. Reprint 498.

claim is disposed of.<sup>9</sup> But the pendency of an action in equity instituted by the creditor to subject certain property to the satisfaction of his judgment will not have the effect of stopping the running of the limitation.<sup>10</sup>

(E.) DEBTOR'S ABSENCE FROM STATE. — It has been held that the time in which the debtor is absent from the state will not be excluded in computing the limits by the statute for the issuance of execution,<sup>11</sup> but the weight of authority seems to be to the contrary.<sup>12</sup>

(V.) Effect of Premature Issuance. — A writ of execution issued prior to the expiration of the time given by the statutes as a beneficial delay to the judgment debtor is not thereby rendered void, but is merely irregular,<sup>13</sup> and must be respected and obeyed by the ministerial officer, until vacated by appropriate legal proceedings,<sup>14</sup> which

(VI.) On Transcript or Abstract of Judgments of Inferior Courts.<sup>16</sup> Some statutes providing for the filing of a transcript or abstract of an inferior court judgment in a superior court, have been construed to prolong the life of the judgment transferred, so that execution may issue thereon at any time within the limit for judgments of the superior court.<sup>17</sup> Under other statutes, however, a contrary view is maintained, that the writ of execution can issue upon the transcript only within the same period of time as it could have issued upon the judgment if it had not been removed by transcript.<sup>18</sup> While under other statutes giving to the act of filing the transcript the same effect as rendering a judgment, it is held that this period begins at the time the transcript is filed and docketed.<sup>19</sup>

[a] The effect of the latter construction, as said in Holton v. Schmarback, 15 N. D. 38, 106 N. W. 36, is to make a justice court judgment superior to a district court judgment, for it gives the person in whose favor the justice court judgment is rendered all the advantages obtainable in the justice court, and also authorizes him, by filing a transcript thereafter, to have the full period for all district court remedies.

tion of the particular court rendering the judgment,<sup>20</sup> at least until execution had been issued therein and returned nulla bona.<sup>21</sup> And this rule still obtains except in so far as it has been changed by statutes.<sup>22</sup> Statutes sometimes provide that executions issued upon any judgment, order or decree rendered in any court of record, may be directed to any county in the state.<sup>23</sup> There are similar provisions in other states permitting the issuance of executions to counties other than that in which the judgment was rendered,<sup>24</sup> though under some circumstances the execution must be directed to the county where the property is situated.<sup>25</sup>

[a] Condition Precedent.—The docketing of a judgment in the county to which the execution may go is a condition precedent of the authority to issue it, and a statutory power upon condition precedent cannot be executed without compliance with the condition.

The docketing of a judgment in another county is jurisdictional to an execution upon it to that county. Kentzler v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 47 Wis. 641, 3 N. W. 369. And see Bugbee v. Lombard, 88 Wis. 271, 60 N. W. 414.

[b] Both an Authority and a Prohibition.—The language of the code that executions against property "can be issued only to a county, etc.," seems to involve both an authority and a prohibition; an authority where the judgment is docketed in any county to issue the execution to that county; and a prohibition couched in the word "only" against any such issuance to a county in whose clerk's office there is no such docket. Dunham v. Reilly, 110 N. Y. 366, 18 N. E. 89.

[c] Only the original judgment may be used as a basis for the filing of the transcript in a different county. The judgment creditor may take as many copies of the original judgment as he may need, and file them in as many different counties, but he cannot take a copy of the record of one of the transferred judgments and make that a basis of a new transfer upon which to sue out an execution. Nelson v. Guffey, 131 Pa. 273, 18 Atl. 1073.

[d] Docketing Not Presumed.—"The fact of the existence of the judgment in the county of its rendition, and that an execution had been issued to another county, does not afford any presumption of the existence of the independent and material fact essential to its validity; namely, that the judgment had been properly docketed in such (other) county. . . . A mere recital of such docketing, if any there had been, in the execution would not supply the defect in a case such as this, where a judgment duly docketed is indispensable to the validity of the execution." Bugbee v. Lombard, 88 Wis. 271, 60 N. W. 414.

(2.) Conditions Precedent to Obtaining Issuance of Writ. — The requirements of the statutes, as to the preliminary steps to be taken by a personal representative or heir before he is entitled to have an execution in his name, on a judgment in favor of a decedent, are imperative and must be strictly complied with.<sup>41</sup> Thus the affidavits required by law must be filed.<sup>42</sup> And if the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff seeks to have execution issued, he must file a copy of the letters testamentary or of administration in the court in which the judgment exists,<sup>43</sup> and, under some circumstances, a bond.<sup>44</sup>

Upon compliance with all conditions precedent, execution will thereafter issue in favor of the legal representatives, heirs or successors in interest, in the same manner as if the judgment or decree were recovered in his name.<sup>45</sup>

(II.) Death of Co-Plaintiff. — At common law,<sup>48</sup> and still in some jurisdictions, where a judgment is recovered by several, and one or more of them dies, execution may be issued after the death in favor of the survivors without a revivor;<sup>49</sup> but the death of such plaintiff or plaintiffs should be suggested on the record.<sup>50</sup> Statutes, however, sometimes allow the revival of a judgment after the death of a co-plaintiff in the name of the legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff and the surviving plaintiffs, executions being thereafter sued out by them jointly.<sup>51</sup> And in some jurisdictions, the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs cannot issue execution, unless the executor or administrator of his deceased co-plaintiff is made a party.<sup>52</sup>

In the former class of cases, a writ of execution issued after the death of a sole defendant is void; in the latter class of cases, where the decree is its own authority for execution, and where nothing can be done except what was adjudicated in the lifetime of the parties, it may be executed after the death of a sole defendant." *Kellogg v. [a] Reasons for Holding Writ Voidable.—“After judgment there is no way to get the fact of death upon the record, except by a motion to quash or to stay the execution. This would come from the heirs or representatives of the execution defendant. But if the execution is held to be void, there is no need to do this. The heirs are most likely to know of the death, and hence are the most proper persons to bring the fact upon the record. A plaintiff ignorant of the death may proceed in good faith with his execution, while the heirs, who know the fact, stand by, allow him to go on and then call him to account for proceeding under a void execution. . . . But if the execution be held to be voidable only, it puts the duty of moving for its stay upon the parties who have an interest in the stay. . . . If it be said that the heirs may be ignorant of the judgment and execution, not being parties to it, a sufficient answer seems to be that, as the judgment against the ancestor is prima facie binding upon his estate, there is less chance of injury to their rights in holding the execution to be voidable than to the rights of him who has the execution in holding it to be void. Moreover, the latter course would, in many cases, require the unnecessary trouble and expense of scire facias, because the heirs, having no defense against the judgment, might be quite as willing to allow satisfaction to be made on the execution upon the original judgment, as on an execution in scire facias. We think, therefore, that if the heirs wish to avoid the execution they should be the ones to proceed." Hodges v. White, 19 R. I. 717, 36 Atl. 838.

[c] Revival Unnecessary. — Under such a statute, there is no necessity of the judgment being revived, the only limitation on the right to issue execution after the death of the defendant is that the judgment shall be a valid subsisting lien, and that the writ shall not issue until after the appointment of the administrator or executor, and not within six months thereafter. Bayley v. Davis, 215 Fed. 165, under Oregon statute.

[d] Period may be shortened upon leave obtained from court. Lord's Ore. Laws, 1910, §220; Knott v. Shaw, 5 Ore. 482.

(E.) NECESSITY AND FORM OF NOTICE OR DEMAND.<sup>73</sup> — Statutes, under which no revivor is necessary generally provide that notice be given the legal representatives or the heirs of the deceased debtor of the existence of the judgment, before execution will issue thereon.<sup>74</sup> It is not necessary that the creditor state that he intends to take out execution upon the judgment,<sup>75</sup> nor when he will do so.<sup>76</sup>

Notice of Application for Leave To Issue.<sup>77</sup> — Statutes providing for the issuance of execution against the property of a decedent upon leave of court,<sup>78</sup> also provide for the giving of notice of the application for such leave, to the persons whose interests in the property are to be affected,<sup>79</sup> and to the executor or administrator of the judgment debtor.<sup>80</sup>

73. Necessity for notice as prerequisite to issuance of execution, see generally infra, II, B, 1, i, (II), (B).

74. See generally the statutes, and the following: U. S.—Ransom v. Williams, 2 Wall. 313, 17 L. ed. 803. Colo.—Mills' Ann. St., 1912, §4210. Ill.—Hurd's Rev. Trimpey, 36 Pa. 463, under Act Feb. 24, 1834, §33.

[a] Demand of Payment.—Where the year after the death of the defendant has elapsed, "no execution should be awarded until the heirs and administrator have an opportunity afforded them to pay the judgment without execution. If they fail to do so on proper demand, it should still be made to appear, before leave to issue execution be granted, that the respondent (defendant) died seized of property which has come to the hands of his heirs or administrator, and which is chargeable by law with the payment of the debts of the deceased." Eaton v. Youngs, 41 Wis. 507.

[b] Execution issued without such notice is void. See Coran & Co. v. Pittenger, 92 Ill. 241; Finch v. Martin, 19 Ill. 105; Lafin v. Herrington, 16 Ill. 301.

[c] Notice to the heirs is not required (1) unless the statute specifically provides that it be given. "It would probably be better practice to give such notice, and the failure to do so might be sufficient ground for quashing the execution on a timely application." Bayley v. Davis, 215 Fed. 165. (2) It is not required, under some statutes, unless there is no legal representative. Hurd's Ill. Rev. St., 1916, ch. 77, §39; Fitch v. Gray, 162 Ill. 337, 44 N. E. 726.

[d] Non-resident heirs or representatives (1) may be given notice by publication. Hurd's Rev. St., 1916, ch. 77, §39; Wilson v. Lowmaster, 181 Ill. 170, 54 N. E. 922; Fitch v. Gray, 162 Ill. 337, 44 N. E. 726. (2) Otherwise, notice not personally served but delivered to a member of family is insufficient. Wilson v. Lowmaster, 181 Ill. 170, 54 N. E. 922. (3) An affidavit for publication of notice, may state the residence of the heirs on information and belief. Fitch v. Gray, 162 Ill. 337, 44 N. E. 726.

[e] Mistake in Notice.—A notice which apprises the heirs of a judgment recovered in a certain year, while the execution sought to be obtained, is or a judgment of a subsequent year is insufficient. Pickett v. Hartsock, 15 Ill. 279.

(V.) Death of Co Defendant.—At common law and under some statutes, issuance of a writ of execution is not prevented or delayed by the death of a part only of a number of defendants; it still issues against all the defendants though operative only as against the survivors, where there was no revivor.<sup>81</sup> But the existence of a statute providing for the issuance of execution against the survivors does not prohibit the reviving of the judgment against the legal representatives or heirs of the deceased co-defendant.<sup>82</sup> Such a revivor is necessary, if execution is also sought as against the estate of the deceased;<sup>83</sup> and some statutes expressly give the option of reviving the judgment as against such representatives or heirs.<sup>84</sup>

i. Procuring Issuance of Writ or Writs.<sup>85</sup> — (I.) In General. An execution against the property generally issues as of right.<sup>86</sup> There may be circumstances, however, under which execution will not issue without some step being taken to procure the issuance of the same.<sup>87</sup>

A party ordinarily may have execution on his judgment though he is at the same time prosecuting an action thereon.<sup>88</sup>

Where Second Judgment Has Been Rendered. — In some jurisdictions the fact that a second judgment may have been rendered in an action upon the first will not prevent the issuance of execution<sup>89</sup> upon the non's Code, 1896, §4716 (revival by scire facias); Frierson v. Harris, 5 Coldw. 146, 94 Am. Dec. 220.

[a] In such a case, a scire facias issued to the heirs "to show cause, if any they have or can, why said judgment should not be revived against them" is not sufficient to authorize the issuance of an execution; the scire facias should be against the heirs "to show cause why execution should not be issued against the real estate of the ancestor, descended to the heirs." Frierson v. Harris, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 146, 94 Am. Dec. 220.

[a] The right to an execution to enforce a judgment is a valuable one, and can only be taken away or suspended by some act, suit or proceeding for this purpose in compliance with law. It can never be taken away by anything less. Halmes v. Dovey, 64 Neb. 122, 89 N. W. 631.

[b] An execution may be issued during the term at which the judgment is rendered, upon the request of the judgment plaintiff, without motion, affidavit, or order of the court. Carpenter v. Vanscoten, 20 Ind. 50. Execution issues as matter of course within certain time after judgment. See supra, II, B, 1, f, (II).

87. Prerequisites to issuance, see infra, II, B, 1, i, (II).

Effect of death of parties upon right to issuance, see supra, II, B, 1, h.

[a] "Where a controversy as to the facts upon which the right of a replevin bail to execution rests is likely to arise, there is a manifest propriety in obtaining an order for execution before proceeding to enforce the judgment he has replevied, for his own use; but we know of no statutory provision which can be construed to require that such an order shall be first obtained." Jones v. Rhoads, 74 Ind. 510.

[a] An equitable action to enforce the satisfaction of a judgment, is merely a cumulative remedy, and does not prevent the plaintiff from collecting his judgment by execution, while the same is pending. White v. Moore, 100 Ky. 358, 38 S. W. 505.

[b] If the statutory time has not expired after the rendition of the judgment, it is competent for the creditor to take out an execution, notwithstanding the pendency of an action on such judgment. The execution will be valid, though the levy of it may operate to defeat a recovery in the action. Cushing v. Arnold, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 23.

[c] The remedy by execution is cumulative merely, and the statute giving it does not take away the common-law right of suing on the judgment. Kingsland & Co. v. Forrest, 18 Ala. 519, 52 Am. Dec. 232.

As to actions on judgments, see infra, III.

first judgment, but according to other authorities the first judgment is merged in the second.<sup>90</sup>

(II.) Prerequisites to Issuance.<sup>91</sup> — (A.) IN GENERAL. — Statutes may prescribe terms upon which executions will issue,<sup>92</sup> and when they do so, no one can dispense with those terms.<sup>93</sup>

The necessity for docketing the judgment as a prerequisite to issuing the writ is treated elsewhere in this article.<sup>94</sup>

(B.) NOTICE AND DEMAND.<sup>95</sup> — In the absence of a statute requiring notice to be given the judgment debtor of the issuance of an execution upon the judgment as a prerequisite to its issuance, none need be given.<sup>96</sup> Under statutes providing that a party in whose favor a judgment is rendered may, at any time within a certain period, have execution issued thereon,<sup>97</sup> no notice to the adverse side need be given prior or as a condition to the issuance of execution.<sup>98</sup> But the circumstances in a particular case may make a notice to the defendant necessary.<sup>99</sup>

[a] Motion for leave to issue execution to revive a dormant judgment may be granted the plaintiff, although he had brought another action for the same debt and recovered judgment therein. McLean v. McLean, 90 N. C. 530.

[a] Presumption.—The law presumes that a judgment debtor will take notice of what will follow when a judgment has been recovered against him. Ayres v. Campbell, 9 Iowa 213, 74 Am. Dec. 346.

97. See supra, II, B, 1, f, (II), (B).

98. Foster v. Young (Cal.), 156 Pac. 476.

[a] Notice of the rendition or entry of judgment or of the making and filing of findings, is not a condition precedent to the issuance of an execution. Foster v. Young (Cal.), 156 Pac. 476. As to necessity of notice of making and filing findings in general, see 8 STANDARD PROC. 1019.

99. Hall v. Moore, 70 Miss. 75, 11 So. 655; Davis v. Bell, 57 Miss. 320. See Barre v. Affleck, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 274, wherein the execution was issued on a referee's report before notice given to the adverse party.

[a] Where a judgment for a small amount of costs was recovered and no execution issued thereon for a long period of time, during which the debtor was in a position to satisfy the costs, if such effort had been made, but as soon as the defendant was temporarily absent, the creditor speedily had an execution issued and thereunder purchased the defendant's property at a gross inadequacy of price, he will be held to be a trustee for the defendant, unless he shows that he has given notice, by mail or otherwise, to the defendant, warning him of the intended issuance of the writ, and of the threatened levy and sale, and thus afford him a fair opportunity of preventing a sacrifice of his property. Hall v. Moore, 70 Miss. 75, 11 So. 655; Davis v. Bell, 57 Miss. 320.

After death of defendant, see supra, II, B, 1, h, (IV), (E).

Notice of application for leave to issue execution, see infra, II, B, 1, i, (II), (C), (2), (b).

A demand for the payment of a judgment is not ordinarily necessary before issuing execution thereon.<sup>1</sup> There may be circumstances, however, under which a demand is necessary.<sup>2</sup>

(C.) LEAVE OF COURT. — (1.) Necessity for. — No application for leave to issue an execution is necessary where there is an affirmance of a judgment in the appellate court and a remittitur of the record.<sup>3</sup> Nor is such leave necessary upon the discharge or dissolution of an injunction restraining the enforcement of a judgment,<sup>4</sup> or before issuing execution upon installments falling due where the judgment fixes the date of payment and the amount of each installment.<sup>5</sup> Nor is it required to entitle plaintiff, in a judgment entered by warrant of attorney, to have execution.<sup>6</sup> But under some circumstances leave of court must be obtained.<sup>7</sup> Thus where the judgment rendered is conditional, execution can be issued only upon an application and showing that the condition has been removed.<sup>8</sup>

The necessity for leave of court to issue execution after the death of a sole defendant is treated elsewhere in this title.<sup>9</sup>

Lapse of Time. — Where the statutory period within which executions must usually issue has expired, provision is made for issuance execution for the installments as they fall due; but this is not absolutely necessary." Cochran v. Elliott, 1 Lack. Leg. N. 363; Skidmore v. Bradford, 4 Pa. 296.

2. Necessity for demand on heirs or personal representatives after death of sole defendant, see supra, II, B, 1, h, (IV), (E).

6. A scire facias is not required to entitle plaintiff, in a judgment entered by warrant of attorney, to have execution. Templeton v. Shakley, 107 Pa. 370, 377; Jones v. Dilworth, 63 Pa. 447; McCann v. Farley, 26 Pa. 173; Bank of Chester v. Ralston, 7 Pa. 482; Reynolds v. Lowry, 6 Pa. 465; Skidmore v. Bradford, 4 Pa. 296.

8. Trively v. Krouse, 2 Com. Pleas (Pa.) 254; Shackelford v. Apperson, 6 Gratt. (47 Va.) 451.

[a] Option of Judgment Debtor. If the condition is of such a nature as to leave it to the option of the judgment debtor whether or not to perform it, an execution may be taken out without leave of court after the failure to perform the condition within a reasonable time. Miller v. Milford, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 35. See Coulter v. Lumpkin, 94 Ga. 225, 21 S. E. 461.

[a] Scire facias to obtain the issuance of an execution is a judicial writ. Kennebec Steam Towage Co. v. Rich, 100 Me. 62, 60 Atl. 702.

[b] The action of scire facias to obtain execution upon a prior judgment should be heard and determined by the court which rendered the judgment and which alone has the record of it. Kennebec Steam Towage Co. v. Rich, 100 Me. 62, 60 Atl. 702, holding that a statute providing that the superior court "has exclusive jurisdiction of scire facias on judgments and recognizances not exceeding five hundred dollars," does not in terms nor by necessary implication take away the inherent jurisdiction of that court over scire facias to obtain execution upon its judgments, even though the debt and costs in the aggregate exceed five hundred dollars.

however,<sup>14</sup> the proceeding generally being by motion or petition,<sup>15</sup> in the court in which the judgment was rendered.<sup>16</sup> It is not necessary to set forth the judgment or a copy thereof in the motion or application.<sup>17</sup> But the fact that a judgment remains unsatisfied should be made to appear by affidavit of a party, his agent or attorney.<sup>18</sup> In an application for leave to issue execution against the property of a deceased person, the real estate to be affected by the proceedings should be described.<sup>19</sup> Under a statute providing for the issuance upon leave of execution against the wages, debt, earnings, salary, etc., of a judgment debtor, it should be made to appear that the judgment was

[b] No formal complaint, as in ordinary suits, is necessary. A written notice of motion, showing the names of the parties, the date, and amount of the judgment, is sufficient. Simpson v. Wilson, 16 Ind. 428.

[c] No pleadings are required or contemplated by the statute, and the action of the court in striking out pleadings filed cannot be the basis of an assignment of error in the supreme court. If the judgment-defendant has any equities, or cross-action, he must resort to his remedy by suit. Plough v. Reeves, 33 Ind. 181; Van Devanter v. Nixon, 5 Ind. App. 304, 31 N. E. 203. 19. Matter of Bentley, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 89.

[a] But it is not necessary that all of the judgment debtor's property be described. Wadley v. Davis, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 570, wherein the court said: "The affidavit used furnished a description of certain real estate of the debtor, and we think it is no defense to the application to show that the debtor had other lands upon which the judgment was a lien. There is nothing in the sections regulating the proceedings, requiring a description of all the debtor's property to be given before an order is made, that a judgment be enforced . . . with like effect as if the judgment debtor was still living. (Secs. 1379, 1380, 1381; Matter of Clark, 2 Abb. N. C., 208.)"

[b] Petition Should Show Judgment a Lien.—Where a statute provides that execution may be had, after one year from the death of any defendant in a judgment for money, by leave of the court rendering the judgment, against any property upon which such judgment was a lien at the time of the death of the defendant, the petition or application should show that the judgment was a lien at the time of the death of the defendant. Alsop v. Cowan, 66 Miss. 451, 6 So. 208, wherein the court said: "To entitle the plaintiff to execution under §1751 of the code he must have had a lien at the time of the death of the defendant, but in this case the petition fails to show that the judgment was a lien in the only way by which it could become such, i. e., by enrolment, and it shows affirmatively that the lien of the execution was destroyed by the quashal of the levy. Therefore, the petition, by which the parties chose to test their rights, is insufficient to show a right to execution." recovered wholly for necessities sold,<sup>20</sup> and that no similar execution remains outstanding against the judgment debtor.<sup>21</sup> Where the application is made by one not a party plaintiff in the judgment sought to be enforced, it is not necessary that the facts showing ownership of the judgment in the applicant be stated.<sup>22</sup>

The parties to the application are discussed elsewhere.<sup>23</sup>

(b.) Notice of Application.<sup>24</sup> — When the statute does not require notice of an application for the issuance of an execution, an order for execution is not invalid for want of previous notice of the application,<sup>25</sup> but the court may require such notice.<sup>26</sup>

Statutes sometimes provide for notice of an application for an order granting leave to issue an execution,<sup>27</sup> in which case, an order made

[a] Due Process of Law.—Notice of a motion for leave to issue execution is not necessary to constitute the due process of law which is guaranteed by the United States constitution. "The due process of law there guaranteed is obtained by the service of summons on the defendants or their subsequent appearance in the action before judgment. Perhaps in some cases circumstances may appear which would make it an abuse of discretion to make such an order without notice, or which would make it imperative to vacate the order on motion or reverse it on appeal." Harrier v. Bassford, 145 Cal. 529, 78 Pac. 1038.

26. McAuliffe v. Coughlin, 105 Cal. 268, 38 Pac. 730, holding that upon plaintiff's "motion for an order that execution issue it was proper and regular practice for the court, of its own motion, to order the defendant to show cause why plaintiff's motion should not be granted; thus giving the defendant an opportunity to be heard in answer to that motion. The order to show cause was simply a notice of the motion, and a citation of the defendant to appear at a stated time and place and show cause why plaintiff's motion should not be granted." See also Pollard v. Pollard, 2 Mon. (Ky.) 16.

[a] Execution Upon Judgment for Alimony.—In Newcomb v. Newcomb, 12 Gray (Mass.) 28, it was held that the court would not issue an execution for alimony without notice to the respondent. Compare, Bell v. Walsh, 130 Mass. 163, wherein the court said: "Under the modern statutes, although it is not usual to issue an execution for alimony without previous notice and hearing, yet it is within the discretion of the court, upon a consideration of all the circumstances of the case, to order such an execution to issue without notice." Enforcement of decree for alimony by execution, see generally 7 STANDARD PROC. 835.

[a] Such a statutory provision is intended for the benefit of the judgment debtor to prevent execution on his realty until his personalty has been exhausted, and must be urged by him in a direct proceeding to quash the process; it cannot affect the rights of third persons in a collateral proceeding. Jordan v. Bradshaw, 17 Ark. 106, 65 Am. Dec. 419. And see Webster v. Daniel, 47 Ark. 131, 14 S. W. 550.

[b] Under a statute which requires that an execution shall be first issued below where the defendant resides in the county at the time of issuing the execution, it is of no consequence, when the defendant does not at such time reside in the county, that he resided there at the time of obtaining the judgment, or that no execution had formerly issued from the justice. Mathewson v. Kilburn, 183 Mo. 110, 81 S. W. 1096; Tracy v. Whitsett 51 Mo. App. 149.

Super. 165, holding that a certificate of the return nulla bona in the justice court is unnecessary in a county to which the judgment has been transferred from the superior court of the county wherein the justice's judgment was issued.

[a] In cases aided by the levy of an attachment upon realty, the issuance of an execution and its return nulla bona is not a prerequisite to the filing of the transcript in the circuit court. Hawkins v. Wills, 49 Fed. 506, 1 C. C. A. 339.

[b] In Missouri, (1) prior to 1907, issuance of an execution from the justice's court and a return of nulla bona thereon were necessary before execution could be issued upon the transcript (Langford v. Few, 146 Mo. 142, 47 S. W. 927, 69 Am. St. Rep. 606; Loring v. Maysville Creamery Co., 70 Mo. App. 54), where the judgment was against a resident; it was otherwise when the judgment was against a non-resident. See Rogers v. Wilson, 220 Mo. 213, 119 S. W. 369; Mathewson v. Kilburn, 183 Mo. 110, 81 S. W. 1096; Sachse v. Clingsmith, 97 Mo. 406, 11 S. W. 69; Johnson v. Latta, 84 Mo. 139; Perkins v. Quigley, 62 Mo. 498; Tracy v. Whitsett, 51 Mo. App. 149. (2) The construction of the early statutes allowed the filing of the transcript in the circuit court before the issuance and nulla bona return of execution in the justice's court; but no execution could issue on the transcript until after such issuance and return in the lower court. Wineland v. Coonce, 5 Mo. 296, 32 Am. Dec. 320. (3) It was also held that though irregular to issue an execution from the circuit

No leave of court is necessary to the issuance of an execution on a transcript filed as required.<sup>52</sup>

(B.) SCIRE FACIAS TO PROCURE.—In some jurisdictions a proceeding by scire facias was at one time a prerequisite to the issuance of an execution from the superior court upon a justice's transcript filed therein.<sup>53</sup> Such proceeding was heard in the court in which the transcript was filed.<sup>54</sup>

j. Compelling Issuance of Writ.—(I.) By Clerk.—The issuance of a writ of execution is a purely ministerial duty of the clerk,<sup>55</sup> which becomes an imperative one when he is requested to issue the writ by a person entitled to it.<sup>56</sup> On his refusal to issue execution on a valid, subsisting judgment, he may be compelled to do so by mandamus,<sup>57</sup> or clerk's office on a justice's transcript which showed that the execution was returned before the day, yet a sale under such an execution was not void and subject to collateral attack. Gorman v. Stanton, 5 Mo. App. 585. See also Dillon v. Rash, 27 Mo. 243.

For effect of filing a supersedeas bond where no notice of appeal served, see infra, II, B, 1, f, (IV), (B).

[b] Where a motion to set aside a judgment and grant a new trial was left undecided at the adjournment of court, and the clerk for that reason refused to issue a writ of execution, the court granted an alternative writ of mandamus, requiring the clerk to issue execution or show cause for his refusal. People v. Cloud, 3 Ill. 362.

[c] Where Judgment Set Aside. Mandamus to compel the clerk to issue an execution will be refused where there is a minute entry showing that the judgment was set aside. State v. Thompson, 118 Tenn. 571, 102 S. W. 349.

[d] Where a clerk has accepted an amount less than that due from appelupon motion in the case in which such writ or process properly issues.<sup>58</sup> But the writ peremptorily requiring execution to be issued will not be granted, if the issuance requires anything more than a mere ministerial act.<sup>59</sup> And the judgment creditor must have performed all conditions precedent giving him the right to demand issuance of the execution.<sup>60</sup> So too, it must appear that the clerk has clearly and unmistakably refused to perform a merely ministerial duty.<sup>61</sup> If the request for execution is made within the period of statutory limitation, mandamus will not be refused because of laches.<sup>62</sup>

Existence of Another Remedy.—If the statute affords a remedy which is plain, speedy and adequate, mandamus will not lie until such remedy has proven fruitless.<sup>63</sup> But it has been held that mandamus will not be refused on the ground that the petitioner has a remedy at law if that remedy is only a suit on the clerk's official bond.<sup>64</sup>

lants in full satisfaction of the costs of appeal, and upon appeal the judgment is reversed, mandamus will not lie against the clerk to compel him to issue execution against the respondents for any greater amount than the appellants paid. Greer v. Whitley, 135 Ga. 333, 69 S. E. 479.

58. Moore v. Muse, 47 Tex. 210. And see Eppstein & Co. v. Holmes & Crain, 64 Tex. 560.

59. Holtum v. Greif, 144 Cal. 521, 78 Pac. 11; Thompson v. Sleeper, 168 Mass. 373, 47 N. E. 106.

[a] When the right of the judgment creditor to execution has been modified by something which has occurred after judgment, and facts must be found which are not of record in order to determine how far this right has been modified, mandamus will not issue against the clerk until these facts have been found by the court and the clerk ordered to issue execution in accordance therewith. Thompson v. Sleeper, 168 Mass. 373, 47 N. E. 106.

[b] Where an order was made with a condition annexed, the clerk cannot be expected to pass judicially upon the question whether the condition has been performed or not, and a writ of mandamus will not be directed to the clerk to issue execution upon such order. Holtum v. Greif, 144 Cal. 521, 78 Pac. 11.

60. Pease v. Morris, 138 Mass. 72, failure to file bond in default case.

61. Compton v. Airial, 9 La. Ann. 496; People ex rel. Sackett v. Woodbury, 70 App. Div. 416, 75 N. Y. Supp. 236.

[a] In Compton v. Airial, 9 La. Ann. 496, it was held that mandamus will not lie to compel a clerk to issue an execution for arrears of alimony, where it does not appear that an application and a proper showing have first been made to the judge who rendered the decree of alimony.

[b] Ambiguous Judgment.—A clerk will not be compelled by mandamus to issue execution upon a judgment open to two constructions, under one of which the plaintiff is not entitled to execution. Hall v. Stewart, 23 Kan. 396.

62. State v. Renick, 157 Mo. 292, 57 S. W. 713.

63. Thus, where a statute confers authority upon a court to direct a clerk in the performance of his official duties, an application to, and a refusal by, such court to so direct its clerk, is a prerequisite to the granting of a mandamus against the clerk. Pickell v. Owen, 66 Iowa 485, 24 N. W. 8; State ex rel. Ogden v. Frank, 52 Neb. 553, 72 N. W. 857; State ex rel. Sloan v. Moores, 29 Neb. 122, 45 N. W. 278.

64. Cal.—Garoutte v. Haley, 104 Cal. 497, 38 Pac. 194 (money judgment sought to be enforced); People ex rel. Carpenter v. Loucks, 28 Cal. 68, where judgment awarded possession of land. Mo.—State v. Renick, 157 Mo. 292, 57 S. W. 713, money judgment. Ohio. State ex rel. Pacific Guano Co. v. Eager, 2 Ohio Cir. Dec. 335, 3 Ohio Cir. Ct. 581. Tex.—Jones v. McMahan, 30 Tex. 719, where amount of bond less than judgment.

But see Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal. 278,

(II.) By Judge.—Mandamus will lie against a judge to compel him to direct the issuance of a writ of execution, if such direction requires merely the performance of a ministerial duty on his part.<sup>65</sup> But he cannot be compelled to issue the execution, if he has a clerk whose duty it is to issue it.<sup>66</sup> Where the court acts judicially in refusing to order execution to be issued, mandamus will not lie to compel him to order it,<sup>67</sup> nor to review the act of the court.<sup>68</sup>

(III.) Parties to Proceeding.—In proceedings to procure mandamus to compel the issuance of an execution, all persons interested should be made parties.<sup>69</sup>

and Goodwin v. Glazer, 10 Cal. 333, wherein the court held that where the judgment was merely a money judgment mandamus would not lie, but the proper remedy was an action on the clerk's bond.

[a] Remedy by Action on Bond Not Adequate.—The court in State ex rel. Pacific Guano Co. v. Eager, 2 Ohio Cir. Dec. 335, says: "It may be true that the clerk and his bondsmen are liable to respond to the relator in damages in an action at law for his wrongful refusal. If, however, this should be done and judgment recovered, the clerk or his successor might again defeat the object of the suit by refusing to issue a writ of execution, and this might be repeated indefinitely. If, however, this danger is more fanciful than real, yet we think the remedy by action not adequate to enforce the relator's right. By the judgment of the court it had established, not only its right to a sum of money, but its right to the process of the court for its immediate collection; and the full and adequate protection of this right requires a more summary remedy than that afforded by a new action; the writ of mandamus gives that remedy, and the relator is entitled to its benefits."

65. Cal.—Holtum v. Greif, 144 Cal. 521, 78 Pac. 11. Mich.—Gaskill v. Jackson Circuit Judge, 159 Mich. 472, 123 N. W. 1131, 16 Detroit Leg. N. 957. Wash.—State ex rel. Jefferson County v. Hatch, 36 Wash. 164, 78 Pac. 796.

[a] Thus, where the supreme court in affirming a judgment, directed that execution issue thereon and remanded the cause to the superior court for further proceedings in compliance with the decision, it was the duty of the trial court to order execution issued and on its refusal to so order, mandamus will lie to compel him to do so. State ex rel. Jefferson County v. Hatch, 36 Wash. 164, 78 Pac. 796.

[b] Appeal Not Adequate Remedy. Where it is the plain duty of a court to order execution, a writ of mandamus is the proper remedy to compel him to do so, for the remedy by appeal although plain is neither speedy nor adequate. "The appeal, in the ordinary course, would not be decided for a long time, and pending the appeal there would be no security for the payment of the judgment. And, besides, nothing would necessarily result from an appeal beyond a reversal of the order, and this would merely confirm the right of the petitioner to execution—a right already complete. So that unless the judgment of reversal was accompanied by a mandatory direction to order the issuance of execution, the petitioner would find himself at the end of his appeal precisely where he is now—with a right to demand the issuance of the writ, but with no power to compel it." Holtum v. Greif, 144 Cal. 521, 78 Pac. 11. See also State ex rel. Jefferson County v. Hatch, 36 Wash. 164, 78 Pac. 796.

k. Joint and Several or Separate Judgments and Executions.<sup>70</sup> Where the judgment distinctly states the amount each one of two plaintiffs is entitled to, executions may issue in favor of each for the share belonging to him.<sup>71</sup> But a person in whose favor a judgment is rendered cannot divide it and order several executions issued upon it for the amounts into which he divides it.<sup>72</sup> An assignee of a part of a judgment will not be allowed to issue execution upon so much of the judgment debt as is assigned to him.<sup>73</sup>

Though the judgment be against several defendants in solidio, execution may issue against any one of them,<sup>74</sup> unless the statute otherwise provides.<sup>75</sup> Where judgment is rendered against part only of several defendants, execution can issue only against those found liable.<sup>76</sup> But where the proceeding is against several, and judgments against one or more are entered at one time, and against others at another time, one

None of its provisions, indeed, require that an execution must be issued against all the defendants, and it nowhere requires that the sheriff must, in the body of the execution, be commanded to enforce the judgment against all the defendants. It is only where it is desired to collect the judgment out of the joint property of all the defendants, or where some provision in the judgment itself requires it, that the sheriff must be directed to levy upon the joint property of all. Notwithstanding the fact that the judgment is against two or more defendants, the plaintiff has the legal right to collect it out of the separate property of either."

other states, however, the rule as to this matter is otherwise.<sup>82</sup>

m. Recording.—In some jurisdictions every writ of execution issued against lands shall, before it is delivered to the sheriff or other officers for execution, be recorded by the clerk of the court out of which the writ issued.<sup>83</sup>

2. Form and Sufficiency of Writ.<sup>84</sup>—a. In General.<sup>85</sup>—Statutes sometimes provide forms for writs of execution;<sup>86</sup> and where such is the case the writ should follow the language of the statute,<sup>87</sup> although it is sufficient if the statutory form is substantially preserved and followed.<sup>88</sup> Where no form is prescribed for any particular case, the court may vary the statutory form prescribed so as to comply with the requirements of the case in hand.<sup>89</sup>

The writ may be written on one or more sheets of paper,<sup>90</sup> and where tion to the deputy is in law, delivered to the sheriff. Albrecht v. Long, 25 Minn. 163.

[f] Depositing the writ in a pigeon-hole in the clerk's office is not a sufficient issuance (Burton v. Deleplain, 25 Mo. App. 376), even though such pigeonhole is set apart for the exclusive use of the sheriff. Person's Appeal, 78 Pa. 145.

[g] A delivery to the sheriff with instructions to do nothing is no delivery. Cook v. Wood, 16 N. J. L. 254.

Who may levy execution, see infra, II, B, 5.

82. Davis v. Roller, 106 Va. 46, 55 S. E. 4, holding that an execution is issued within the meaning of the Virginia code, when it is made out and signed by the clerk ready for the officer, marked "to lie," although it has not been placed in the hands of the officer to be levied. The court in this case said: "The defendants in the judgment insist that this execution does not comply with our statute . . . the precise contention of defendants being that no execution can be said to have issued upon a judgment unless it be not only made out by the clerk but placed in the hands of an officer to be levied; and counsel cites authorities from other jurisdictions which seem to support this position. In this state, however, the law seems to be otherwise."

[a] A mere entry of the title and date of entry in the book of execution will not be sufficient; the provisions of the statute are not merely directory. Voorhees v. Chaffers, 24 N. J. L. 507.

[b] The failure to so record an

more than one sheet is used, they may be fastened together in any convenient manner.<sup>91</sup>

Presumption of Regularity.<sup>92</sup> — Since all public officers are presumed to do their duty, an execution should be regarded as being issued in the form required by statutory provisions until the contrary appears.<sup>93</sup> Other presumptions in aid thereof will also be indulged.<sup>94</sup>

Surplusage. — Unnecessary matters contained in the writ will not render it invalid, but will be disregarded as surplusage.<sup>95</sup>

Statement as to Affidavits Filed. — It would seem to be unnecessary that the writ should recite the fact or the substance of affidavits which may have been filed as a foundation for any procedure in regard to the writ.<sup>96</sup>

91. Glover v. Bass, 162 Ala. 267, 50 So. 125.

94. It is presumed that every execution issued by a proper officer, which recites a judgment as its basis, has in fact a judgment to stand upon. Gross v. Mims, 63 Ga. 563.

[a] In the absence of the appearance and judgment dockets it will be presumed that the costs were properly taxed on them, and that the amount stated in the execution is correct. Merwin v. Hawker, 31 Kan. 222, 1 Pac. 640.

[b] Where a clerk issued an execution directed to another county it is presumed that the proper affidavit authorizing the issuance of such execution was filed, and an allegation in an answer to a bill in equity denying that an execution had been issued in the county where judgment had been rendered, is insufficient to overthrow the presumption that the clerk properly performed his duty. *Gorman v. Collier, use of officers of court," is not void, but furnishes a protection to the officer levying it, if issued by a court of competent jurisdiction; the words "use of officers of court" may be rejected as surplusage. McElhaney v. Flynn, 23 Ala. 819.

[b] An affidavit being made "for the purpose of foreclosing the lien on a saw-mill, and all the lumber, the product of said mill," and the execution directing the sheriff to levy on the engine and fixtures as well as the saw-mill and lumber, if the engine and fixtures were no part of the mill, their insertion in the execution was surplusage, and the execution would still be good as against the mill and its products. Bennett v. Gray, 82 Ga. 592, 9 S. E. 469.

96. Though a statute authorizes the clerk to issue the writ against the personal representative of the deceased debtor upon the receipt of an affidavit informing him of such death and appointment, it was held not necessary that the clerk should recite in the writ the fact that he had received his information through the required affi-

b. Title and Court.—The statutes generally provide that the writ shall run in the name of the state or the people thereof.<sup>97</sup> But the failure of an execution to run in the name of the state is generally held to be a defect of form only, which does not make it void.<sup>98</sup>

The writ should show out of what court it issued.<sup>99</sup>

c. Description of Judgment Generally.—The writ of execution should contain a recital as to or description of the judgment upon which it is founded;<sup>1</sup> and show that it is issued and enforced as an davit. Scott v. Lyons, Solomon & Co., 59 Tex. 593.

[a] In Lebreton v. Lemaire (Tex. Civ. App.), 43 S. W. 31, it was said that there was no necessity for the fact that an affidavit had been filed to obtain an execution instantan to appear in or upon the execution.

St. Rep. 922, the execution complained of reads in the commencement thereof: "State of Washington, Clallam County, ss.: To the sheriff of Clallam County, Greeting," and then proceeded in the usual form followed in executions. The court said: "It may be that this form is not strictly in compliance with the statute and constitution, but we are not prepared to hold that it was fatally defective; and inasmuch as no objections were made to the confirmation of the sale, we cannot hold the sale void by reason of this alleged defect."

[a] When the discrepancy between the judgment and the execution is a mere trifle, levy and sale will not be disturbed; but when it is material it cannot be overlooked. Hastings v. Johnson, 1 Nev. 613.

[b] It is not a substantial defect in a writ that it describes a judgment by confession as having been obtained in an action. Healy v. Preston, 14 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 20.

[c] Where a matter of fact is the foundation of the action, and matter of record is only the inducement thereto, a variance in the execution in the description of the record is not material, unless so great as to amount to a strong probability that the record cannot be the writing described. Stewart v. Severance, 43 Mo. 322.

[d] A variance between an execution and judgment may be so marked as to raise the inference that the judgment mentioned in the writ is not the judgment upon which the writ was is-the court rendering the judgment,<sup>9</sup> or in the title of the cause,<sup>10</sup> or a mistake in the recital of the date of the judgment,<sup>11</sup> or a mistake in or failure to recite the date of the docketing of the judgment,<sup>12</sup> will not render the writ void; the defect or omission will be disregarded or amended.<sup>13</sup> If the execution is so defective as not to identify the suit in which it issues, it will be considered void, however.<sup>14</sup>

d. Designation of Parties and Capacity.—(I.) In General.—The execution must contain the names of the parties plaintiff to the sued, but such inference may be rebutted by proof. Corbin v. Pearce, 81 Ill. 461.

[e] Where the judgment contains a condition that the damages recovered were to be released upon the payment of the debt, with interest and costs, the execution should contain such condition, but its omission does not render the writ void, but merely voidable. Hall v. Clagett, 63 Md. 57.

[a] Where the clerk in issuing the execution described the judgment as rendered by the county court, when in fact it was a judgment of the supreme court, it was merely a clerical error. The writ was formal in all other respects and it was stated that the judgment was recovered at a time when only the supreme court could have been in session, a fact of which judicial notice will be taken. The writ furnishes the data for its own rectification and is valid. Ross v. Shurtleff, 55 Vt. 177.

[a] If an execution correctly refers to the judgment, in such manner as to identify it, it is sufficient to justify the sheriff in enforcing it, even if it contains an error in reciting the day on which the judgment had been rendered. Franklin v. Merida, 50 Cal. 289.

[b] Mistake of one day in reciting date of judgment not fatal. Stewart v. Severance, 43 Mo. 322, 97 Am. Dec. 392; Swift v. Agnes, 33 Wis. 228.

[c] The fi. fa. need not name the term at which the judgment on which it rests was rendered. It is sufficient if it declares that it was lately rendered in court and is for a stated amount of principal, and a stated amount of interest up to a certain date, together with the interest from that date. If the execution follows the judgment, that is enough. Drawdy v. Littlefield, 75 Ga. 215.

[a] A mere failure to state the names of all of the parties in whose favor the judgment has been rendered does not necessarily nullify the writ, and there may be a sufficient description of the judgment although there be lack of fullness in the matters mentioned by the statute. But, besides a description of the judgment, it is essential that the writ show against whom it is to operate. Without the command to take the property of a named person the officer has no authority to take that of any one. Without this command there is no writ; and without the name of the person whose property is to be taken there is no command. Collins v. Hines, 100 Tex. 304, 99 S. W. 400; Capps v. Leachman, 90 Tex. 499, 39 S. W. 917.

and this is true, notwithstanding that from death, bankruptcy or some other cause no levy can be made on the property of some defendants.<sup>19</sup> If an appeal is entered by part of the defendants and the judgment affirmed as to all, the most convenient and less expensive course is to include all in one execution, expressing therein distinctly the several liability of each, if different, as where damages and costs have been allowed against the appellants.<sup>20</sup>

Capacity of Parties. — If the judgment is recovered against a person in a representative capacity, the execution must show that it issues against him in that capacity alone.<sup>21</sup> This is not sufficiently shown

[a] The rule, that where a judgment is joint, the process to enforce its payment must also be joint, is technical, and has more of form than substance in it; and the court out of which the process issues will take care that it is not used so as to work an injustice. Sheetz v. Wynkoop, 74 Pa. 198; Mortland v. Himes, 8 Pa. 265.

[b] "An execution (1) against A & B for a sum which it recites that the plaintiff has recovered against 'him' is void upon its face, as it is uncertain against whom the judgment was rendered." Farmers' Nat. Bank v. National Bank, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 451. (2) But an execution commanding the sheriff to levy upon the property of A, B and C, to satisfy a judgment which D had recovered against the said A and others, is not objectionable for not stating the recovery to have been against the said A, B and C, the expressions being substantially the same. McCoy v. Elder, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 183.

[c] Use of Conjunctive.—An execution against several defendants to reach individual property does not have to say, nor does it ever say, A "or" B, but it always says A "and" B; and so it would do, putting the word and before the last defendant, and nothing before any of the others, were there a score of defendants. Parler v. Johnson, 81 Ga. 254, 7 S. E. 317.

[a] But see Kendrick v. Rice, 16 Tex. 254, following Turner v. Smith, 9 Tex. 626, where it is held that the name of a deceased defendant was properly omitted from the writ for the reason that the execution could not be enforced against his estate.

Gerry*, 7 Ill. App. 238.

[c] The fact that one of the judgment debtors has been declared a bankrupt and discharged subsequent to the entry of judgment will not render an execution which had run against all, invalid. Linn v. Hamilton, 34 N. J. L. 305.

by a word or words following the name of the person in such form that they are merely descriptio personae.<sup>22</sup>

(II.) Conformity to Judgment. — In accordance with the rule requiring the execution to conform to the judgment,<sup>23</sup> it must conform thereto in respect to the parties named therein,<sup>24</sup> as well as to their capacity.<sup>25</sup> One not a party to the judgment<sup>26</sup> must not be named

[a] A judgment in favor of one person is certainly no authority for a process to issue in the name of another person; and such an execution, being on its face entirely disconnected with the judgment offered to support it, cannot be shown to have been in fact issued on such judgment, although it was so intended by the officer who issued it, and an execution which is complete on its face cannot be sworn to refer to a judgment other than one which would authorize such an execution to issue. *Smith v. either as an execution plaintiff, or defendant.<sup>27</sup> The addition of the initial of a middle name in the execution will not avoid the process as a material departure from the judgment, however.<sup>28</sup> An execution issued against the members of a corporation is variant from a judgment recovered against the corporation.<sup>29</sup>

An execution reciting a judgment in favor of one person, but failing to state that it was recovered for the use of another is merely voidable.<sup>30</sup> Conversely, an execution reciting that the judgment was rendered in favor of one person, for the use of another, is merely irregular where the judgment was in favor of the beneficiary named in the execution.<sup>31</sup>

(III.) Effect of Omission of Name or Capacity.—It is generally held that the omission of the name of the plaintiff,<sup>32</sup> or defendant in execution,<sup>33</sup> renders the writ of execution void, if the judgment is not otherwise identified and shown to be the same one upon which the writ issues.

Where the name of one of several defendants is omitted, it has been held that the execution is merely irregular,<sup>34</sup> subject to being set aside, if properly attacked in a direct proceeding.<sup>35</sup>

The failure to state the capacity of the parties, being an amendable defect, will not render the writ void.<sup>36</sup>

(IV.) Effect of Mistake or Defect in Designation.—Even though there is a mistake or defect in reciting the names of the parties plaintiff,<sup>37</sup>

[a] An execution directing that the amount of the judgment be collected out of the "separate property of the judgment debtor, John Goldberg, first name fictitious, real name unknown to the plaintiff," is void, as it allows the levy to be made upon the property of any Goldberg. *Goldberg v. or defendant,<sup>38</sup> the force and effect of the writ will not be destroyed in a case where the judgment is otherwise so plainly described and identified as to make it apparent who the parties are, and that the writ in question issued upon such judgment.<sup>39</sup> The same is true where the names defectively stated or omitted can be corrected or supplied by reference to the record.<sup>40</sup> But where the judgment cannot be identified, a mistake in the name of the parties will render the writ void;<sup>41</sup> and this is true even though the mistake is merely in the Chris-

[a] The writ will not be rendered void by reason of the insufficient description of the parties when they may be identified by consulting the complaint. Simmons v. Sharpe, 148 Ala. 217, 42 So. 441.

[b] Where the writ correctly recited in whose favor the judgment had been rendered, but in the clause directing to whom the proceeds should be paid, failed to recite all the parties plaintiff, omission was immaterial. Smith v. Sweat, 60 Ga. 539.

[c] Where a judgment reads that the receiver of the plaintiffs shall recover of the defendants, an execution stating the recovery as in favor of the plaintiffs is sufficient, if the identity of the judgment is otherwise established. Harlan v. Harlan, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 107.

[a] Where the defendant is correctly described in one part of the writ, the fact that he is incorrectly described in another part of the writ, is immaterial, the identity of the person being apparent. Gorman v. Stanton, 5 Mo. App. 585.

39. The mere transposition of the words "plaintiff" and "defendant," being merely surplusage, will not affect the validity of the writ. McIntyre v. Sanford, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 21.

[a] Although the execution did not state in whose favor the judgment was rendered but recited that judgment was rendered "between A as plaintiff, and G as defendant," and ordered that the property of "said judgment debtor" be sold to satisfy the judgment, the fact that it was subscribed by the plaintiff's attorneys sufficiently indicated that the defendant was the judgment debtor referred to, and if that was not enough, reference could be had to the judgment and the roll. Morrison v. Austin, 14 Wis. 601.

40. Miller v. Willis, 15 Neb. 13, 16 N. W. 840.

[a] Indorsement on Writ.—Failure of the execution to recite the name of the plaintiff in the body of the execution does not render it void, but merely irregular, where the name was indorsed on the back of the writ. McGuire v. Jacobs, 82 Ala. 411, 2 So. 832, holding such an execution void.

Shepperd*, 57 Ga. 68 (judgment against W. M. described in writ as a judgment against W. M. Jr. renders writ void where both persons reside in the county).

[a] "A judgment in favor of one person is certainly no authority for a process to issue in the name of another person; and such an execution, being on its face entirely disconnected with the judgment offered to support it, cannot be shown to have been in fact issued on such judgment,

tian name.<sup>42</sup> But an execution against two persons, in which the name of one is erroneously stated, is not void as against the one who is correctly described.<sup>43</sup>

Effect of Misdescription of Capacity.—An execution issued for or against a person in a different capacity than that in which the judgment is rendered, is void.<sup>44</sup>

e. Designation of Amount of Judgment.—(I.) In General.—If execution is issued upon a money judgment, it must state the amount thereof,<sup>45</sup> as well as the amount actually due thereon when the writ is issued.<sup>46</sup> An execution which varies from the judgment as to the

although it was so intended by the officer who issued it. An execution which is complete on its face cannot be shown to refer to a judgment other than one which would authorize such an execution to issue." Smith v. Bell, 107 Ga. 800, 33 S. E. 684, 73 Am. St. Rep. 151.

[b] Where a judgment is against the Water Lot Company of the City of Columbus, an execution against the Water Lot Company is substantially variant therefrom. "The name of a corporation is of its very essence; by that name it is empowered to sue, and by it it is liable to be sued; . . . it can only be known in all legal proceedings by that name." *Bradford v. [b] Judgment by Default.—The fact that the judgment was entered upon the default of the defendant does not change the rule that an execution issued for a greater amount than the judgment calls for is merely irregular and not void. Merely because he had failed to answer the complaint did not release him from the duty incumbent upon him to see that the judgment did not allow a greater amount than the court was authorized to award under the allegations of the complaint or that the execution did not call for a greater sum of money than the judgment called for. *Shirran v. [a] The purpose of the statute is, to inform the party against whom the execution issues of the amount of the costs with which he is charged, and the particulars composing it. The statute should be fairly construed, and when the bill of costs is not calculated to mislead, the writ is not offensive to the statute. Maxwell v. Pounds, 116 Ala. 551, 23 So. 730.

[b] A plaintiff must be deemed to have waived his costs by taking out an execution for damages only, "not only because he could have but one execution for damages and costs, but because, unless he is deemed to have the execution and judgment as to the amount or rate of interest to be collected, where deemed a mere clerical error, renders the writ only voidable;<sup>57</sup> but where there is a strict application of the general rule that the writ must conform to the judgment in all respects, such a variance is held to render the writ void.<sup>58</sup> Where the execution as issued varies in the amount or rate of interest or costs from the statute allowing interest or costs, it is held to be void.<sup>59</sup>

executed, or other proper officer.<sup>61</sup> If the sheriff is a party to the cause or interested therein, or if the office is vacant, some statutes provide that the writ shall be directed to the coroner,<sup>62</sup> or to a person designated by the court.<sup>63</sup> If the sheriff and coroner are both interested, then the writ is directed to the jailer.<sup>64</sup>

A failure to properly direct the writ as a general rule only renders it irregular, that is voidable and not void.<sup>65</sup> But where there is not simply a mistake or error in the direction, but a total non-compliance with the statute, the writ is void and not merely voidable.<sup>66</sup> Where the writ is directed to the coroner or other officer than the sheriff, the property shall be applied may not render the execution wholly void,<sup>74</sup> but it is held that a positive misdirection in this respect totally invalidates the process.<sup>75</sup> It is sometimes provided that if the judgment is a lien upon real property, then the writ must direct satisfaction out of any real property belonging to the debtor on the day when the judgment was docketed or thereafter;<sup>76</sup> or if the execution is issued to another county, that it shall direct satisfaction out of any real property belonging to the debtor on the day the transcript of the judgment docket was filed or thereafter.<sup>77</sup> If the writ be against real or personal property in the hands of personal representatives, heirs, devisees, legatees, or tenants of real property, or trustees, it should direct that the judgment with interest be satisfied out of such property.<sup>78</sup>

Where the debt, for which judgment is confessed, is not all due, the sheriff must be directed to collect only the sum stated in an indorsement thereon to be due at the time the writ is issued.<sup>79</sup>

An execution issuing upon a judgment in an attachment suit, need not direct the sheriff to levy upon the proceeds of the goods attached, for rections.—Where an execution supplements a judgment which provided that execution issue against the goods and chattels of the defendant, by directing, as the statute provides it shall, that in event the goods and chattels are insufficient, the officer shall levy on the lands and tenements, it is not variant from the judgment. Houck v. Cross, 67 Mo. 151.

[b] Where the judgment has ceased to be a lien on the land the execution must conform to §1252, Code Civ. Proc. Garczynski v. Russell, 75 Hun 497, 27 N. Y. Supp. 465, 57 N. Y. St. 673.

74. Where a writ commands the sheriff "to levy upon the real estate, goods and chattels of" the defendants, instead of directing a resort to the personal property, and then a levy upon the realty, though informal it is not thereby invalidated. Wright v. Young, 6 Ore. 87.

75. An execution is void which commands the sheriff to collect the judgment out of the attached personal property of the judgment debtor, and if that is insufficient, out of his attached real property; where the case is one in which, under the statute, the execution must go first against the attached personal property, second against the other personal property of the judgment debtor, and lastly against the attached real property. *Place v. (2.) Joint or Separate Property. — Where the action was on a joint indebtedness and some of the defendants were not served and did not appear, the execution should direct satisfaction out of the joint property of all the defendants and the individual property of those who were served or who appeared.<sup>87</sup>

An execution upon a judgment against a married woman must direct that it be levied and collected from her separate property,<sup>88</sup> unless it may lawfully be satisfied out of other property.<sup>89</sup> If it does not, it is erroneous in form, though such error does not vitiate the writ.<sup>90</sup>

(D.) WHERE JUDGMENT FOR COSTS. — If the execution is for costs, it should require the sheriff to satisfy it out of any property of the execution defendant liable to execution.<sup>91</sup>

(E.) WHERE JUDGMENT PAYABLE IN SPECIFIED CURRENCY. — If the judgment is made payable in a specified kind of money or currency, the writ must direct the sheriff to satisfy the same in the kind of money or currency specified.<sup>92</sup>

(F.) AS TO RETURN OF WRIT. — The writ should on its face fix the return day thereof.<sup>93</sup> A failure to fix the day or place of return, or an

[b] Where (1) the direction in the writ varies from the statute fixing the time within which the return is to be made, the return must be made as the statute directs, regardless of the language of the writ. Mitchell v. Corbin, 91 Ala. 599, 80 So. 810; Waldrop v. Friedman & Loveman, 90 Ala. 157, 7 So. 510, 24 Am. St. Rep. 775. (2) But an erroneous direction as to the return of an execution is of no consequence, because the law, and not the direction contained in the writ, is controlling. In re Henry Kupfer & Co., 165 App. Div. 570, 150 N. Y. Supp. 1037. (3) But in Bond v. Wilder, 16 Vt. 393, it was held that an execution made returnable in sixty days, when it should have been made returnable in one hundred and twenty days, was void, and would afford no justification to an officer seizing and selling property under it.

[b] At common law it was necessary that executions should bear teste in term time, and be made returnable to the next succeeding term; but for a failure in either respect, the process although erroneous, was not void, but amendable. . . . In this country executions are not required either to bear teste or be made returnable in term time, but as a substitute for that rule of the common law, they are to bear teste by the clerks of the courts respectively, and to be made returnable to the rule days of the said courts, so that there be at least thirty and not more than ninety days between the teste and return of the writ. But as the time required between the teste and return is not of the essence of the writ, but rather directory to the clerk in issuing it, an error in that respect should not have a greater operation than the making of an execution at common law bear teste out of term time would have, and consequently at most is but matter of error by which the party might avoid the process, but of which the sheriff in a proceeding against him cannot avail himself." *Wilson v. [a] Reference to Judgment for Description.—An execution against specific property described in the writ as "goods, lands, etc., of the said defendants recovered in this suit," is a sufficient reference to the judgment entered to make the description of the property therein a part of the execution, and thereby constituted a sufficient de-judgment decrees that an interest in property should not be sold until the termination of a lesser interest, the execution must make that exception.<sup>98</sup> An execution upon a judgment for the delivery of the possession of real or personal property must particularly describe the property intended,<sup>99</sup> and give the value thereof.<sup>1</sup> Some statutes require an execution on a judgment for the purchase price of land, to describe the land.<sup>2</sup>

If the writ fails to describe the property to be levied upon, or to so refer to it that it may be identified, it will be void;<sup>3</sup> but a slight error in the description will not render the writ void.<sup>4</sup>

h. Conformity to Judgment.—It is a general rule that an execution should conform to the judgment upon which it is predicated in every essential particular.<sup>5</sup> It should conform to the judgment in

In most jurisdictions the rule now is that the date of the writ actually does, and by law, should express the true time of issuing the execution,<sup>13</sup> although under some statutes, they are still tested as of the first day of the term next before the date of issuance.<sup>14</sup> The omission by the clerk to date the writ or an erroneous date is not fatal to the case.<sup>15</sup>

[a] Failure To State Official Capacity After Signature.—The failure of the clerk of the circuit court, who under the constitution is also clerk of the county court, to add the words "county clerk" after his signature in issuing an execution from the county court does not render the execution absolutely void because of the provision of sec. 1574 of the Revised Statutes which requires that the "clerk of the county court shall sign all papers required to be signed pertaining to said county court as 'county clerk,'" when he signed the execution as "clerk" and affixed the seal of the county court thereto. [a] In O'Donnell v. Merguire, 131 Cal. 527, 63 Pac. 847, 82 Am. St. Rep. 389, the court said: "Section 682, Code Civ. Proc., prescribes that an execution shall be issued in the name of the people, sealed with the seal of the court, and subscribed by the clerk. The 'test,' as it has been understood, is not required. Under these code provisions, every execution must be subscribed by the clerk. No other mode is provided for its authentication, and without it there can be no writ of execution. It is mere waste paper. Respondents submit a list of authorities which they contend support the view that the execution is not void, although not signed by the clerk. That may be true where the writ is otherwise authenticated as it is in New York and many other states where execution must be signed by the party in whose favor it is issued, or, as said there, by the party who issues it. If so signed, it is not void, although not authenticated by the clerk. Such a document could not be regarded as a writ in this state."

[a] In the case of Hunter v. Burnsville Turnpike Co., 56 Ind. 213, the court said: "There are cases which hold, that writs without a seal are not void, but voidable only, and that they may be amended, after they have been served, by attaching the seal. We incline to follow that line of decisions which holds, that process, without the proper seal, is voidable only, and therefore amendable, as being more in consonance with the general spirit of the law, which regards substance more than form. Much hardship and injury might accrue to purchasers of property on execution, or their vendees, if the sale happened to be made on an execution to which the seal, by inadvertence of the clerk, had not been affixed, if the defect could not be amended by affixing the seal." [a] Prior (1) to the code in Tennessee, it was held that an execution was void if the items of cost were not indorsed in words at length on the execution; but where there was a judgment for debt and damages in addition to the costs, it was held that an illegal abbreviation of the items of cost would not render the execution void, or release the sheriff from his duty in enforcing the same as to the judgment for debt and damages and the legal items of cost. Meadows v. Earles, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 299; Warder v. Millard, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 581; Hopkins v. Waterhouse, 2 Yerg. 230. (2) But since the code, the provision has been held merely directory, for the strong and emphatic language of the old acts was not carried into the code, and an omission to write out at length the items, or to itemize the bill of costs, on an execution, will not invalidate it or a levy and sale thereunder. Meadows v. Earles, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 299; Warder v. Millard, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 581.

[b] Separate Bill of Costs Attached to Writ.—When an officer issuing an execution attaches to the writ a separate paper having thereon a bill of the costs, itemized in the manner prescribed in §5394 of the Georgia Civil Code, this paper becomes a part of the execution itself, and the action thus taken by the clerk is equivalent to properly indorsing the bill of costs thereon. merely, or the interest,<sup>31</sup> are indorsed upon the writ before delivery.

Under some statutes, the names of the attorneys of record must be indorsed on the writ.<sup>32</sup>

Upon Death of Party.—Where execution issues after the death of one or all of the plaintiffs, the clerk must indorse on the writ the fact of the death of such of them as are dead.<sup>33</sup> If all be dead, he must also indorse the names of the personal representatives or last survivor,<sup>34</sup> as well as the name and residence of the person issuing the writ.<sup>35</sup>

Where less than all of several defendants have died, execution, while operative only as against the survivors where there is no revivor, issues against all the judgment debtors,<sup>36</sup> and so it is required that the fact of the death be indorsed on the writ, to prevent levy being made upon the property of a deceased co-defendant.<sup>37</sup>

(IV.) Operation and Effect of. — The facts stated in the indorsement upon a writ, where required by statute, are as much a part of the writ as if they had been inserted in the body of the execution;<sup>44</sup> and an omission or mistake in the body of the writ may be supplied or corrected from the indorsements.<sup>45</sup> It has even been held that where the amount due upon the judgment as stated in the body of the writ varies from that stated in the indorsements, that the latter amount prevails.<sup>46</sup> But where there is no statutory authority providing for the indorsement of any facts upon the writ, an indorsement is then no part of the writ.<sup>47</sup>

The indorsement upon an ordinary fieri facias of the description of property attached at the beginning of the action, does not change the character of the writ.<sup>48</sup> Nor will the indorsement of the words "alias" and "pluries" change an original writ to an alias or pluries execution.<sup>49</sup>

Conclusiveness. — A sheriff's indorsement has been held to be conclusive evidence as to the time the writ came into his hands,<sup>50</sup> but other indorsements have been held to be merely prima facie evidence.<sup>51</sup>

(V.) Effect of Omission or Defect in Indorsement. — It is generally held that an omission of or defect in the indorsement will not<sup>52</sup> render the

[a] An indorsement made by the clerk on the execution, that "there shall be no exemption of personal property against this execution," was wholly without authority of law and hence a mere nullity, not in any manner constituting a part of or affecting the execution itself. In such case, the

[a] A failure to make a required indorsement can only be questioned in execution invalid; it may be cured by amendment in this respect.<sup>53</sup>

m. Amendment of Writ.—(I.) In General. — According to the strict rules of the common law, errors in the writ were not amendable.<sup>54</sup> The courts now, however, are very liberal in allowing the amendment of writs of execution so as to correct mistakes in mere matters of form or clerical misprisions.<sup>55</sup> In many jurisdictions, this power to amend and rectify errors in their writs is given the courts by statute.<sup>56</sup> But independent of statutes, the inherent powers of the courts over their process are sufficiently expansive to embrace such an authority,<sup>57</sup> especially if the record contains the data by which to make the amendment.<sup>58</sup>

The power to amend a writ of execution should be exercised only a direct proceeding. Johnson v. Walker, 23 Neb. 736, 37 N. W. 639.

[b] The failure of the clerk to indorse the date and the amount of the judgment upon the writ, does not render the writ illegal or prevent collection of the principal and interest. Manry v. Shepperd, 57 Ga. 68.

[c] Failure to indorse that the writ was issued by personal representative of deceased plaintiff does not render the execution void. Deyo v. Borley, 63 Hun 631, 18 N. Y. Supp. 300, 43 N. Y. St. 638.

[d] An unauthorized indorsement on a writ will not invalidate it or subject it to quashal, but the indorsement should be annulled. McGowan v. Hoy, 2 Dana (Ky.) 347.

in furtherance of justice.<sup>59</sup> The mere fact that the amendment may affect existing rights, is not, in itself, sufficient to make the court refrain from exercising this power,<sup>60</sup> though it does have some influence on the exercise thereof.<sup>61</sup>

An amendment should be allowed only when there can be no doubt, from the records, that the execution sought to be amended did in fact issue upon the judgment to which the amendment makes it conform;<sup>62</sup> and it must appear that the party seeking the amendment was really entitled to such process as was attempted to be issued.<sup>63</sup> A writ which had no existence cannot be created by an amendment.<sup>64</sup> Therefore, an execution can only be amended when merely voidable, and not when absolutely void.<sup>65</sup>

Alterations or Interlineations. — A material alteration in a writ after its issuance will render it void,<sup>66</sup> at least as to the party accountable

57, must always be something in the record by which the amendment may be made.

[a] After Sale for Inadequate Price.—Where the property sold under an irregular writ brings an inadequate price, the law will ascribe the inadequacies to such irregularities, and will refuse to allow an amendment of the writ. White v. Taylor, 46 Tex. Civ. App. 471, 102 S. W. 747.

60. Greene v. Cole, 35 N. C. 425, as every amendment necessarily affects rights.

61. Execution Defendant Injured by Allowing Amendment.—An amendment to the writ will not be allowed in order to cure an irregularity and make a title based thereon good, where the defendants in execution had no actual and only a constructive notice that their land was sold; and where it appears that it was sold for a small, while worth a large sum; and where they had no chance to avoid the sale or redeem the land. With the amendment allowed the defendants would innocently and not negligently be great losers. The amendment disallowed, none of the parties will suffer any considerable loss. The purchaser can receive his money back. The original plaintiffs can renew their execution and proceed to collect it anew. In this result, the rights of all parties are substantially preserved. Hayford v. Everett, 68 Me. 505.

[a] Rights of Innocent Persons Involved.—The power of permitting amendments to writs is exercised for the promotion of justice, with no parsimonious hand; yet where its allowance would be destructive of the rights of innocent third persons, the court will scan well the grounds upon which its action is sought. *Cawthorn v. for the alteration,<sup>67</sup> though it has been held that some alterations do not wholly invalidate the writ,<sup>68</sup> and that where there has been an unauthorized erasure the writ may be restored to its original condition.<sup>69</sup> An apparent alteration will be presumed to have been innocently made before issuance of the writ.<sup>70</sup>

(II.) Matters Amendable.—(A.) IN GENERAL.—Although amendments to writs of execution are liberally allowed in some matters,<sup>71</sup> they are not allowed as to matters of substance.<sup>72</sup> Amendments are allowed for the purpose of correcting errors or misprisions of the clerk to matters of form;<sup>73</sup> thus, amendments have been held proper to correct deficiencies or irregularities in the writ, as to its caption,<sup>74</sup> or as to the

[a] The clerk is, by statute, expressly forbidden to amend or impair any process, pleading or record, without the order of the court; and, consequently, any such unauthorized change made by him in an execution would be as in the case of such change made by a stranger, mere spoliation, and would have no force to alter the legal effect of the writ. If, however, the plaintiff in the execution made the change, by the hand of the clerk, he thereby invalidated the writ as to his beneficial interest under it; and having become himself the purchaser of the land, the sale to him under the altered writ was void. [c] Setting Aside Order of Amendment.—An amendment of a writ having been made at one term, after notice and a full hearing of the parties, and no exception taken, a motion at a subsequent term to rescind the order and erase the amendment, upon a suggestion that they were made upon false testimony, will not be heard. In such case a new trial may be granted under the statute, where the facts will sustain the application. Russell v. Dyer, 39 N. H. 528.

39. Unfinished beer in the state of intermediate fermentation cannot be levied upon. Herman v. Phoenix Brew. Co., 25 Ky. L. Rep. 84, 74 S. W. 726. In this case the court says: "We have nothing to do with the argument of inconvenience in the case. The matter comes to whether the property proposed to be sold has a salable quality. Perhaps that could be best tested after an attempt to sell had been made. But such articles as molten iron, or glass in the furnace, burning charcoal in the pit, and coke in the ovens, or baker's dough, or brick in a burning kiln, hides in the vat, and beer in a state of fermentation, while undeniably having the qualities of chattels, are nevertheless in such imperfect state of transition from one thing to another that they really cannot be said to be either. Without further labor, and generally artistic or skillful labor, and the use of the realty, and the combination or mixture of other articles, they are practically worthless. The officer could not take them into possession, nor could he separate them from the bulk of which they are part, without destroying, perhaps, not only what he took, but probably much in addition, of even greater value. While doing the creditor no good, he would be utterly destroying the debtor. There can be no sense in allowing such an act. Although, in levying upon unwieldy objects, the officer may leave them in the debtor's possession, or in the possession of another (Hill v. Harris, 10 B. Mon. 120, 1 Am. Rep. 542), he could not require such person, against his consent, to give them further attention, and to put upon them his labor, time, and experience. It has been long since the creditor could force his debtor to involuntarily work for him. The facts of this case fairly illustrate such a situation: Five thousand barrels of beer in the tubs are levied upon. In its then state it will require on an average of four to six weeks' time and attention to perfect it so that it will have any market value whatever. To give it the necessary attention requires a plant worth $200,000; the labor and attention of a large and expensive force of workmen, more or less skilled in the trade of making beer; and the addition from time to time of other material than that already embraced in the beer when levied upon. When so completed, it would be worth $5.50 per barrel. In its then state, even allowing the privilege of such use and services, it was worth not exceeding $1.50 per barrel. Without the privilege of using the brewery, and without the labor and attention mentioned, it would be without any value. . . . Unfinished beer in the state of intermediate fermentation is not leviable under an execution, because, if the sheriff were so minded, he could not take it into his actual custody without destroying its nature and value. He cannot, as to it, satisfy the general rule as to what constitutes a good levy, viz., 'that the officer must do such acts as would subject him to an action for trespass but for the protection of the execution.' McBurnie v. Overstreet, 8 B. Mon. 303. While he might leave it with the defendant, yet the defendant may also refuse to be responsible for it, or to give it room or attention. It is not satisfactory to say that the officer would generally wait till the

And it has been said that the right to subject to execution is measured by the power to take and deliver possession.<sup>40</sup> A mere personal right or authority which is not assignable or otherwise separable from the person cannot be levied upon.<sup>41</sup>

(II.) Money. — Money which is the property of the defendant may be levied on while it is in his possession,<sup>42</sup> or capable of being identified as his property,<sup>43</sup> whether in specie or in bank notes,<sup>44</sup> when a trespass will not be committed in the taking.<sup>45</sup> The money need not be sold but may be used to satisfy the execution.<sup>46</sup>

Money deposited in a bank cannot be levied upon as such, since it be-product was so completed as to be marketable. The officer can no more be compelled to wait than can the debtor be compelled to work for his creditor. Nor should the sheriff be required to turn brewer, for which he has provided him neither the equipment, nor the necessary means, nor experience, probably, nor help, nor the time, without neglecting all other public duties. So the question must be determined as of any hour before the product reaches a salable condition. Public policy, which looks to the public welfare, forbids that the law's process, intended for the aid of creditors, and not for the punishment of debtors, should be perverted in its use by the creditor to such ruinous ends to the debtor, with no benefit to any one. Such property of a debtor can be reached by the law and subjected, in a proper case, by having a receiver appointed to take charge of it and perfect it. Adequate authority and means are to be had for such action."

of manual delivery,<sup>51</sup> nor does it come within a statute subjecting "lands and tenements, goods and chattels;"<sup>52</sup> but a provision that "any debt or thing in action, legally or equitably assignable," may be levied on, includes a judgment,<sup>53</sup> as does the provision "bills, notes, credits and all other evidences of indebtedness."<sup>54</sup>

(C.) BILLS, NOTES, BONDS, ETC. — At common law and in the absence of statute a promissory note is not subject to execution,<sup>55</sup> though there is authority apparently to the contrary.<sup>56</sup> It is held that a promissory note is "property" or "personal property,"<sup>57</sup> but not "goods and effects;"<sup>58</sup> or "goods and chattels;"<sup>59</sup> or "money and effects,"<sup>60</sup> within the meaning of statutes subjecting the same to levy under execution.

In the absence of statute, bonds are not subject to execution,<sup>61</sup> nor is a warrant drawn by a county on the county treasurer.<sup>62</sup> But notes and bonds are but choses in action and it would seem that in jurisdictions where by statute choses in action are subject to levy, notes and bonds may be reached on execution.<sup>63</sup>

The other lease contained similar provisions. Lessee being involved in financial difficulties and suffering severe losses in the first band, surrendered to the lessor the second band with fifty-eight head of sheep more than the latter was entitled to under the second lease, it being agreed that these fifty-eight head were to make good any loss in the first band when a final division should be made. The second band while in the possession of the lessor was not subject to levy under an execution against the lessees before final division, title to the sheep remaining in the lessor until that time.

[a] A copyright "has no corporeal tangible substance," and is not subject to seizure and sale by execution. It can be reached by a creditor's bill in chancery, but in such case, the court would probably have to decree a transfer in the mode pointed out in the act of congress. Stephens v. Cady, 14 How. (U. S.) 528, 14 L. ed. 528.

[b] "It is very well settled by the decisions of the United States Supreme Court that even after a work is pub-is subject to levy and sale,<sup>86</sup> but the author cannot be compelled to publish his copyrighted manuscript.<sup>87</sup>

(VII.) Trade-Marks and Trade Secrets. — The right to a trade-mark is held not subject to levy under execution,<sup>88</sup> though a sealed envelope containing trade secrets is.<sup>89</sup>

(VIII.) Unpublished Manuscripts, etc. — It has been held that unpublished manuscripts,<sup>90</sup> as well as the private papers and account books of the judgment debtor,<sup>91</sup> are not liable to levy under execution.

(IX.) Wearing Apparel. — The necessary wearing apparel of a judgment debtor is not subject to execution.<sup>92</sup>

(X.) Vehicles Carrying United States Mail. — It is held that a ferry

lished no creditor can reach the copy-right unless some special provision of law is made on the subject." Dart v. Woodhouse, 40 Mich. 399, 29 Am. Rep. 544.

[c] Creditor's bill would seem to be the remedy, see Ager v. Murray, 105 U. S. 126, 26 L. ed. 942; Gillett v. Bate, 86 N. Y. 87, 10 Abb. N. C. 88; Correll v. Dickson, 26 Fed. 454.

As to creditors' suits, see 6 STANDARD PROC. 164.

86. "A patented machine is susceptible of manual seizure, and the unrestricted sale thereof does not involve the transfer of any interest in the patent. Kent*, 15 Fed. 217.

[a] Although the grantee of a copyright for a book cannot be deprived by his creditors of any right secured to him by the constitution and acts of congress, yet the protection does not extend to the exemption of visible property received for the sale of such copyrights and existing in his own hands, or choses in action existing in the hands of another for his use, though such be the proceeds of a sale of the copyright, if the manuscript has been delivered over to the purchaser of the copyright, and nothing further is to be done by the grantee of the copyright, to give the work to the public. *Cooper v. [a] Abstract Books.—But in Washington Bank v. Fidelity Abstract & Security Co., 15 Wash. 487, 46 Pac. 1036, 55 Am. St. Rep. 902, 37 L. R. A. 115, the court speaking of Dart v. Woodhouse, supra, says: "This case holds that a set of abstract books, such as those in suit, is but the unpublished manuscript of an author, valuable only on account of its literary contents, and belongs to the class of unleviable property, such as a patent right or a copyright, which are held by most of the courts to be unassignable privileges, or incorporeal and intangible rights. We cannot indorse the conclusion or the reasoning of the case just cited. It seems to us that these abstract books were not so intangible or incorporeal that they could not be the subject of levy or of sale, and such was the holding in Leon Loan & Abstract Co. v. Equalization Board, 86 Iowa 127, 53 N. W. 94, 41 Am. St. Rep. 486, 17 L. R. A. 199, where the case of Dart v. Woodhouse, supra, was reviewed."

[b] In Banker v. Caldwell, 3 Minn. 94, it appears that unpublished papers were sold under execution but the propriety of this was not questioned. The case holds that by such sale the author did not lose his exclusive right of publication and the sheriff had no authority to publish them.

[a] But see Sandford v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 27 Ind. 522, where A contracted to build a vessel for B at a stipulated price, a part of which was to be paid in installments as the vessel should reach certain stages of completion, and the residue by a note payable ninety days after the boat should be removed. Installments were paid from time to time as stipulated and the materials and work were paid for by A out of this money. B employed an agent to superintend the building, and before the launch put a watchman in charge. Afterwards executions were issued against A, and he being unable to finish her, surrendered the vessel to B. It was held that the property in the vessel had passed to B, and was not subject to the liens of the executions.

95. Lumber was furnished to the contractor to be used in the erection of a building. The lumber was delivered on the ground on which the building was being erected, and subsequently sold on an execution against the contractor; it was held, that the lumber was furnished on the credit of the building, though not used therein, and being so furnished it was the property of the owner of the building and not liable to sale by execution as the property of the contractor. White v. Miller, 18 Pa. 52.

[b] "It is almost needless to say that such a diversion of the public moneys by judgment creditors might seriously embarrass the disbursing officers of the government, and might, at the same time, interfere with the proper administration of its judicial system by preventing the money specifically devoted by the public to the support and maintenance of its chosen officer, in a manner becoming the dignity of the office, from ever reaching the object contemplated." A creditor cannot "be allowed to divert the public moneys from the uses and purposes to and for which they were specifically appropriated, by orders or proceedings tending to appropriate the same to himself, in payment of judgments or otherwise. This is upon the pervading principle in all governments, that where private and public interests come in conflict, with proper exceptions the former must yield." Remmey v. Gedney, 1 City Ct. Rep. (N. Y.) 28.

the effect of statutes regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors on the question of their being subject to execution. Some courts hold that such statutes apply to sales under judicial process and that liquors are not subject to sale under execution to any greater extent than otherwise,<sup>3</sup> while other jurisdictions make an exception as to sales under process and hold that intoxicating liquors are subject to execution even though they cannot be sold in any other manner.<sup>4</sup> However, the process of the court cannot be used for the purpose of engaging in the sale of intoxicating liquors.<sup>5</sup>

So too, if the party has constructive, or implied notice of an unregistered deed, he is not permitted to acquire a title from the grantor, which shall override it. As if he find the grantee in possession of the premises, or is informed of any other fact, which would naturally put a careful and prudent man upon inquiry, in a direction where he might obtain information in regard to the title, and he omit to pursue the inquiry; and some other similar cases."

[a] The court in Emerie v. Gilman, 10 Cal. 404, 70 Am. Dec. 742, says: "We are unable to find any adjudged case in the other states going to the extent of the court in New England, and, as we have seen, the rule is there regarded as peculiar, or founded on immemorial usage. There appear to us insurmountable difficulties in the way of any just application of the rule. The inhabitants of a county are constantly changing; those who contributed to the debt may be non-residents upon the recovery of the judgment, or the levy of the execution; those who opposed the creation of the liability may be subjected to its payment, whilst those by whose fault the burden has been imposed may be entirely relieved of responsibility. Again, it is a settled principle that whenever one of several is held liable for their joint debt, he may have recourse, upon its payment, to the other for contribution. To enforce this right against the inhabitants of a county, even where its population is small, would lead to such a multiplicity of suits as to render the right utterly valueless."

[a] In Beardsley v. Smith, 16 Conn. 368, 41 Am. Dec. 148, a judgment was recovered against a municipal corporation and the court in holding that the execution issued upon the judgment might be levied upon and satisfied out of the private property of an individual member of the corporation, says: "We know that the relation in which members of municipal corporations in this state have been supposed to stand, in respect to the corporation itself, as well as to its creditors, has elsewhere been considered in some respects peculiar. We have treated them, for some purposes, as parties to corporate proceedings, and their individuality has not been considered as merged in their corporate connection. Though corporators, they have been holden to be parties to suits by or against the corporation, and individually liable for its debts."

g. Mortgaged Property.—(I.) On Execution Against Mortgagor.<sup>76</sup>—(A.) CHATTELS.—At common law on the mortgage of personal property title passed to the mortgagee subject to the equitable right of the mortgagor to reclaim it and in the absence of statute many courts hold that the latter's interest cannot be subjected to execution.<sup>77</sup> Some courts have modified this rule to the extent of holding that the mortgagor's interest cannot be taken on execution unless the amount of the mortgage debt be first tendered or paid the mortgagee.<sup>78</sup> Where the mortgagee is regarded as the owner and entitled to possession a provision in the mortgage giving the mortgagor possession for a definite time does not give the latter such an interest that it may be levied on under execution.<sup>79</sup> The generally recognized rule by statute or otherwise is that where the mortgagor is entitled to the possession as against the mortgagee the chattels are liable to be sold on execution against the mortgagor before breach of the condition,<sup>80</sup> or before the [a] In Reed v. Bigelow, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 281, it was held that after a sale on execution of an equity of redemption, the mortgagor has an interest remaining in him which he may convey by way of mortgagee, and his right of redeeming this second mortgage may be attached and sold on execution.

[b] To sell the entire estate when the equity of redemption is levied on, requires the consent of the mortgagor, mortgagee and plaintiff in fieri facias. Milner v. Pitts & Son, 117 Ga. 794, 45 S. E. 67.

[a] But see Pool v. Glover, 24 N. C. 129, holding that where a debtor has made a conveyance of his land to a trustee to be sold for the benefit of his creditors at a certain time, if the debts are not previously paid, and there is a resulting trust to himself, his equitable interest in the land may be sold under an execution, even before the day, when, by the terms of the deed, the trustee was authorized to sell his legal interest.

[b] In Alabama execution creditor has the right to pay off the debts secured by the trust and thus to be placed in the situation of, or substituted to the rights secured to, the beneficiaries under it. And in such event, the trustee would be compelled the deed of trust leaves an interest in the property in the grantor, this interest has been held subject to an execution against him.<sup>30</sup>

(B.) INTEREST OF TRUSTEE. — The dry naked legal title held by a trustee cannot be sold under an execution against him,<sup>31</sup> as an interest in to execute the trust for him in the same manner, thus tacking as it were, his execution debt to the trust deed. O'Neal v. Wilson, 21 Ala. 288.

[c] Where mortgaged property is foreclosed and the mortgagor on redeeming has the purchaser at the foreclosure sale convey the property to a trustee for the use and benefit of the wife of the redeeming mortgagor, the latter has no interest in the property subject to an execution at law, his interest can only be reached by a proceeding in equity. Wilson v. Beard, 19 Ala. 629.

The court held this property liable to levy in satisfaction of the debts of the grantor, saying: "It is wholly against the policy of the law to allow property, whether legal or equitable, to be fettered by restraints upon alienation, and generally whenever property is subject to alienation by the owner it is subject to his debts."

(C.) INTEREST OF BENEFICIARY OR CESTUI QUE TRUST.—The interest of the cestui que trust or beneficiary being an equitable one, would not, in the absence of statute and by the principles of the common law, be subject to execution,<sup>34</sup> though irrespective of statutory provision some courts hold such an interest subject to execution.<sup>35</sup> By the tenth section of the English statute of frauds trust estates were made liable to execution for the debts of the cestui que trust,<sup>36</sup> but this statute did not extend to the provinces.<sup>37</sup> The English courts construing this

[c] The Statute of Uses (1) rendering lands liable to execution against the cestui que trust, applies only to those fraudulent and covinous trusts, in which the cestui que trust has the whole real beneficial interest in the land, and the trustee the mere naked, and formal legal title. Bogart v. Perry, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 52. (2) It is not applicable to a case where one person enters into a contract for the sale and conveyance of land to another, and the vendee pays part of the consideration and enters into possession of the land, but neglects to pay the residue of the purchase money; for the vendor is not seized to the use of the vendee until the whole consideration is paid, and until then the vendee has a mere equitable interest which cannot be sold on execution. *Bogart v. (III.) Where Legal and Equitable Estates Intermingled. — When legal and equitable estates are intermingled the estates cannot be reached by an execution.<sup>52</sup>

1. Life Estates. — (I.) In Real Property. — (A.) IN GENERAL. — A life estate in lands is such an estate as to be subject to levy under an execution;<sup>53</sup> even, it has been held, though the instrument creating the estate benefit of a party that it cannot be alienated by him and creditors and assignees in bankruptcy cannot seize and appropriate it to the payment of debts.<sup>77</sup> Warner v. Rice, 66 Md. 436, 8 Atl. 84.

[c] By the use of no terms or art can property be given to a man, or to another for him, so that he may continue to enjoy it, or derive any benefit from it, as the interest, or his maintenance thereout, and at the same time defy his creditors and deny them satisfaction. The only manner in which creditors can be excluded, is to exclude the debtor also from the benefit from, or interest in, the property, by such a limitation, upon the contingency of his bankruptcy or insolvency, as will determine his interest, and make it go to some other person. Mebane v. Mebane, 39 N. C. 131, 44 Am. Dec. 102.

But if the trust was not disclosed, a bona fide purchaser at a sale under an execution against the trustee holding the legal title, would obtain a good title. Emmons v. Moore, 85 Ill. 304.

52. A lease with the option to purchase and providing that if the option is not exercised the lessee shall be paid one-half of the valuation of the improvements placed on the land, does not give the lessee such an interest in the leased premises as can be subjected to sale under an execution at law. [a] Where the life-tenant's interest was contingent upon, and subject to be diminished by after-born children whose rights would be the same as those in life when the levy was made the life estate was held too indefinite to be subject to levy under execution. 54. Where the right of possession and control of the property is given directly to the life-tenant, no trust being created, a provision in the devise creating such estate that the same shall not be subject to payment of the life-tenant's debts does not prevent the estate from being subjected to execution. Is there a vested interest and is it so definite as to be susceptible of description in terms of legal certainty?" Accordingly the reversionary interest of an heir held subject to execution.

[b] In Clark v. Hillis, 134 Ind. 421, 34 N. E. 13, here the reversioner died before reversion took effect in possession and it was held that his heirs took his interest subject to execution for the payment of his debts.

[c] Though the extent of the interest cannot be ascertained at the time of the sale, and the whole reversion is contingent upon the happening of events which may never occur, the reversionary interest is subject to execution. Woodgate v. Fleet, 44 N. Y. 1, 11 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 41.

In some jurisdictions the undivided interest of a legatee or devisee in any one portion of the estate cannot be subjected to the levy of an execution.<sup>94</sup>

(B.) WHERE WILL DIRECTS CONVERSION OF PROPERTY. — Where the will directs that land be sold and the proceeds given to certain legatees the latter have no interest in the land which can be subjected to execution.<sup>95</sup>

[a] "We do not hesitate . . . to say that the method of attacking a fraudulent conveyance of land by levying an execution on same, and then proceeding to sell the same under the writ, leaving the purchaser to contest the validity of the conveyance in an action of ejectment against the fraudulent vendee, is not to be encouraged. It is circuitous and cumbersome, and at last leaves a cloud upon the record title; for a court of law can never cancel and set aside a fraudulent conveyance." *Doster v. Manistee Nat. [b] Proceedings in Equity Give Better Title.—A judgment creditor who by a suit in equity has a deed by his judgment debtor to another set aside as fraudulent against himself as a creditor, and obtains a decree subjecting the property to sale under his judgment, and bids it in under such sale, obtains thereby a title superior to that of a prior judgment creditor who treats the fraudulent conveyance as void and purchases the property at a sale under execution upon his prior judgment. Preston-Parton Mill Co. v. Dexter, Horton & Co., 22 Wash. 236, 60 Pac. 412, 79 Am. St. Rep. 928.

have the fraudulent conveyance vacated by appropriate proceedings,<sup>9</sup> so if title be withheld from the purchaser he may recover the property in replevin or ejectment, according to the nature of the property,<sup>10</sup> though in some jurisdictions it would seem to be necessary for him to institute proceedings in equity to clear his title.<sup>11</sup>

(II.) Property Purchased in Name of Another. — When one purchases property causing title to be vested in a third person with a view to defraud his creditors, there is a resulting trust to himself for the benefit of his creditors, which, according to some courts, renders the property subject to an execution in favor of the creditors.<sup>12</sup>

The question in 1802, came directly before this court; and it was said, that such an interest was real estate, and often of great value. It descends to heirs, and does not go to executors. It passes by words in a devise, as real estate; and it would operate great injustice to give this statute a construction, by which equities of redemption should be exempt from the payment of debts. . . . *Punderson v. (VI.) Contract of Sale. — (A.) VENDOR'S INTEREST. — (1.) Real Property. (a.) Generally. — The interest of a vendor under a contract for the sale of lands where the vendee has been put in possession is subject to execution,<sup>52</sup> though a sale under such execution is subordinate to the right of the vendee to a conveyance on completion of payment.<sup>53</sup> But after payment of the purchase price, though a conveyance has not been executed,<sup>54</sup> or after a deed has been delivered, although the purchase money has not been paid,<sup>55</sup> an execution against the vendor cannot be levied on the property.

(b.) Oral Contract. — The vendor under an unenforceable oral contract for the sale of land has an interest subject to execution.<sup>56</sup>

(c.) Where Bond for Title Given. — Where a bond for title has been given, according to some courts, the interest of a vendor of land is not subject to sale under execution against him.<sup>57</sup> In other jurisdictions, however, until the whole of the purchase price is paid, title still remains in the vendor whose interest in the land is subject to levy and sale under execution.<sup>58</sup>

(d.) Vendor's Lien. — The lien of a vendor after conveyance of real property is not, nor does it give an interest in the property which is, subject to execution against him.<sup>59</sup>

fructus industriales, it is subject to levy,<sup>81</sup> though the weight of authority places fruit trees and their fruit in the class known as "fructus naturales," which are not leviable.<sup>82</sup> By statute in some states a crop is not subject to execution until it has matured.<sup>83</sup> And in other jurisdictions, independent of statute, it is held that immature crops are not subject to levy under execution as personalty.<sup>84</sup>

(III.) Fructus Naturales — Trees, fruit of trees, bushes and grasses growing from perennial roots, are generally regarded as "fructus naturales," and while unsevered from the soil are part of the realty and not subject to execution.<sup>85</sup> But where fruit is regarded as fructus industriales because annual labor is necessary for its production, it is subject to levy.<sup>86</sup>

Standing Timber. — The interest of a grantee in a deed to standing timber to be cut and removed during a certain period is subject to execution.<sup>87</sup>

Cropper's Contract.—See infra, II, B, 3, t, (VI).

Where Parties Are Tenants in Common.—See infra, II, B, 3, t, (V).

(B.) LESSEE'S INTEREST. — Where the relation of landlord and tenant exists, although the rent is to be paid by a portion of the crop, the parties are not tenants in common. The title to the whole is in the tenant until division is made, and is subject to an execution against him.<sup>89</sup> If by statute the landlord has a lien on the crop for rent the interest of the tenant cannot be levied on while the crop is still immature,<sup>90</sup> but it has been held that a levy upon the tenant's interest, where the crop is not removed from the premises, is valid.<sup>91</sup> After the share of the landlord has been delivered to him that portion is no longer subject to an execution against the tenant.<sup>92</sup>

(V.) Tenants in Common. — The undivided interest of one tenant in common in a crop may be sold under execution against him,<sup>93</sup> before division,<sup>94</sup> and the sheriff for the purpose of such sale may take possession of the entire quantity.<sup>95</sup>

The nature of the contract does not appear, however, and it may have created the relation of landlord and tenant.

after the crop is divided the share of the cropper is liable to be sold on execution against him though it was levied on before the division.<sup>97</sup>

u. Property in Custodia Legis or in Possession of Public Officer. (I.) Generally. — As a general rule property which is in the custody of officers of the court or government cannot be reached on execution.<sup>98</sup> However, the officer must hold the property in his official capacity.<sup>99</sup> Whiskey held in bond under the control of federal officers as security for taxes thereon,<sup>1</sup> a note which has been filed in a court of justice by a party litigant in a suit,<sup>2</sup> personal property,<sup>3</sup> or real estate in the custody of a receiver,<sup>4</sup> cannot be subjected to execution. Where a comptroller of the currency has put an examiner in charge of a bank but no receiver has been appointed the tangible assets of the bank are liable to execution.<sup>5</sup>

or with his consent.<sup>10</sup> And goods permitted to remain in possession of the defendant an unreasonable length of time are subject to a subsequent execution.<sup>11</sup> It is only where the property is lawfully taken by legal process that it is considered in the custody of the law;<sup>12</sup> so a levy under a void judgment will not prevent a subsequent levy of execution on the property.<sup>13</sup>

(B.) REAL ESTATE. -- Real estate taken under one writ may be subsequently levied on under execution but not so as to defeat the prior levy.<sup>14</sup>

(III.) When Released Under Bond. -- Where after an officer has levied on property and taken possession, a bond to try title, or forthcoming bond, is given, the property is still regarded, in some jurisdictions, as in the custody of the law and not subject to execution,<sup>15</sup> unless some new title has been acquired by the defendant.<sup>16</sup> In other jurisdictions the property is regarded as no longer subject to the previous execution and may be taken under a second levy.<sup>17</sup>

10. The rule that property in the hands of an officer, under judicial process, is in the custody of the law, and not subject to further seizure under process by another officer, is only adopted for the protection of the officer making the first seizure, and to avoid collisions of authority and conflicts of title. The same goods may be taken on a second writ by the same officer, and where, having the goods in his possession, he consents or submits to a levy upon other writs by other officers, and to hold the goods as trustee or bailee for them, after the satisfaction of his own writs, the rule does not apply, and the subsequent levies are valid, binding the proceeds of a sale in his hands. Tyler, Davidson & Co. v. Kuhn, 1 Disn. (Ohio) 405.

[a] A constable cannot levy upon goods subject to prior levy of a sheriff, if the creditor who obtains judgment before justice of the peace desires to reach the property levied on by the sheriff he should file a transcript in the court of common pleas and have a fieri facias issued to the sheriff before the sale. He will then be in a position to order the money into court and to participate in the distribution. Croman's Case, 11 Pa. Co. Ct. 44.

(IV.) Money in Hands of Court or Officer. — Money which is in the possession of an officer received by virtue of an execution is not subject to an execution against the creditor in the first execution,<sup>18</sup> though it has been held to the contrary;<sup>19</sup> nor, according to some authorities, can such money be reached on execution against the debtor in the first execution,<sup>20</sup> though in other jurisdictions a contrary rule prevails

Dec. 180, the court says: "We understand the uniform practice has been to appropriate money in the hands of an officer, in discharge of an execution against the plaintiff, and we think it is supported by principle, and the opinion under review admits that it is wise and just that such a remedy should exist."

4. Levy.—a. Definition. Object and Distinctions.—The levy of an execution is such action by a proper officer as sets apart and appropriates, for the purpose of satisfying the writ, a part or the whole of the property of a judgment debtor.<sup>33</sup> The delivery of the writ to an officer with instructions to levy upon certain property does not constitute a levy.<sup>34</sup>

chine erected for the purpose of carrying on carding. N. Y.—Ombony v. Jones, 19 N. Y. 234 (dance hall adjoining an inn). Also Cresson v. Stout, 17 Johns. 116, 8 Am. Dec. 373. Pa.—*Iley v. [a] Other Definitions.—A levy means nothing more than the taking possession of property by an officer. Pracht v. Pister, 30 Kan. 568, 573, 1 Pac. 638.

word levy means actual seizure, that is, the officer must take actual possession of the goods. Douglas v. Orr, 58 Mo. 473; Hobbs v. Williams, 175 Mo. App. 409, 162 S. W. 334.

[d] The essence of a levy is the sheriff's getting power over the property such as will enable him to sell at the proper time and place. Roebuck v. Thornton, 19 Ga. 149; Pugh v. Callo-way, 10 Ohio St. 488.

[e] Possession is the essence of a seizure. Goubeau v. New Orleans & N. R. Co., 6 Rob. (La.) 345.

[f] A levy of a general execution "is but a seizure or designation, by the sheriff, of so much of the property of the defendant in the execution as is intended to be applied, by a sale, to the liquidation of the judgment debt." Karnes v. Alexander, 92 Mo. 660, 672, 4 S. W. 518.

[g] The taking may be by laying hold of, grasping, seizing or by gaining control or possession in any way. Butler v. Imhoff, 238 Mo. 584, 142 S. W. 287.

[h] "Any act on the part of the officer showing an intent to sell the specific land, and subject it to the satisfaction of the judgment, followed by a sale, constitutes a levying of the execution as against the defendant." Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649, 99 Am. Dec. 441.

[i] "Any act by which the sheriff, acting under the fieri facias gets the defendant's property into his own hands, or any act by which he gets the defendant's property into the hands of any other, not excepting the defendant himself, as his, the sheriff's, agent, amounts to a levy." Roebuck v. Thornton, 19 Ga. 149.

35. Terrell v. State, 66 Ind. 570.

[a] The service of an execution may be said to be the communication of its contents to the execution de-execution, from an indorsement of levy,<sup>36</sup> from a selling<sup>37</sup> and return,<sup>38</sup> and from service of a garnishment.<sup>39</sup>

The object of a levy is to bring the property within the custody of the law and prevent the judgment debtor from disposing of it to the prejudice of the creditor before sale can be made, so as to make out of it the amount recovered by the judgment.<sup>40</sup>

b. Necessity for Levy. — (I.) In General. — It is a general rule that a previous valid levy is essential to the validity of a sale of property by the officer under an execution, whether the property be real<sup>41</sup> or fendant, accompanied by, or followed with, a demand for its satisfaction, and in its natural order precedes the levy of an execution. Terrell v. State, 66 Ind. 570.

[b] "Service of an execution includes every act and proceeding necessary to be taken by the sheriff to make the money, and includes a sale of the property when necessary." Peek v. City Nat. Bank, 51 Mich. 353, 16 N. W. 681, 47 Am. Rep. 577, quoted in In re Tengwall Co., 201 Fed. 82, 119 C. C. A. 420.

36. Duncan's Appeal, 37 Pa. 500.

[a] An indorsement of a levy upon (1) personal (Duncan's Appeal, 37 Pa. 500), or (2) real (Jones v. Olson, 17 Colo. App. 144, 67 Pac. 349; Herr v. Broadwell, 5 Colo. App. 467, 39 Pac. 70), property is in itself no levy; it is but evidence of it. (3) But it has been held that in the case of a levy upon real estate the indorsement is the levy itself. *Keaton v. under a writ of attachment,<sup>45</sup> but it is not improper to do so.<sup>46</sup> But where the judgment is not a lien, the property is not taken on execution until a levy.<sup>47</sup>

When the judgment itself designates the property which is to be sold, there is no occasion for a levy.<sup>48</sup> Thus, a levy is not necessary before selling premises upon a decree foreclosing a lien upon them.<sup>49</sup>

(II.) Waiver of Levy.—The judgment defendant may waive a levy upon the property and where there is such a waiver the sale passes such defendant's title as effectually as if a levy had been actually made.<sup>50</sup>

ex dem. McEntire v. Durham, 29 N. C. 151, 45 Am. Dec. 512; Shamburger v. Kennedy, 12 N. C. 1. Ore.—Smith v. Dwight, 156 Pac. 573; Bank of British Columbia v. Page, 7 Ore. 454.

[a] Reason for the Rule.—The great object of a levy is to take property into the custody of the law and, by this act, render it liable to the lien of the execution, thus putting it out of the power of the debtor to divert it to any other purpose. Where the property is subject to the lien of the judgment and already beyond the control of the debtor, the result to be attained by a levy is accomplished and the levy is therefore unnecessary. Tullis v. Brawley, 3 Minn. 277.

[b] Effect of the Statute.—(1) A statutory provision that "until a levy, property shall not be affected by the execution," does not require a levy to pass title. Its purpose is merely to annul a mischievous rule of the common law. "By the common law all judgments had relation to the first day of the term at which they were rendered, and an execution could be issued and tested as of that day; and also by the common law the goods of the defendant were bound by the execution from its date. Under this rule the title of the sheriff was better than that of a bona fide purchaser who may have purchased the goods of the defendant in the execution even before any judgment was in fact entered against him, or an execution awarded." This was avoided somewhat by the statute of frauds and completely by the provision under consideration. Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649, 99 Am. Dec. 441. (2) In Tullis v. Brawley, 3 Minn. 277, it was held that this clause referred to personal property only. See also Knox v. Randall, 24 Minn. 479, 496; Hutchins v. Carver

Co., 16 Minn. 13; Folsom v. Carli, 5 Minn. 333, 80 Am. Dec. 429.

[c] Property affixed to the realty is real property and need not be levied upon, as the judgment is a lien upon it. Britannia Min. Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 43 Mont. 93, 115 Pac. 46.

Since it is also the duty of the officer to act under the command of the writ, the plaintiff cannot hasten the time of its execution sooner than is prescribed by the statute,<sup>68</sup> or authorize the sheriff to do any other acts contrary to the statutes.<sup>69</sup> A party having an execution which is a lien on property, has no legal right to extend the time for its collection, to the injury of other creditors.<sup>70</sup>

If the plaintiff instructs the officer as to his procedure under the writ he cannot complain of his loss of priority or other ill effect resulting from compliance with his instructions.<sup>71</sup> Thus if, pending a stay of execution ordered by the plaintiff, a second execution comes into the officer's hands with instructions to levy, it takes precedence over the first writ.<sup>72</sup>

Nor has the officer levying the writ a right to control the execution.<sup>82</sup>

d. By Whom Made.—The general rule is that no one can execute the writ except the officer to whom the writ is directed, his successor, or deputy.<sup>85</sup> Where the writ is directed to the proper officer and is signor.—Where, after levy of execution, the sheriff is informed that the judgment has been assigned, and is directed in writing by the execution plaintiff and his assignee to proceed with the execution for the benefit of the assignee, the sheriff is liable in damages for releasing the property upon the subsequent direction of the attorney of the execution plaintiff. Murray v. Meade, 5 Wash. 693, 698, 32 Pac. 780, in which case the court said: "A client, unless the attorney has some interest in the judgment more than that involved in the making of the money upon an execution for the benefit of his client, has a right to control both his attorney and the sheriff."

[b] Levy on Particular Property. (1) A judgment is a general lien upon real estate, and a court of law cannot control that general lien by directing execution of the judgment against specific portions of the property of the defendant in execution to the exclusion of other portions equally subject to the general lien, on account of equities claimed to exist in favor of a person not a party to the judgment or execution. Clonts v. Ritch, 12 Fla. 633. (2) The court cannot, on motion of the plaintiff in execution, order the sheriff to levy upon a particular tract of land. Fraser v. Thrift, 50 Cal. 476.

executed by some one else, the levy is void.<sup>86</sup> But it has been held that if the writ is executed by an officer authorized by law to execute such process, the execution is not invalidated by the fact that the writ was directed to another officer who either did,<sup>87</sup> or did not,<sup>88</sup> have the requisite authority. And a levy made by an improper officer is not void where it is recognized and returned by the proper officer.<sup>89</sup>

[b] Where there is no direction (1) to any officer in the county, a levy by an officer in the county is unauthorized. Pillsbury v. Smyth, 25 Me. 427. (2) Where the power of the constable in levying executions is concurrent with that of the sheriff, in the absence of a direction, it will be presumed it was intended to be served by the sheriff. Brier v. Woodbury, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 362.

[c] A levy by a special deputy sheriff is valid, he being none the less a deputy because he styles himself a special deputy. Miller v. Clements, 54 Tex. 351.

[d] Where a sheriff levies an attachment in an action, an execution on the judgment in the action, issued after such sheriff goes out of office, should be delivered to, and executed by, the sheriff in office when it issues. Butler v. White, 25 Minn. 432.

Hudson, 69 Ga. 684; Gillis v. Smith, 67 Ga. 446. Compare, Glenn v. Augusta Drug Co., 127 Ga. 5, 55 S. E. 1032. Ky.—Johnson v. Elkins, 90 Ky. 163, 13 S. W. 448, 8 L. R. A. 552.

[a] Where the writ is directed to the sheriff, (1) a levy by a constable (Satterwhite v. Melzer, 3 Ariz. 162, 24 Pac. 184; Peeples v. Garrison & Co., 141 Ga. 411, 81 S. E. 116), (2) or coroner (Gresham v. Leverett, 10 Ala. 384; Johnson v. Elkins, 90 Ky. 163, 13 S. W. 448, 8 L. R. A. 552), where there is no sheriff in the county at the time, is unauthorized and void, even where the sheriff is incompetent to act. Gresham v. Leverett, 10 Ala. 384. (3)

But statutes have been enacted in some states which change this rule somewhat. Mass. Rev. Laws, 1902, p. 1602, providing where the officer is ill or absent, the judgment creditor or the officer who began the service, may delegate any other qualified officer temporarily to act for him during such illness or absence. And see How. Mich. St., §13,034; Foster v. Wiley, 27 Mich. 244, 15 Am. Rep. 185.

[b] When a writ of fieri facias is issued to the coroner for the reason that at the time there is no sheriff, when a sheriff is subsequently appointed and qualified, the coroner may turn over to him all unexecuted writs to be executed, and his levy under the execution will be good. Carr v. Youse, 39 Mo. 346. Compare supra, II, B, 2, f, (I).

[c] Where an execution is directed to the coroner or jailer, a levy by the latter is void as he cannot act unless both the sheriff and coroner are interested. Gowdy v. Sanders, 88 Ky. 346, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 912, 11 S. W. 82. Compare supra, II, B, 2, f, (I).

87. Ross v. Wellman, 102 Cal. 1, 36 Pac. 402, holding that the constable and sheriff have full power to execute the writ and it is an indifferent matter to whom it is directed. A service and return by a sheriff of a writ directed to a constable is an irregularity merely, and the service is not void.

88. Idaho.—Pecotte v. Oliver, 2 Idaho 230, 10 Pac. 302, and the writ will be amended. Kan.—First Nat. Bank v. Franklin, 20 Kan. 264. Okla. Christy v. Springs, 11 Okla. 710, 69 Pac. 864.

The attaching officer has no vested right to make a levy of an execution issuing in the action. The execution may be given to another officer for service,<sup>93</sup> and must be when the attaching officer's term of office has expired.<sup>94</sup>

Effect of Interest. — Nothing can be better settled than that no person has the right to levy an execution in an action in which he is a party, or is interested.<sup>95</sup> And upon the principle of public policy, which makes it unlawful for the sheriff to levy his own execution, it

(VII.) Mandamus To Compel Levy.<sup>40</sup> — In the absence of statute providing otherwise, where there is another adequate legal remedy, as by an action against the officer on his bond, mandamus will not lie to compel a sheriff to levy a writ of execution in his hands.<sup>41</sup> But if the legal remedy is inadequate, as where the officer refuses to execute a writ of possession for specific property, mandamus will lie.<sup>42</sup>

39. Rudy v. Com., 35 Pa. 166.

[a] A sheriff having two executions in his hands sold the defendant's personal property for a sum that was insufficient to satisfy the first writ, and made a levy on real estate for the balance. Subsequently the defendant gave the sheriff a sum of money with directions to pay it to the creditor of the junior execution. Under these circumstances the sheriff could not make a levy under the first execution upon this money and he is justified in returning that it was made on the second writ. Rudy v. including the return day, but not thereafter,<sup>47</sup> although it is sufficient if the levy shall have been commenced before the return day, the whole having relation to the time the levy is commenced.<sup>48</sup> A proper levy before return day will not keep the execution alive so as to justify a fresh levy after the return day.<sup>49</sup>

Where Time Allowed To Claim Exemption.—In some states, statutes allow a debtor a certain time after service of execution upon him in which to claim his exemption. A levy in violation of this statute before the expiration of the specified period is unauthorized and is a trespass.<sup>50</sup>

Levy on Sunday.—It has been held that a levy made on Sunday is void.<sup>51</sup>

(II.) After Death of Plaintiff.—A writ should be levied notwithstanding the death of the creditor after the issuance of the writ.<sup>52</sup>

(III.) After Death of Defendant.—At common law the execution bound the defendant's goods from its teste, and it could be levied where the defendant died after the teste and before delivery to the sheriff.<sup>53</sup> But under statutes binding the defendant's property from the delivery of the writ to the officer, the rule is otherwise.<sup>54</sup> If the defendant dies after delivery of the writ to the sheriff and before levy made, the officer may generally levy the writ.<sup>55</sup>

(IV.) Presumption as to Time of Levy.—It will be presumed that the officer did his duty by levying the execution while in full force, the return being silent upon the subject.<sup>56</sup>

g. Manner of Levy.—(I.) In General.—A plaintiff in execution has an unconditional and absolute right to have his writ executed in the usual and customary way.<sup>57</sup> The practice in the various states as to the manner of making levies of writs of execution is not uniform and the cases themselves are not always clear as to what is necessary to constitute a valid levy. The strictness required by the English authorities has been departed from in the United States.<sup>58</sup> In some cases a distinction is made between a levy which is good against the debtor and one which is good against the world,<sup>59</sup> but, on the other hand, it has been said that different rules should not obtain in this respect, and that a levy good against a debtor should be good against everybody.<sup>60</sup> Generally speaking, executions and attachments are levied in the same manner.<sup>61</sup>

(II.) Compliance With Statute.—The manner of levying an execution is generally regulated by statutes.<sup>62</sup> As to that property which was not subject to levy and sale at common law,<sup>63</sup> there is necessarily no common-law method of making a levy, and a levy can, therefore, be made only by pursuing the statute conferring and regulating the right.<sup>64</sup> And generally where the manner of making a levy is prescribed by statute, it is the duty of the officer levying the writ to comply strictly with the provisions of the statutes regulating the manner of levy.<sup>65</sup> But with respect to certain matters these statutes are sometimes held to be merely directory.<sup>66</sup>

(III.) By Illegal and Oppressive Acts. — The sheriff owes a duty to the debtor as well as to the creditor;<sup>67</sup> and in levying a writ of execution, he should do as little mischief as possible,<sup>68</sup> and avoid proceeding in a reckless, illegal and oppressive manner.<sup>69</sup> Levies accomplished by fraudulent tricks and devices and other unlawful acts will not be upheld by the courts.<sup>70</sup>

Questions as to the degree of force which the officer can use and his right to break and enter to levy on property will be found treated elsewhere.<sup>71</sup>

(IV.) Demand and Notice. — (A.) NECESSITY FOR. — In the absence of statute requiring it, it is not necessary generally for the officer to notify the defendant of the issuance of the writ, or to make a demand for payment.<sup>72</sup> But in some states, either by statute or otherwise, it is required that the sheriff shall notify the defendant of the execution,<sup>73</sup> or serve the execution upon him,<sup>74</sup> and make a demand or affect the title acquired by the sale,<sup>81</sup> but it may make the sheriff liable for any damage growing out of his neglect of duty.<sup>82</sup>

(B.) ON WHOM MADE. — The demand must be made on the defendant<sup>83</sup> personally.<sup>84</sup> If the defendant be a corporation demand must be made on the officers or agents.<sup>85</sup> And if there be several defendants, demand must be made on all.<sup>86</sup>

(C.) WHERE MADE. — Some statutes provide for demand at the defendant's usual place of abode,<sup>87</sup> though in some jurisdictions it need not be made out of the officer's county.<sup>88</sup>

(D.) DEMAND IS NOT PART OF LEVY. — The demand is preliminary merely and not the actual commencement of the levy.<sup>89</sup>

(V.) Exhibition of Authority. — The failure of an officer to exhibit to the debtor his authority for levying an execution, although it may be better practice to do so, does not invalidate the levy,<sup>90</sup> though it may make the officer guilty of a trespass.<sup>91</sup> property for that levied on, at any time before sale,<sup>96</sup> though in others the right of substitution is more limited.<sup>97</sup>

Right Is Personal.—It has been held that this right is personal to the defendant,<sup>98</sup> though in some states a purchaser from the debtor may require a levy on other property of his vendor.<sup>99</sup>

Delivering Possession.—A defendant desiring certain property to be levied on should deliver such possession to the officer as the nature of the case will admit of.<sup>1</sup>

What Property May Be Pointed Out.—The property pointed out for levy must of course be that of the judgment debtor.<sup>2</sup> The defend-

[a] Designation by Sureties.—Where the principal defendant refuses to point out property, the officer may make his levy without calling on the sureties, or he may adopt their designation of the property of their principal. Martin v. Rice, 16 Tex. 157.

99. Designation by Purchaser From Debtor.—If a purchaser of land from one against whom there is a judgment, desires to have other lands of his grantor first levied upon and sold to satisfy the judgment, it is his duty to give notice of his interest in the property brought by him, and to point out other property that the creditor may take in execution. Dobbins v. Wilson, 107 Ill. 17.

1. Ross v. Lister, 14 Tex. 469, 475. See Smith v. Frederick, 32 Tex. 256, the defendant must tell the officer where the property can be found.

[a] The Tender of Other Property Must Be Unconditional.—Ross v. Lister, 14 Tex. 469, 474.

[b] The possession given the officer must be such as places the property under the control of the officer so that it can be delivered to the purchaser. Texas-Mexican Ry. Co. v. Wright, 88 Tex. 346, 31 S. W. 613, 31 L. R. A. 200.

[c] Insufficient Designation.—“The declaration of the debtor to the constable, ‘that he had horses in his lot here in town subject to execution sufficient and more to satisfy said execution, and to levy on them,’ is not a sufficient designation, under the statute to avoid a levy on land. Anderson v. Oldham, 82 Tex. 228, 233, 18 S. W. 557.

[d] Designation of Realty.—While it would seem that under a statute requiring that the debtor shall, in designating realty, “deliver to the officer, a description thereof by metes and bounds,” the description should be in writing, yet a verbal designation of certain lots by their blocks and numbers was held sufficient in *Beek & Co. v. ant may direct a levy of his real estate in preference to his personal estate,<sup>3</sup> but it has been held that he cannot do so when such a direction would prejudice the rights of others.<sup>4</sup> The property pointed out must not be so encumbered as to make it valueless for purposes of levy,<sup>5</sup> and must be in the county where the judgment is rendered or to which the execution is issued.<sup>6</sup>

(3.) Waiver or Estoppel.—This right to designate the property may be waived or the debtor may be estopped by his conduct to claim it.<sup>7</sup> If the defendant neglects or refuses to make a selection of property he is held to have waived his privilege.<sup>8</sup>

(4.) Effect of Depriving Defendant of Right.—The failure to give a defendant an opportunity to designate property to be levied on does not vitiate the sale.<sup>9</sup> The failure to levy on and sell the property pointed out by the defendant does not affect the title of the purchaser or invalidate the levy made,<sup>10</sup> but it will make the officer liable for any damage sustained,<sup>11</sup> and may be ground for enjoining the en-enforcement of the writ,<sup>12</sup> or quashing the levy.<sup>13</sup>

(B.) BY CREDITOR. — The plaintiff is frequently allowed to point out property to be levied on where the defendant does not exercise his privilege.<sup>14</sup> But generally he is not required to do so,<sup>15</sup> although some cases hold that ordinarily a sheriff is not required to levy on real estate unless the same is pointed out by the judgment creditor.<sup>16</sup>

(VII.) Order in Which Property Shall Be Levied on. — (A.) GENERALLY. The writ frequently, if not generally, contains directions to the officer as to the order in which the debtor's property shall be levied upon,<sup>17</sup> in which event of course it is the officer's duty to follow the directions of the writ.<sup>18</sup>

Attached Property. — Statutes sometimes require the writ to direct a resort to attached property first,<sup>19</sup> and in some jurisdictions the

[a] Sufficient Designation. — Plaintiff's attorney need not accompany the sheriff to point out the property. It is sufficient to inform the sheriff where the property is. Marshall & Co. v. Simpson, 13 La. Ann. 437.

[b] The plaintiff or his agent has a right to enter a defendant's house with a constable to show him the defendant's property upon which to levy a fieri facias. United States v. Baker, 1 Cranch C. C. 268, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,502; Harrington v. McDuel, 3 Cranch C. C. 355, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,108.

[c] The authority of the agent need not be in writing. United States v. Baker, 1 Cranch C. C. 268, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,502.

erty is to be sold without appraisement. The sheriff may adopt the plaintiff's designation as his own, however, where the defendant refuses to designate. Where the property is to be sold under appraisement on the third levy where the defendant has not availed himself of his privilege, the plaintiff has the right of designation under statute. Bryan v. Bridge, 6 Tex. 137; Scott v. Allen, 1 Tex. 508, 518.

[e] The designation by the creditor is merely to aid the officer in identifying the property of the defendant and it imposes no duty on the officer to levy on the particular property pointed out in preference to other property. Lawson v. State, 10 Ark. 28, 50 Am. Dec. 238; Kendrick v. Rice, 16 Tex. 254; Bryan v. Bridge, 6 Tex. 137.

judgment itself may contain provisions as to the satisfaction out of attached property.<sup>20</sup> It has been held that an officer, receiving an execution without any special directions, should levy it upon such property as has been attached in the case.<sup>21</sup>

(B.) EXHAUSTING PERSONALTY BEFORE LEVYING ON REALTY. — (1.) In General. In some states the sheriff may in his discretion levy upon real or personal property,<sup>22</sup> but generally the order in which property shall be levied on is pointed out by statute, and in many states it is required that in the absence of any designation by the defendant, the sheriff, executing a general execution shall exhaust the personal property before levying upon the real property of the defendant.<sup>23</sup> If the personal property of the defendant proves to be insufficient to satisfy the execution, the officer may levy upon his real property,<sup>24</sup> even before advertisement and sale of the personalty levied on,<sup>25</sup> but no more real property should be taken than with the personal property will be sufficient to satisfy the execution.<sup>26</sup>

Where there are several defendants, it is not necessary that the personal estate of all of them be exhausted before the realty of any one be levied on and sold. When any one of them has no personal estate subject to levy, the sheriff may levy upon his realty.<sup>27</sup>

Where Personalty Is Encumbered. — The officer need not first levy upon the personal property of the debtor, if it be so encumbered that it will produce nothing upon the execution.<sup>28</sup>

The subsequent acquisition of property required to be first levied on will not annul a levy on property secondarily liable,<sup>29</sup> or divest the title acquired by the sale of it.<sup>30</sup>

(2.) Demand and Search for Personalty. — In some states, it is the duty of the officer to make a demand upon the defendant for personal property upon which to levy,<sup>31</sup> or make a search for such property.<sup>32</sup> It

[a] Absence of Debtor and Direction by Creditor.—The fact that the defendant is absent from the state and the creditor directs a levy upon the land does not authorize a levy upon the land, when there is sufficient personal estate available. Coe v. Wickham, 33 Conn. 389.

[b] In Illinois, a sheriff cannot levy upon the debtor's personal property without giving him a right to turn out his realty. It is the duty of the sheriff to levy first upon the real property. Pitts v. Magie, 24 Ill. 610; Tuttle v. Wilson, 24 Ill. 553; Ryder v. Buckmaster, 4 Ill. 196; Metz v. McAvoy Brew. Co., 98 Ill. App. 584.

[c] In Louisiana.—The claim that the sheriff cannot seize immovable property before movable property can be entertained only where the creditor has no privilege or mortgage on the debtor's property. Lambeth v. Sentell, 38 La. Ann. 691.

[d] In Vermont, without special directions from the creditor, it is the duty of the officer to levy on the debtor's personal property and it is not his duty to levy on real estate except when directed to do so by the creditor. Bank of Newbury v. Baldwin, 31 Vt. 311.

is sufficient that he exercise reasonable and ordinary diligence to discover the debtor's personal property.<sup>33</sup> In some states it is the duty of the judgment debtor, where the sheriff does not levy on his personalty first, to call the attention of the sheriff to the fact that he has personalty,<sup>34</sup> and if it does not appear that the officer knows of the existence of personalty, he may levy upon realty.<sup>35</sup>

(3.) Who May Take Advantage of the Statute. — As the statute is for the benefit of the debtor, it has been held that no other person can take advantage of it or sustain objection to a title derived under a levy contrary thereto.<sup>37</sup>

[b] Levy at Hour of Receipt of Writ.—A return which shows that the officer received the writ at 4 p. m. on a certain day and that he levied on a lot at 4 p. m. of the same day and states that the officer made a diligent search for goods does not show that he did not have ample time in which to make a search. Treptow v. Buse, 10 Kan. 170.

[c] A complaint to set aside a sheriff's sale on the ground the sheriff did not exhaust the personalty before levying upon the realty of the debtor is insufficient without an averment that the sheriff had knowledge of the personalty or by reasonable diligence might have discovered and that the same might have been taken under execution had he discovered it. *Nelson v. (4.) Objections. — An objection that the sheriff has seized immovable property before having exhausted the movables should be made in apt time.<sup>38</sup>

(5.) Waiver. — This requirement is for the benefit of the debtor<sup>39</sup> and he may waive,<sup>40</sup> or forfeit<sup>41</sup> it. This he may do by neglecting<sup>42</sup> or refusing<sup>43</sup> to offer personal property to be levied on on demand, by asking that the levy be made on his realty,<sup>44</sup> by standing by without objection when his land is sold,<sup>45</sup> or by making a fraudulent conveyance of all of his property.<sup>46</sup>

(6.) Effect of Failure To Comply With Statute. — In some jurisdictions, it is a fatal objection to a levy that it is made upon land when there is sufficient personal estate available,<sup>47</sup> and the purchaser is held to acquire no title by virtue of the execution sale.<sup>48</sup> In other jurisdictions, the statute is regarded as being directory merely,<sup>49</sup> and a failure of the officer to comply with it will not invalidate the levy,<sup>50</sup> render it subject to collateral attack,<sup>51</sup> authorize setting aside the writ,<sup>52</sup> or vitiate the sale,<sup>53</sup> nor will it affect the title of an innocent purchas-

63. Lloyd v. Wyckoff, 11 N. J. L. 218, 236.

[a] "It is impossible to describe

so made that it identifies or gives the means of identifying the property levied on,<sup>64</sup> and it must be distinct and explicit.<sup>65</sup>

what these acts, under all circumstances, should be. Some, however, may be mentioned. As, actual seizure of the goods; or, seizure of part, in the name of the whole then present; or a public declaration plainly designating the property levied on; or, the taking of an inventory." Lloyd v. Wyckoff, 11 N. J. L. 218, 236.

[b] Statement of Rule.—To constitute a valid levy upon personal property generally, the property must be within the power and control of the officer when it is made, and he must take it into his possession in a reasonable time thereafter, unless a delivery bond is tendered, in such an open, public, and unequivocal manner as to apprise everybody that it is taken in execution. Windmiller v. Chapman, 139 Ill. 163, 28 N. E. 979; Davidson v. Waldron, 31 Ill. 120, 83 Am. Dec. 206; Minor v. Herriford, 25 Ill. 304, 344.

[c] "It is said in Beekman v. Lansing, 3 Wendell 446, as the result of the cases there referred to, that in order to constitute a levy the officer should enter upon the premises where the goods of the defendant are, and take actual possession of them (if they are such of which possession can be taken); the goods should be brought within his view and subject to his control; and that it is proper also, if not necessary, that an inventory should be taken. The officer should assert his title to the goods by virtue of the execution, and his acts, in the assertion of his right and the divesting of the possession of the defendant should be of such a character as would subject him to an action as a trespasser, but for the protection of the execution they should be public, open and unequivocal; and nothing should be done by him to cast concealment over the transaction. Haggerty v. Wilber, 16 Johns. 288. In England the rule is still more strict. The officer leaves one of his assistants in possession of the goods or causes an inventory to be made and removes them. 1 Archb. Pr. 293; 1 Maule & Sel. 711; 5 Taunt.

198." Westervelt v. Pinckney, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 123, 124.

[d] "I would define a levy of personalty good as against a subsequent purchaser or mortgagee, to be either an actual and continued manual seizure of the property by the officer, when such seizure is practicable, or if the property is within his view and power of control, the making by him such distinct, open and unequivocal assertion of dominion over it as the nature and situation of the property and the surrounding circumstances may admit, or as the judgment debtor may recognize and acquiesce in, and constituting such an interference with the possession of the property, either actual or constructive, that trespass would lie against him but for the protection afforded by his writ." Minor v. Smith, 13 Ohio St. 79.

[e] Serving a notice of levy upon the defendant does not of itself constitute a levy, as such notice can be properly given only after a valid levy has been made. Anby v. Rathbun, 11 S. D. 474, 78 N. W. 952.

64. Quackenbush v. Henry, 42 Mich. 75, 3 N. W. 262.

65. Ill.—Douglas v. Whiting, 28 Ill. 362. Ky.—Johnson v. Rowe, 10 Ky. Opin. 682. See Hill v. Harris, 10 B. Mon. 120, 50 Am. Dec. 542. N. J. Princeton Bank v. Crozer, 22 N. J. L. 383, 53 Am. Dec. 254.

[a] By Seizure.—A levy of an execution upon personal property is made by the officer having the writ seizing the property and taking it into his possession. People v. Finch, 19 Colo. App. 512, 521, 76 Pac. 1120.

66. Jones v. Howard, 99 Ga. 451, 27 S. E. 765; Dean v. State, 9 Ga. App. 303, 71 S. E. 597; Brian v. Strait, Dudley 19.

[a] Merely announcing that he is there with a writ for the purpose of making a levy and attempting thereafter to obtain the defendant's consent is insufficient to constitute a levy. Hobbs v. Williams, 175 Mo. App. 409, 162 S. W. 334.

67. Ky.—Demint v. Thompson, 80

Pen and Ink Levy. — A mere pen and ink or paper levy upon personalty, that is, by making a mere indorsement on the writ of a levy on goods not in the officer's control, is not sufficient.<sup>68</sup> But if an officer, who has made a mere paper levy, perfects his levy afterwards by an actual seizure of the property, the levy is valid.<sup>69</sup>

(B.) Test. — An essential criterion of a valid levy upon personal property is that the officer levying the writ must do some act in relation to the personal property to be levied upon in the way of taking possession or asserting dominion over it, which, in the absence of the writ in his hands, would make him a trespasser.<sup>70</sup>

(C.) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—(1.) Officer Must See the Property.

It is generally required that the personality to be levied upon be within the view of the officer levying the execution,<sup>71</sup> especially as against everybody except the execution creditor,<sup>72</sup> but the bare sight of the property without more is not sufficient to constitute a levy.<sup>73</sup> There may be circumstances, however, under which a levy may be valid even though the sheriff did not have the property within his power or

74. See cases following.

[a] Levy Obstructed by Third Person.—Plaintiffs in an execution directed the sheriff to levy upon a hearse belonging to the defendant in the execution, which was in the possession of a third party. The sheriff went to the latter's premises and demanded the hearse, saying that he came to levy upon it. The sheriff made ineffectual efforts to get at it or see it; he then advertised the hearse and sold it with other property actually levied upon. The defendant in execution was present at the sale and made no objection. Subsequently the party in possession of the hearse levied upon it under a judgment obtained by him against the defendant in the execution. In trover by the purchaser at the first sale against the purchaser at the second sale it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Stuckert v. Keller, 105 Pa. 386. But see Brian v. Strait, Dudley (S. C.) 19.

C.* 293, holding that a delivery by a debtor of a list of his personal property, it not being present, is not a levy; but that, if the property is present when the list is delivered, and the officer signifies that he holds it to answer the execution and there is no opposition to his possessing himself of the property if he so desires, there is a valid levy.

[b] The act of entrusting the property to the custody of the person in charge of the property with a direction to allow no one to remove it is a sufficient assertion of the sheriff's title under the writ. Boslow v. Shenberger, 52 Neb. 164, 71 N. W. 1012, 66 Am. St. Rep. 487.

[c] Insufficient Assertion of Dominion.—Where the officer merely states to the debtor that he has come to levy on his property, at the same time giving him a written notice of levy this respect must be inconsistent with an intention to permit the debtor to dispose of the property as his own.<sup>84</sup>

(4.) Levy Must Be Public. — The levying officer must place the property to be levied on under his immediate control and dominion in such an open, public, and unequivocal manner as to apprise everybody that the property has been taken in execution.<sup>85</sup> A secret levy is insufficient.<sup>86</sup>

(5.) Necessity That Officer Take Possession. — (a.) In General. — There is considerable confusion in the cases as to the seizure and possession of the personalty required in a valid levy. There must be a seizure of the property to be levied on<sup>87</sup> which generally may be either actual stating, in response to a question, that he would probably never come after the property, and the officer assumes no control over the property by himself or another, the levy is insufficient. Auby v. Rathbun, 11 S. D. 474, 78 N. W. 952.

[b] The officer's acts should be so open and notorious that they can be proved if necessary. Westervelt v. Pinckney, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 123, 28 Am. Dec. 516; Portis v. Parker, 8 Tex. 23, 58 Am. Dec. 95.

or constructive,<sup>88</sup> though some decisions and statutes seem to require that there be an actual seizure.<sup>89</sup>

(b.) Where Defendant Is Entitled to Possession.—Where the defendant is entitled to possession, it is necessary that the officer reduce the property to possession or, at least, bring the property within<sup>90</sup> his infor the purpose of making a levy, and, the defendant being absent, merely requests a member of the latter's family to inform the defendant that he has made a levy upon certain personalty which he has found and left therein, and does nothing else, not even making an entry of the levy upon the writ, there has been no seizure, and hence no valid levy. Miller v. Brooks, 120 Ga. 232, 47 S. E. 646.

[c] Under Statute Relating to Loaned Chattels.—Under a statute providing that as to purchasers and creditors the title to chattels loaned for two years without demand made is with the possession, a levy of an execution against the bailee must be made by seizure and not by notice. *Hunstock v. [b] The property "must be seized manually or by assertion of control that may be made effectual, if necessary, and this to bring and keep it within the dominion of the law, for sale on execution, if needed, and for no other purpose." Quackenbush v. Henry, 43 Mich. 75, 3 N. W. 262.

[c] The true test as to what constitutes actual possession is, whether enough has been done to subject the officer to an action of trespass but for the protection of the writ. Douglas v. Orr, 58 Mo. 573.

[d] A levy good as against subsequent levies and subsequent purchasers and mortgagors "must be actual and with continued manual seizure by the officer, when such seizure is practicable, or if the property is within view or power of control by making such distinct, open, and unequivocal assertion of dominion over it, as the nature that the officer interfere with the goods manually,<sup>99</sup> or even touch them.<sup>1</sup> Where the property is within his power, it is generally sufficient taking of possession for the officer to assert his right under the writ,<sup>2</sup> or to take an inventory of it,<sup>3</sup> to make a memorandum of the and situation of the property and the circumstances will admit of, or as the judgment debtor may recognize and acquiesce in, and constituting such an interference with the possession, either actual or constructive, as that trespass would lie against the officer, but for the protection afforded by the writ. *Minor v. [a] In Barker v. Binninger, 14 N. Y. 270, it was held to be a sufficient levy for the officer to go into the stable where a horse stood, and, in the presence of the defendant, to produce the execution, and to declare that he levies and to forbid all interference with the horse.

[b] In Delaware, the practice is not to take the goods into possession. The inventory and appraisal is the levy. Hargadine v. Ford, 5 Houst. (Del.) 380, 391; Polite v. Jefferson, 5 Harr. (Del.) 388; Layton & Sipple v. Steel, 3 Harr. (Del.) 512; Sipple v. Scotten, 1 Harr. (Del.) 107.

[c] In New Jersey, it is a frequent practice for sheriffs to make levies by taking inventories furnished by the levy,<sup>4</sup> or to threaten to remove the property unless a receiptor is given.<sup>5</sup>

A defendant may dispense with an actual seizure of his property, and thereby give the sheriff a constructive possession of the property, as against himself.<sup>6</sup> A written acknowledgment of a levy by a defendant is as effectual as an actual levy.<sup>7</sup>

A removal of the property is not necessary,<sup>8</sup> although generally if defendant with the assent of the plaintiff, where the officer does not either see the goods or take them into actual custody. Avon-by-the-Sea Land & I. Co. v. McDowell, 71 N. J. Eq. 116, 62 Atl. 865; Dean v. Thatcher, 32 N. J. L. 470.

the property is such that it may be removed, the officer should do so.<sup>9</sup>

(c.) Where Defendant Is Not Entitled to Possession. — If the property to be levied on is in the hands of a third person and the defendant is not entitled to possession, a manual taking of the goods is not authorized.<sup>10</sup> The manner of levy in such case is frequently regulated by statute,<sup>11</sup> which sometimes provide that the levy shall be made by giving notice thereof to the person who is entitled to possession, and without seizure.<sup>12</sup>

(6.) Acquiescence of Debtor. — It is never necessary that the debtor or owner of the goods should acquiesce in the levy.<sup>13</sup>

(D.) SEIZURE OF A PART FOR THE WHOLE. — A seizure of a part of a parcel of goods may be made in the name of the whole.<sup>14</sup> In such case the remainder is not actually seized and may not be seen, yet the levy is good as to the whole.<sup>15</sup> thereof, the sheriff cannot take them from his possession,<sup>22</sup> but in some jurisdictions the sheriff may take possession of the property temporarily in such a case.<sup>23</sup> Statutes sometimes provide for a levy by leaving with the mortgagee or pledgee a notice of levy and a copy of the writ.<sup>24</sup>

Tender or Payment of Mortgage Debt.—Under the statutes in some jurisdictions, before the officer can take mortgaged personal property on execution, he must pay or tender to the mortgagee the amount of the mortgage or deposit it with a designated officer.<sup>25</sup>

[b] Although the mortgage is past due, (1) the sheriff may take possession of the property, if the mortgagee has not actually foreclosed. Macomber v. Saxton, 28 Mich. 516; Cary v. Hewitt, 26 Mich. 228. (2) But where, by the mortgage, the title is in the mortgagee on default, the sheriff cannot levy an execution against the mortgagor upon the chattel. Ex parte Lorenz, 32 S. [a] But if the pledgee deliver the property to the officer, the pledgor cannot complain. Mower v. Stickney, 5 Minn. 397.

[b] Indorsing List of Chattels as Inventory.—Taking from the chattel mortgage a list of the chattels mortgaged and annexing this list as the inventory is, in New Jersey, sufficient as a constructive seizure for the purpose of a legal levy. Avon-by-the-Sea Land & I. Co. v. McDowell, 71 N. J. Eq. 116, 62 Atl. 865.

ment on the pledgee. It cannot be reached by a seizure of the pledge. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601, 94 Am. Dec. 770.

23. Horner v. Dennis, 34 La. Ann. 389 (pledged property); First Nat. Bank v. Summers, 75 Mich. 107, 42 N. W. 536; Wilson v. Montague, 57 Mich. 638, 24 N. W. 851; Nelson v. Ferris, 30 Mich. 497; Cary v. Hewitt, 26 Mich. 228 (even though the mortgage is past due).

[a] Showing Property for Sale.—(1) The sheriff may require the mortgagee to expose the goods to the view of the bidders at the sale by virtue of his execution and levy. Fox v. Cronan, 47 N. J. L. 493, 508, 2 Atl. 444, 4 Atl. 314, 54 Am. Rep. 190. (2) And in McConeghy v. McCaw, 31 Ala. 447, it is held that where an absolute sale is made as security, the sheriff levying an execution against the debtor has a right to take the property into his possession and exhibit it at the sale.

Rolling Stock of Railroad. — In the absence of statute making rolling stock part of the realty, the rolling stock covered by a railroad mortgage may be levied on as other mortgaged personal property.<sup>26</sup>

(3.) Property Within Buildings. — The mere taking charge of the building from the outside is not a levy upon the goods within it,<sup>27</sup> particularly where the building is closed or locked and the officer does not gain access to the inside.<sup>28</sup> The officer must see the goods and, passer. Keith v. Haggart, 4 Dak. 438, 33 N. W. 465.

[b] A tender after the levy does not validate a levy made without tender. Blotcky Bros. v. O'Neill, 83 Iowa 574, 49 N. W. 1029.

[c] Fraudulent and Illegal Mortgage.—In Jewett v. Sundback, 5 S. D. 111, 120, 58 N. W. 20, the court in construing a statute which provided "before the property is so taken, the officer must pay or tender to the mortgagee the amount of the mortgage debt and interest, or must deposit the amount thereof with the county treasurer, payable to the order of the mortgagee," said: "But we are of the opinion that that section has no application to a mortgage which the creditor claims to be fraudulent and void as against the creditors of a mortgagor. The object of that section evidently is to prevent an officer from attaching and levying upon personal property included in a valid chattel mortgage before the amount due upon such a mortgage is paid or tendered as therein provided. But it has no application to a void or fraudulent instrument denominated a 'chattel mortgage.' Such an instrument, fraudulent and void as to the creditors of the mortgagor is not in law a 'mortgage' as to them, though it may be so called."

26. Central Trust Co. v. Moran, 56 Minn. 188, 57 N. W. 471, 29 L. R. A. 212.

[a] Under a statute providing that, rolling stock and personal property belonging to the road shall be deemed a part of the road, an execution creditor cannot, as against the mortgagee in a railroad mortgage or deed of trust levy on an item of rolling stock and sell it to satisfy his execution. His remedy must, as to the mortgagee, be against the road as an entirety.

[a] Making Inventory.—Where an officer goes to a factory and finding it closed, he looks through a broken window and makes an incomplete inventory without otherwise gaining access to the building, there is no valid levy. Nelson v. Van Gazelle Valve Mfg. Co., 45 N. J. Eq. 594, 17 Atl. 943.

[b] Nailing Up Door.—In Lynch v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.), 49 S. W. 406, it was held that there is no levy where the officer goes to the store Saturday night when locked, nails strips across the door, reads the writ and notifies the defendant but does not enter the store until later.

29. See generally supra, II, B, 4, g, (X), (C).

[a] It is a sufficient levy to go to the store of the defendant, see the goods, and assert title by virtue of the levy, in the hearing of one of the defendants, and to subsequently endorse the levy on the execution. Roth v. Wells, 29 N. Y. 471; Burch v. Mounts (Tex. Civ. App.), 185 S. W. 889.

[b] "A levy, made in view of a stock of goods in gross, is a good levy, and the sheriff would be entitled to the necessary time to make his invoice." Grove v. Harris, 35 Tex. 320, 323.

[c] Grain in Granary.—Where an officer, in making a levy upon a large quantity of grain in a granary, forces open the doors, levels off and estimates the quantity of grain and serves notice upon defendant, he has made a valid levy, at least as against having them in his control, assert title by virtue of the writ,<sup>29</sup> but a manual interference with the goods is not required.<sup>30</sup>

(4.) Contents of Sealed Packages.—A levy on a sealed package, such as a safe, describing its contents, is a sufficient levy on the contents.<sup>31</sup>

(5.) Property Owned in Common.—At common law and in the absence of special statute, the officer levying an execution against one tenant in common on property owned in common is permitted to seize and take possession of the whole.<sup>32</sup> But although the possession of the entire property may be taken, the levy, of course, is made only upon the defendant's interest in the property.<sup>33</sup> But statutes have been enacted in some jurisdictions providing for a levy without the taking of actual possession, by giving notice thereof.<sup>34</sup>

the defendant having notice. State v. Cassidy, 4 S. D. 58, 54 N. W. 928.

[d] Levy on Crib of Corn.—It is a sufficient levy upon corn in a crib to claim the corn, in the presence of a witness, by virtue of the writ, to post a notice on the crib and to nail up the crib. Richardson v. Rardin, 88 Ill. 124; Stanley v. Moynihan, 45 Ill. App. 192.

[a] The reason that a sheriff may seize the whole of the common property on an execution against one of the joint owners is that a joint owner has severally the right to the possession of the entire property, and the sheriff by taking possession does no more than the joint owner could do. Goode & Ulrick v. Longmire, 35 Ala. 668, 76 Am. Dec. 309.

[b] Effect of Levy.—A levy upon personal property held by the execution debtor jointly with another, accompanied with a statement of the facts connected with the levy and the claim of the joint owner, gives to the plaintiff a lien upon the debtor's interest in it. The enforcement of this lien can only be had in equity, where the rights of all parties in interest can be determined. Vicory v. Strausbaugh, 78 Ky. 425.

(7.) Corporate Property. — The manner of levying on property of a corporation is treated elsewhere in this work.<sup>36</sup>

by seizing the property instead of by giving the statutory notice is not void. Davis v. Jones, 32 Tex. Civ. App. 424, 75 S. W. 63. See Hamburg v. Wood & Co., 66 Tex. 163, 18 S. W. 623.

[b] A levy upon a book account must be made in the mode provided for levying upon debts generally. It cannot be made by seizing the books containing the account. Swart v. Thomas, 26 Minn. 141, 1 N. W. 830; Tullis v. Brawley, 3 Minn. 277.

(9.) Shares of Stock. — The manner in which shares of stock may be levied on is usually regulated by statute,<sup>46</sup> which must be followed.<sup>47</sup> In some states stock of a corporation may be levied on by leaving a notice thereof with a designated officer,<sup>48</sup> or by leaving an attested or certified copy of the writ with the officer named in the statute,<sup>49</sup> or

Am. Dec. 606. See Dore v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 232, 13 Pac. 621, 1 Am. St. Rep. 48, holding a service of the writ of execution upon the judgment debtor and a notice of levy upon a certain judgment is what is usually called a process of garnishment. See the title "Garnishment."

[h] Notice to Attorney or Court.

(1) Neither the attorney of the defendant in the judgment sought to be levied upon nor the judge can be considered as holding the judgment. Therefore a service of a copy of the writ and notice upon the attorney will not constitute a valid levy. McLaughlin v. Alexander, 2 S. D. 226, 49 N. W. 99. (2) Under a statute which requires that a copy of the writ be served upon the "person holding the property" the service of a copy of the execution upon the clerk of the court is not necessary in levying upon a judgment. Wheaton v. Spooner, 52 Minn. 417, 54 N. W. 372.

46. Consult the various statutes.

[a] Notice in some form to the defendant seems to be indispensable, but in a majority of the cases, a pursuit of the statutory method of levy will give him sufficient notice. *Voorhis v. [b] A levy by mere inventory, without applying to the company, is not sufficient to defeat the rights of a bona fide purchaser of the defendant. Princeton Bank v. Crozer, 22 N. J. L. 383, 53 Am. Dec. 254.

[c] In New Jersey, shares in any bank, insurance company or other joint stock company may be taken in virtue of an execution in the same manner as goods and chattels. 2 Comp. [d] In Pennsylvania, no particular formality is legally necessary to constitute a levy upon stocks. The officer may announce to the debtor his levy on the stocks in the list furnished by the creditor enumerating certain stocks to be levied on, and then inclose the list with his writ to be afterwards attached or more securely made a part of it. Braden's Estate, 165 Pa. 184, 30 Atl. 746.

[a] A compliance with the provisions of the statute as to ascertaining from the officer appointed by the corporation to keep the record thereof, the number of shares subjected to the levy by the service of the required notice, is not absolutely necessary to a valid execution sale, provided the sheriff ascertains from any source the actual number of shares owned by the judgment debtor, and puts them up and makes sale thereof. Blair v. Compton, 33 Mich. 414.

55. See Keating v. Stone & Sons Live Stock Co., 83 Tex. 467, 18 S. W. 797.

[a] "If by any proper means the officer who levies the execution can ascertain the number of shares owned by the debtor, we have no doubt about his authority to levy an execution upon so many of them as may be proper to satisfy it, as in other cases . . . ; but when he neither possesses nor can acquire such knowledge we do not think in taking and selling the whole as the property of the debtor,<sup>56</sup> but the officer should separate them if possible,<sup>57</sup> and if the mingling or confusion is without fault on the part of the owner of the other goods, the officer is not justified in taking the mass but is bound at his peril to correctly separate the goods of the debtor.<sup>58</sup>

It was held that as the sheep of the stranger had become mixed without his fault, the officer was bound at his peril to see that he took no sheep except those of the debtor. Kingsbury v. Pond, 3 N. H. 511.

[b] If the claimant is in possession at the time of levy, it is his duty to point out the goods he claims. Sharp v. Lamy, 37 App. Div. 136, 55 N. Y. Supp. 784.

[c] It is the duty of the sheriff to restore the goods improperly taken, after notice from the claimant. But the notice must be specific, apprising the sheriff of and designating the particular goods improperly seized. Wellington v. Sedgwick, 12 Cal. 469, 476.

60. Sheffield v. Key, 14 Ga. 528.

[a] A levy upon a stock of cattle "as they now run, marks and brands not known, but known as the Sheffield stock," is insufficient as there was no seizure or anything equivalent thereto, no herding and collecting and taking possession. There must be some sort of custody and control which will serve to designate the extent of the intention to seize and take possession. Sheffield v. Key, 14 Ga. 528.

[a] Statute Cumulative.—The words "may be" in the statute are permissive and admit of the construction that the remedy is cumulative with that of the common law, and were intended to give the plaintiff the option of making the levy in the mode indicated by the statute or by an actual seizure of the property. Middlebrook & Bros. v. Zapp, 79 Tex. 321, 15 S. W. 258.

[b] Cattle Not Within County.—(1) Gunter v. Cobb, 82 Tex. 598, 17 S. W. 848, distinguished in Davis v. Dallas Nat. Bank, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 41, 26 S. W. 222. (2) Where it is not shown that the range extends beyond the limits of the sheriff's county, a levy upon cattle "running at large on the range in Motley county, Texas," is presumptively sufficient. Sparks v. McHugh (Tex. Civ. App.), 43 S. W. 1045.

[c] Effect of Levy on Possession. The case of Donald & Cobb v. Carpenter, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 321, 27 S. W. 1053, has construed this statute in so far as it relates to the custody of the stock so levied on, in the following words: "We therefore construe the statute to mean this: by a range levy the entire herd is placed in custodia legis, so as to prevent the owner from

(b.) In Pastures. — In levying upon live stock confined in pens and pastures of moderate size, the officer levying upon them should follow the method prescribed as ordinarily necessary to the validity of a levy upon personal property, that is he must take possession and control of the stock.<sup>62</sup> He is allowed a reasonable time in which to reduce his levy to actual possession.<sup>63</sup>

selling or otherwise disposing of any part thereof in such manner as will interfere with the right of selection given the purchaser by article 2314; and it is the duty of the officer to exercise such supervision as may be necessary to see that this is not done. Should the owner sustain damage from being deprived of such right of disposition of his property, he can, in a proper case, recover therefor. But for the purpose of feeding, branding, and caring for his herd upon the range, the owner is still left in control; and for his own neglect, neither the officer nor the plaintiff in attachment would be liable. Of course, what is here said would have no application in case the officer should go further than the law authorizes, as above construed, and take actual possession of the stock and exclude the owner from the control and management thereof.”

[d] Constructive Possession. — Though stock levied upon in this manner is not brought within the immediate control of the officer, the property nevertheless, is in the constructive possession of the officer by the levy of the writ, and it becomes his duty to prevent their removal, and, if removed without his knowledge, to pursue and recapture them. Rice v. Miller, 70 Tex. 613, 615, 8 S. W. 317.

62. Lindsey v. Cope, 91 Tex. 463, 43 S. W. 29, 44 S. W. 276 (where one of the pastures contained 1280 acres); Burch v. Mounts (Tex. Civ. App.), 185 S. W. 889. But in Gunter v. Cobb, 82 Tex. 598, 17 S. W. 848, the pasture contained from 293,000 acres to 430,000 acres of land, and it was held that the range levy statute applied. And see Keniston v. Stevens, 66 Vt. 351, 29 Atl. 312.

[a] The statute providing for levying upon cattle at large on the range does not apply where the cattle are in pastures of moderate size under fence. Lindsey v. Cope, 91 Tex. 463, 43 S. W. 29, 44 S. W. 276. See Gunter v. Cobb, 82 Tex. 598, 17 S. W. 848.

should proclaim his levy to those in charge of the premises.<sup>70</sup>

(XI.) Levy on Real Property.—(A.) PREREQUISITE INDORSEMENT OF NO PERSONALTY.—In some states before a levy is made upon real property it is required that the officer indorse on the execution “no goods,” or “no personal property.”<sup>72</sup> The omission of this entry merely renders the levy defective, but it is not void,<sup>73</sup> and it may be made nunc pro tunc,<sup>74</sup> or it may be supplied by amendment.<sup>75</sup>

(B.) MANNER OF LEVY GENERALLY.—In many states there are no special statutory directions as to the method of levying on land and the cases are not entirely in accord as to the details of such procedure.<sup>76</sup>

(C.) IN THE ABSENCE OF STATUTE regulating the manner of levying upon real property owned by a debtor in severalty, it is sufficient if the officer holding an execution does some overt act indicative of his intention to levy upon the property in satisfaction of the writ.<sup>77</sup> This

[b] A levy on land seems to be nothing more than a specific declaration by the sheriff that the land is overt act may consist of the making of some entry or memorandum of the levy,<sup>78</sup> giving notice to the defendant of an intention to levy,<sup>79</sup> or advertising the property for sale.<sup>80</sup> The manner of levying on real estate most frequently required and followed in the United States, is, without going upon the premises, by simply indorsing a description liable to a specific lien and that the sheriff has asserted his legal authority to sell it. Gassaway v. Hall, 3 Hill (S. C.) 289.

[c] Promise of Sheriff To Levy.—A delivery of the writ to the sheriff with instructions to levy immediately and a promise by the sheriff to do so is not equivalent to a levy. Redlick v. Williams (Tex.), 5 S. W. 375.

[d] In Arkansas one of the first steps towards a levy is to ascertain and identify the property of the defendant; and when this is done the levy is complete as to the land, and may be entered on the writ, without the officer actually going upon the land. Fenno v. Coulter, 14 Ark. 38.

[e] In Kentucky to make a valid levy upon the land it is only necessary for the officer to go to or upon the land and actually levy upon it and indorse the levy upon the execution. It is not necessary in such case to personally notify the owner or occupant of the land of the levy. The officer may make a valid levy without going to or upon the land in either of two ways: First, by seeing the owner or agent and getting his consent to the levy upon the particular estate; or, second, by apprising the owner or agent of the particular estate that he intends levying on. In each case he must make within a reasonable time an official and specific entry upon the execution. But when the officer goes to or upon the land and levies on the same and notifies the owner or occupant of the levy, such levy may be established by parol evidence. Leath v. Deweese, 162 Ky. 227, 172 S. W. 516; Jones v. Allen, 88 Ky. 381, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 962, 11 S. W. 289; McBurnie v. Overstreet, 8 B. Mon. 300; Demint v. Ringo's Admr., 5 Ky. L. Rep. 514. erty seized and a notice thereof to the party will be sufficient without going upon the land. Busey v. Tuck, 47 Md. 171. See also Berry v. Griffith, 2 Harr. & G. 337, 18 Am. Dec. 309.

[g] In Rhode Island the intention to levy on the land followed a sale in the manner provided by law, constitutes a levy. Lynch v. Earle, 18 R. I. 531, 28 Atl. 763.

[h] In Tennessee the sheriff need not by virtue of a feri facias enter upon land, and make an actual seizure; but may return the lands which he has selected for advertisement and sale, and may sell them afterwards. Russell v. Stinson, 3 Hayw. 1.

(D.) UNDER STATUTE. — Statutes prescribing the manner of levying upon real property differ somewhat.<sup>90</sup> It is provided by some that a levy shall be made by recording a copy of the writ and notice of levy,<sup>91</sup> or by appraisement, by sale or by extent.<sup>92</sup>

[a] In New York (1) by filing with the county clerk a notice of the execution and levy and having the same recorded. Code Civ. Proc., §1252. (2) No formal levy is required. Colt v. Phoenix Fire Ins. Co., 54 N. Y. 595; Van Gelder v. Van Gelder, 26 Hun 556; Wood v. Colvin, 5 Hill 228.

[b] In Vermont the officer lodges "in the office where by law a deed of such real estate is required to be recorded, a certified copy of the execution, with a certificate thereon, under his hand, stating that he is directed to levy the same on such real estate." Pub. St., 1906, §2172; Bank of Newbury v. Baldwin, 31 Vt. 311.

92. See the statutes.

[a] In Maine, (1) real estate which is attachable may be taken to satisfy an execution by appraisement. Me. Rev. Sts., 1903, ch. 78, §1; Glidden v. Philbrick, 56 Me. 222; Jones v. Buck, 54 Me. 301; Howe v. Wildes, 34 Me. 566; Fitch v. Tyler, 34 Me. 463; Mansfield v. Jack, 24 Me. 98. (2) No particular ceremony is required in seizing real estate on an execution by an officer. It is not essential that he should enter upon the land during any stay of the proceedings in the levy. Fitch v. Tyler, 34 Me. 463. (3) The statute requires him to give seisin and possession to the creditor or his attorney. "This formality is a necessary prerequisite to constitute a valid levy." Bingham v. Smith, 64 Me. 450.

[b] In Massachusetts, (1) under statute a "levy by sale" can only be made in case of rights to redeem mortgaged lands. Mass. Rev. Laws, 1902, pp. 1604, 1607; Mansfield v. Dyer, 133 Mass. 374; Bell v. Walsh, 130 Mass. 163; Grover v. Flye, 5 Allen 543. See also Hackett v. Buck, 128 Mass. 369. (2) Any interest in real estate which might, previous to the statute, have been levied on by extent, may under the statute be levied on by sale. Bell v. Walsh, 130 Mass. 163. (3) In all other cases the levy must be made by appraisement and setting off. Bell v. Walsh, 130 Mass. 163; Grover v. Flye, 5 Allen 543. See also Cowles v. Dickinson, 140 Mass. 373, 5 N. E. 302; Woodward v. Sartwell, 129 Mass. 210; Dewey v. Tobey, 126 Mass. 93; Cowdrey v. Sheldon, 122 Mass. 267; Richardson v. Payne, 114 Mass. 429; Kinsman v. Warner, 113 Mass. 347; Brown v. Washington, 110 Mass. 529; Gore v. Brazier, 3 Mass. 523, 3 Am. Dec. 182.

As to appraisements generally, see infra, I, B, 7.

[c] The mode of levying an execution, it seems, must be determined by the nature of the debtor's title at the time of the levy, not at the time of the attachment. Freeman v. M'Gaw, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 82.

In Louisiana, an actual taking into possession of immovable property is necessary to a valid seizure of it.<sup>93</sup>

Where the judgment is a lien on the realty the manner of levy is probably the same as where the judgment is not a lien,<sup>95</sup> unless regulated by statute.<sup>96</sup> No levy is required, however, in some jurisdictions where the judgment is a lien on the realty.<sup>97</sup>

(E.) ESTATE TO BE LEVIED ON. — A creditor must levy upon the whole estate which the defendant in execution has in the premises.<sup>98</sup>

[d] A levy by sale is made at the time of first giving the notice of sale. Bell v. Walsh, 130 Mass. 163.

[e] The requirement (1) that the officer give the creditor or the purchaser such momentary seisin as will enable him to bring an action therefor upon his own seisin (Mass. Rev. Laws, 1902, p. 1606, §20), applies only to levies upon land by extent. Owen v. Neveau, 128 Mass. 427; Howe v. Bishop, 3 Mete. (Mass.) 26. (2) A compliance with this statute may be presumed from a return that the sheriff extended the execution. Atkins v. Bean, 14 Mass. 404.

[f] Treating Building as Personalty. If a building is excluded from a levy on realty on the supposition that it is personal property when in fact it is a part of the realty, the levy is void. Hemenway v. Cutler, 51 Me. 407; Jewett v. Whitney, 51 Me. 233, affirming 43 Me. 242.

93. Major v. Hewes, 135 La. 354, 65 So. 487; Pipkin v. Sheriff, 36 La. Ann. 781; Morgan v. Johnson, 27 La. Ann. 539; Gordon v. Gilfoil, 27 La. Ann. 265; Cronan v. Cochran, 27 La. Ann. 120; Corse v. Stafford, 24 La. Ann. 262; Leverich v. Toby, 6 La. Ann. 462.

[a] The sheriff (1) must have the property in his own possession and under his control or in the possession and under the control of some person duly appointed by him. Gordon v. Gilfoil, 27 La. Ann. 265; Williams v. Douglas, 11 La. Ann. 632. (2) He is not required for the time being to proceed further and actually eject the occupant from the premises but the possession which he acquires is a legal possession nevertheless. Major v. Hewes, 135 La. 354, 65 So. 487.

[c] Exception.—In the parish of Orleans and perhaps Jefferson, the officer may make a valid seizure of immovable property by recording the seizure in the mortgage office. Major v. Hewes, 135 La. 354, 65 So. 487.

[d] Where the land is leased (1) or rented, the sheriff is not required or permitted to take the property into his custody. Due notice to the owner and judgment debtor is all that the law requires. Pipkin v. Sheriff, 36 La. Ann. 781. (2) The failure of the sheriff to collect the rents does not affect the seizure but it may render the sheriff liable therefor to the creditor. Pipkin v. Sheriff, 36 La. Ann. 781. See also White, Richards & Co. v. Waggaman, 36 La. Ann. 984.

[e] Failure To Seize as Ground for Injunction.—But the fact that the sheriff did not make an actual seizure is not ground for an injunction against the execution. Lambeth v. Sentell, 38 La. Ann. 691.

94. Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649, 99 Am. Dec. 441.

[a] The giving of notice of the sale of real property under execution is a sufficient levy where the judgment is a lien on the property to be sold. Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192, 48 Pac. 56. 51 Pac. 195.

98. Howe v. Blanden, 21 Vt. 315.

He cannot carve out a less estate, leaving a reversion in the debtor.<sup>96</sup>

(F.) LEVY UPON DEBTOR'S INTEREST.—It is generally held that a levy, upon a defendant's right and interest in a designated piece of property without specifying the particular interest, is valid,<sup>1</sup> but some cases hold that the levy must be on the land, not the debtor's interest in it.<sup>2</sup> The levy should not include land in which the debtor has no interest.<sup>3</sup>

(G.) BY METES AND BOUNDS.—In some states, it is required that the levy be made by metes and bounds where the debtor is seized of real estate which cannot be divided without injury to the whole.<sup>4</sup> But where the subject-matter will not admit of a levy by metes and bounds, a levy upon an undivided proportion of the property is valid.<sup>5</sup>

99. Howe v. Blanden, 21 Vt. 315.

[a] Where a debtor had an estate in fee simple in an undivided half of certain premises, and an estate as tenant by the curtesy in the remainder, and the creditor levied upon a portion of the premises by metes and bounds, treating it as an estate by the curtesy, it was held, that the levy was void and passed no title, as against a creditor of the same debtor, who acquired title to the land by a subsequent valid levy. Howe v. Blanden, 21 Vt. 315.

[c] A levy upon the estate of a tenant by curtesy may be made on the rents and profits instead of by metes and bounds. Sturdivant v. Frothingham, 10 Me. 100.

[d] The fact that a tract of land is laid off into town lots does not interfere with the right of the sheriff to levy upon it as a whole and treat it as one tract. Conley v. Redwine, 109 Ga. 640, 35 S. E. 92, 77 Am. St. Rep. 398.

(H.) EFFECT OF MISTAKE AS TO AMOUNT OF DEFENDANT'S INTEREST. A levy is not vitiated by an inaccurate description of the interest of the defendant in the property levied upon.<sup>6</sup> Thus although a levy is made as upon a greater interest in or upon a greater amount of property than is owned by the debtor, the levy is valid as to the interest or amount owned by him.<sup>7</sup>

(I.) ON PARTICULAR KINDS OF REALTY.—(1.) Mortgaged Property. A mortgaged estate may be levied upon in the same manner as if it were not encumbered.<sup>8</sup> In levying on an equity of redemption, the execution creditor may levy upon the equity of redemption itself eo nomine,<sup>9</sup> or he Shepard v. Pratt, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 32. See Bayne v. Patterson, 40 Mich. 658, holding that a levy upon mortgaged property is in law only a levy upon the right of redemption.

[c] The levy where the mortgage covers several tracts of land is made in the same manner as where the mortgage is upon a single piece of land. The creditor cannot select one or more of the tracts sufficient to satisfy his execution. Beers v. Botsford, 13 Conn. 146.

[a] Incidents of Levy Upon Land and Upon the Equity Itself.—If the levy is restricted to the equity of redemption, "the purchaser acquires no greater interest, than specially defined in the levy. He is estopped to dispute the validity of the incumbrance; and if in fact there is no mortgage, though supposed and believed, there is no equity of redemption, and no interest passes by the levy and sale; he cannot take the entire estate unincumbered. But if he desires to contest the validity of the incumbrance, because it has been removed by payment and satisfaction, or otherwise, or because fraudulent, or on any other may levy upon the land of the debtor which is mortgaged.<sup>10</sup> Where the debt is not sufficiently great to swallow up the whole equity of redemption, the levy upon the equity eo nomine must be made on an undivided part in such proportion as the sum of the execution and costs bear to the value of the equity,<sup>11</sup> and this may be done even where the debt is greater than the equity of redemption.<sup>12</sup>

(2.) Interest of Tenant in Common.—A creditor of a tenant in common cannot levy on a part of the whole property by metes and bounds, or sufficient ground, he may cause his execution to be levied on the land, and a sale thereunder will pass whatever interest the defendant may have—the equity of redemption, if there be a valid existing mortgage, the purchaser being subrogated to the rights of the mortgagor. The purchaser acquires all the estate of the defendant in execution, legal or equitable, subject to levy and sale; the greater includes the less.” Gassenheimer v. Molton, 80 Ala. 521, 2 So. 652. To same effect, Me.—Brown v. Snell, 46 Me. 490. Mass.—Cowles v. Dickinson, 140 Mass. 373, 5 N. E. 302; Russell v. Dudley, 3 Met. 147. N. H.—Bartlett v. Gilcreast, 72 N. H. 145, 55 Atl. 189.

[b] There Must Be a Mortgage. Where the levy is by sale of the equity of redemption, it is necessary that the land be subject to a mortgage, or the sale is void. Mansfield v. Dyer, 133 Mass. 374; Hackett v. Buck, 128 Mass. 369; Grover v. Flye, 5 Allen (Mass.) 543; Forster v. Mellen, 10 Mass. 421.

[c] Sufficient Levy.—A levy of execution upon an equity of redemption is good, when described as all the debtor's equity of redemption in the premises, stating also the nature and amount of the incumbrance, if the execution cannot be satisfied with less than the whole of such equity of redemption. Collins & Hanney v. Gibson & Sargeant, 5 Vt. 243.

[d] In Massachusetts, rights of redeeming mortgaged real estate, if the creditor prefer it, may be levied by sale instead of by appraisal and set-off. Mansfield v. Dyer, 133 Mass. 374; Bell v. Walsh, 130 Mass. 163; Grover v. Flye, 5 Allen 543; Russell v. Dudley, 3 Met. 147.

Coos Bank v. Brooks, 2 N. H. 148. Vt.—Perrin v. Reed, 35 Vt. 2, holding a levy upon the real estate without noticing the mortgage is a matter of which the debtor cannot complain. And compare, Bell v. Roberts, 13 Vt. 582, holding such a levy defective in substance.

[a] Dependent Upon State of Title. The manner of levy, whether on the equity of redemption or upon the land by appraisal depends upon the state of the debtor's title at the time of levy. Bagley v. Bailey, 16 Me. 151; Freeman v. McGaw, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 82.

[b] Where the legal title is in the mortgagee a levy on the land is ineffectual; it must be on the equity of redemption. Scripture v. Johnson, 3 Conn. 211.

[c] By Extending Execution Over Whole Estate.—An equity of redemption as such cannot be taken by extending the execution upon the whole estate by an appraisal of its full value. Litchfield v. Cudworth, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 23. Compare, Pettee v. Peppard, 125 Mass. 66, where a levy was upon several tracts some of which were mortgaged.

11. Beers v. Botsford, 13 Conn. 146; Sumner v. Lyon, 7 Conn. 281; Hobart v. Frisbie, 5 Conn. 592; Swift v. Dean, 11 Vt. 323, 34 Am. Dec. 693; Collins v. Gibson, 5 Vt. 243.

[a] By Metes and Bounds.—A levy on a part of the equity described by metes and bounds is void. Kimball, Jewett & Co. v. Smith, 21 Vt. 449; Swift v. Dean, 11 Vt. 323, 34 Am. Dec. 693.

[b] A levy upon “one undivided 12956-21900th part” of an equity of redemption “subject to the B. levy” is not void for uncertainty. Ross v. Shurtleff, 55 Vt. 177.

on an undivided interest in a part of the tract.<sup>13</sup> But such a levy is not wholly void.<sup>14</sup> It is valid as against the defendant,<sup>15</sup> but voidable at the election of the other tenant.<sup>16</sup> A levy should be made upon a certain undivided portion of the whole of the land held in common.<sup>17</sup> If the debt is less than the tenant's interest, the levy must be upon such an undivided part of the whole premises as the amount of the execution and costs bear to the value of the whole premises.<sup>18</sup> The procedure with respect to a levy on such estates is sometimes regulated by statute.<sup>19</sup>

(3.) Life Estate.—A levy of an execution in the manner prescribed for taking real estate is sufficient in levying upon an estate for life.<sup>20</sup>

(4.) Remainder.—A vested estate in remainder in land may be levied upon by a levy upon the defendant's interest in the land.<sup>21</sup>

(XII.) Growing Crops. — In levying upon growing crops, manual possession by the officer is impossible and is not necessary even as to intervening purchasers and creditors.<sup>22</sup> But as to just what acts will constitute a valid and effectual levy, the cases are not clear. Some jurisdictions have statutes regulating the manner of levy.<sup>23</sup> In the absence of statute it has been held that it is only necessary that the officer go to the premises and there do some open and unequivocal act which as nearly as practicable amounts to a seizure, and indorse the levy on the writ.<sup>24</sup> But some action on the premises seems to be essential,<sup>25</sup> though it has been held that a proper notification to the party and an indorsement of the levy is sufficient.<sup>26</sup> Witnesses to the levy are not absolutely necessary.<sup>27</sup> The rule requiring the officer to

24. Haw.—Ferry v. Hakalau Plantation Co., 21 Hawaii 745. Ill.—See Godfrey v. Brown, 86 Ill. 454, where the officer exercised acts of dominion over the corn and all parties treated it as being in his possession. Kan. National Bank v. Duff, 77 Kan. 248, 94 Pac. 260, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1047.

[a] It is a sufficient levy upon a field of standing corn for the officer to go to the neighborhood of the corn, read the execution to one of the defendants and tell him that he intended to levy on the corn, go to the cornfield with a witness and post at a public corner of the field a notice of levy and then indorse the levy on the writ. National Bank v. Duff, 77 Kan. 248, 94 Pac. 260, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1047.

tion on standing corn by going into the field for that purpose and notifying persons interested that he made a levy, the levy is valid. Barr v. Cannon, 69 Iowa 20, 28 N. W. 413.

[c] The least that an officer levying on a growing crop can do is to go on the premises and there announce that he seizes the same by virtue of his writ. State v. Poor, 20 N. C. 384, 34 Am. Dec. 387, followed in Long v. Hall, 97 N. C. 286, 2 S. E. 229.

[d] He must notify all present at the time of the levy. Johnson v. Walker, 23 Neb. 736, 37 N. W. 639.

[e] Levy on growing crops should be by some notorious act as by going upon property and making endorsements in the presence of a witness, though a witness not absolutely necessary. Bilby v. Hartman, 29 Mo. App. 125.

[a] Where the officer merely read the writ to the defendant and posted the usual notices of sale in public places, but did not go to the premises nor indorse the writ until the sale, there is not a sufficient levy upon a crop of sugar cane. Ferry v. Hakalau Plantation Co., 21 Hawaii 745. See also Cupples v. Level, 54 Wash. 299, 103 Pac. 430, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 519.

[a] But a prudent officer will call in some one or more of the neighbor-

do some act which would render him liable as a trespasser but for the writ does not apply.<sup>28</sup> The sheriff may retain possession by pursuing such a course as owners usually take to retain possession.<sup>29</sup> It is not necessary that a guard be stationed or kept over the field,<sup>30</sup> and it is not required that the officer shall, after the crop matures, harvest and remove it so as to bring it into his possession.<sup>31</sup>

(XIII.) Fixtures.—While fixtures which are removable as personalty may of course be levied upon as such, it has been held that if they are trade fixtures, placed on the premises under a lease which still continues, they should not be severed from the realty by the levying officer if to do so would destroy or greatly decrease their value when left upon the premises and levied upon and sold with the lease.<sup>32</sup> A levy upon the realty alone does not cover fixtures which are not part of the realty.<sup>33</sup> Actual possession by the officer is not essential to a levy upon ponderous fixtures not readily susceptible of removal.<sup>34</sup>

(XIV.) Levy on Property Already Levied on.—(A.) BY SAME OFFICER. Where a sheriff has taken property by virtue of an attachment in the case,<sup>35</sup> or by virtue of a writ of execution against the defendant in favor of another creditor,<sup>36</sup> no overt act is necessary to constitute a levy; the receipt of the execution to be levied will constitute a constructive seizure of the property held by the first writ. If, however, the first levy was ineffective or has been abandoned, the second writ should be levied as though there had been no prior levy.<sup>37</sup> Such would be the rule also if the property taken under the first writ has been taken from the officer by legal process.<sup>38</sup>

Bank*, 59 Kan. 354, 53 Pac. 132, where the receipt of the execution and an indorsement by the officer that he found no property liable to satisfy the judgment, was held not a constructive levy upon personal property in the officer's custody by virtue of a previous attachment.

As to necessity for levy where property has been attached, see supra, II, B, 4, b, (I).

[c] Where Property Is With "Custodian."—Where property seized under an attachment is placed in the hands of a custodian provided by statute, it is in the actual possession of the custodian and the constructive possession of the officer. When an execution comes into the hands of the officer, it is not enough that he makes a mere memorandum of the property, it not being present, with intent to attach it, but he should go to the custodian and there, in sight of the property, make the levy, indorse it on the writ, and notify the custodian of his act. Chittenden v. Rogers, 42 Ill. 100.

(B.) BY A DIFFERENT OFFICER. — A levy upon property in the hands of one officer under judicial process, by another officer holding a writ of execution, where allowed, will be at most constructive in nature.<sup>39</sup> The levy may be made sub modo by notifying the officer in possession that the additional levy has been made,<sup>40</sup> or by going where the

The constable copied the inventory made by the sheriff and made it part of his return. Subsequently the sheriff received another execution and made a levy upon the goods in his hands. It was held the constable's levy was void and the promise of the sheriff gave it no effect.

[a] Excessive Levy.—In levying an execution an officer has no right to seize, and hold the whole of the debtor's property to satisfy a debt, which, even if all exemptions were allowed, would be more than secured by the remainder; and if he thereby preclude the debtor from engaging in his customary business, and even from keeping house, his action is oppressive and unjustifiable. *Handy v. (B.) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT OF LEVY. — In determining what is a sufficient levy, the officer is left to his own reasonable judgment and discretion, free from the restraint or control of the plaintiff or defendant.<sup>54</sup> In the performance of his duty the officer must keep in view the purpose of the writ,<sup>55</sup> the security and satisfaction of the plaintiff's debt,<sup>56</sup> and he must avoid all acts of oppression toward the defendant.<sup>57</sup> The propriety of the officer's action is determined by the peculiar facts and circumstances of each particular case.<sup>58</sup> A levy is not excessive where the sale is insufficient to satisfy the execution.<sup>59</sup>

In determining the amount of property necessary to be levied upon, it is necessary to take into account the probable sacrifice to which the property would be subjected at a public sale,<sup>60</sup> and to make allowance for incumbrances and lien,<sup>61</sup> for depreciation naturally incident to the interests are jeopardized by a failure to seize all the mortgaged property, a levy on a part is valid. Galde v. Forsyth, 72 Minn. 248, 75 N. W. 219.

(C.) EFFECT OF EXCESSIVE LEVY.<sup>64</sup>—In some states the fact that a levy is excessive will not invalidate the levy,<sup>65</sup> the process,<sup>66</sup> or the sale.<sup>67</sup> But a levy and sale so disproportioned in value to the amount to be raised as to create a presumption of fraud or reckless indifference to the obligations of the officer's trust is void.<sup>68</sup>

In some of the New England states it has been held that a levy on realty is void if the value of the land taken exceeds the amount due by the value of any legal tender coin.<sup>69</sup>

[a] Compare, De Jarnette v. Verner, 40 Kan. 224, 19 Pac. 666, holding the officer must have the land appraised and sold without reference to any lien or incumbrance upon it as it is not for him to inquire whether or not the land is subject to a mortgage.

[b] Where after levy the sheriff learns of the existence of an incumbrance upon the property levied on, it is his duty to make a further levy unless the property could be reasonably expected to sell for sufficient to satisfy the execution and the prior lien. Governor v. Powell, 9 Ala. 83.

of goods with the intention of levying on and separating a certain portion will not invalidate the levy. Morgan v. Spangler, 14 Ohio St. 102.

(2) A levy on a steamboat, worth forty thousand dollars under an execution for one hundred and nine dollars held excessive where the execution could have been satisfied by levying upon a small part of the furniture of the boat. Silver v. McNeil, 52 Mo. 518. (3) In Brien v. Robinson, 102 Tenn. 157, 52 S. W. 802, the court said: "We think the levy was excessive. The judgment was for only $750, and the property levied on was worth $3000 or $4000."

(D.) REMEDY.<sup>70</sup> — Where the officer makes an excessive levy, relief may be had by applying to the court to release a portion of the property,<sup>71</sup> by motion to set aside the levy,<sup>72</sup> by an action for damages against the officer,<sup>73</sup> or by audita querela.<sup>74</sup> Relief may be had in chancery also in some cases.<sup>75</sup> An affidavit of illegality is not a remedy for an excessive levy.<sup>76</sup>

The right to have a levy reduced to an amount sufficient to satisfy the judgment and costs is personal to the debtor,<sup>77</sup> but he may be stopped from raising the objection.<sup>78</sup>

(2) But an excess of fourteen cents (Glidden v. Chase, 35 Me. 90, 56 Am. Dec. 690), (3) of fifty-two cents (Thayer v. Mayo, 34 Me. 139), (4) or of three dollars (Pickett v. Breckenridge, 22 Pick. [Mass.] 297), is not within the maxim and the levy is void. But some cases hold such small sums within the maxim. Spencer v. Champion, 9 Conn. 536 (fourteen cents). See also Hathaway v. Hemingway, 20 Conn. 191; Huntington v. Winchell, 8 Conn. 45, 20 Am. Dec. 84 (where excess was ten and seventeen cents); Avery v. Bowman, 40 N. H. 453, 77 Am. (II.) Purpose and Character of Indorsement. — The indorsement generally is for the purpose of furnishing evidence of the levy, the date and the property taken, and is for the prevention of fraud,<sup>87</sup> although it is sometimes considered as constituting the levy.<sup>88</sup> It is not the officer's return,<sup>89</sup> but after a return is made, it constitutes a portion of it.<sup>90</sup>

[a] Indorsement and Return Distinguished.—“The indorsement of the officer is one thing, and the return another. The action of the officer upon the writ is not the return, strictly speaking. It does not become the return or bear that character, until, as the word imports, it be actually returned to the office out of which it issued. Being indorsed, and remaining in the hands of the officer, it is under his control, and he can erase the indorsement and substitute another at his pleasure. He is not concluded by anything he may have written upon it, until it has left his possession, and has been returned to the proper office.” Nelson v. Cook, 19 Ill. 440.

[d] The true principle, says the court in Easley v. McLaren, 1 Baxt. (Tenn.) 1, is that the land shall be so described in the levy that it can be identified and ascertained by the ordinary mode of identifying lands, that is, by giving the county, the civil district in which it lies, such natural objects, if there be any, as will serve to guide the party to the locality, and such metes and bounds as shall include the land, or such other description of boundaries as by reference to other adjoining tracts, as will distinguish the tract sold from any other tract of land owned by the same party in that vicinity, and for this purpose the name of the owner should be given.

the nature and value of the property he is buying.<sup>10</sup> It is not sufficient that the particular purchaser knew the boundaries. The property should be so described that the world may know them.<sup>11</sup> A description which is recognized in the neighborhood is sufficient.<sup>12</sup> It need not be as certain as that required in deeds,<sup>13</sup> although any description or mode of description sufficient to identify the land in a deed of conveyance will be good in a levy.<sup>14</sup> A reasonable certainty,<sup>15</sup> or a certainty to a common or reasonable intent is all that is required.<sup>16</sup>

[a] The description must be such that the intending purchaser can, with the aid of the particulars given, find the land by proper inquiry of those familiar with it. Hayes v. Gallaher, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 88, 51 S. W. 280.

11. Brinson v. Lassiter, 81 Ga. 40, 6 S. E. 468, in order that all may knowingly bid and that the land may bring the highest market price.

[a] The description is sufficient if so definite as to enable the bidder to ascertain without unreasonable trouble the precise piece of land intended. This means not that a mere inspection of the description itself would show what land is intended but such an indication of the premises as would enable one to identify them by references to records and other means resorted to for that purpose. *Focke v. [a] A certainty to every intent is not required in the description of land levied on. It is sufficient if the description is certain to a general intent such as would put the owner and purchasers on inquiry. Swan's Lessee v. Parker, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 490, 27 Am.

A levy is sufficient if it identifies the property so that the court can understand from it what property is subjected.<sup>17</sup> If, however, the description is so vague and uncertain that the land levied on cannot be identified, the levy is void.<sup>18</sup> And a levy which is applicable to two or more tracts of land is insufficient.<sup>19</sup>

Levy on Part of Tract. — Where the levy is made on part of a tract of land, the part levied on must be designated.<sup>20</sup>

Where a levy is made upon several tracts of land, some of which are insufficiently described, the levy will be upheld as to those tracts sufficiently described.<sup>21</sup>

That the improvements are not sufficiently described is not a valid objection to a levy upon the land.<sup>22</sup>

k. Notice of Levy.—(I.) Necessity for.<sup>71</sup>—In the absence of a statute requiring it, a notice of levy need not be given.<sup>72</sup> But statutes sometimes require notice to the debtor.<sup>73</sup> In some states notice of the levy is only necessary where the levy is on real estate,<sup>74</sup> or on growing or unharvested crops.<sup>75</sup> In some states it is provided that if the defendant is in actual possession and occupation of land levied on the officer shall, at a designated time, serve him with notice stating the execution is levied on said land, mentioning the time and place of sale.<sup>76</sup>

ing" to the debtor does not include property of which the sheriff has no knowledge. Olden v. Sassman, 72 N. J. Eq. 637, 66 Atl. 603.

71. Where levy is on corporate stock, a notice is required. See supra, II, B, 4, g, (X), (E), (9).

72. Ky.—Jones v. Allen, 88 Ky. 381, 11 S. W. 289, notice to the owner, of a levy on land made by going to it and indorsing the levy on the writ, is not required. Md.—State v. Boulden, 57 Md. 314. Mo.—Duncan v. Matney, 29 Mo. 368, 77 Am. Dec. 575.

[a] Although the defendant does not reside in the parish where the property is situated, notice of seizure is required. Lamorandier v. Meyer, 8 Rob. (La.) 152.

[b] Notice to the debtor of a debt or credit seized on execution is not required by the Louisiana code. Labiche v. Lewis, 12 Rob. (La.) 8.

[c] Where a defendant points out property to be taken on execution, a notice of seizure is not required. Hewitt v. Stephens, 5 La. Ann. 640.

[d] The mailing of notice of seizure by the levying officer to the sheriff of the parish in which the owner resides, to be served by the latter, is a reasonable mode of giving notice. Lamorandier v. Meyer, 8 Rob. (La.) 152.

[e] Notice on the day of seizure is sufficient. Tompkins v. Stroud, 16 La. 274.

[a] Actual notice of the sale will not dispense with the notice required by statute. Johnson v. Daniel, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 587, 592, 63 S. W. 1032.

[b] Computing Time for Giving Notice.—In Goldsworthy v. Coyle, 19 R. I. 323, 33 Atl. 466, construing a statute requiring that notice of a levy on realty should be set up for the space of three months, it was held that in computing the time both the day of the levy and the day of sale should be excluded.

[c] In Missouri, (1) the statute only requires the sheriff to file notice when the judgment is not already a lien on the property. St. Louis Brew. Assn. v. Howard, 150 Mo. 445, 51 S. W. 1046. (2) The statute does not refer to real estate in the county in which the judgment was rendered, nor to real estate under cover of a homestead. Smith v. Thompson, 169 Mo. 553, 69 S. W. 1040; Lohmann v. Stocke, 94 Mo. 672, 8 S. W. 9; Harper v. Hopper, 42 Mo. 124; Harris v. Chouteau, 37 Mo. 165.

[d] A wrong description in a recorded notice of levy invalidates the notice as to a bona fide purchaser of the property. Savidge v. Seager, 175 Mich. 47, 140 N. W. 951.

Where, after levy and notice of levy given, the execution is enjoined, no further notice is necessary on dissolution of the injunction.<sup>77</sup>

Effect of Failure To Give Notice.—In some states, the statute providing for the giving of notice is directory merely,<sup>78</sup> and a failure to give notice does not ipso facto render the levy void,<sup>79</sup> vitiate the sale or affect the title of a bona fide purchaser,<sup>80</sup> but other courts hold that the nonobservance of this statutory requirement renders the sale void.<sup>81</sup>

(II.) To Whom Given.—It is generally required that notice be given to the judgment debtor,<sup>82</sup> and, in some states, the person in posses-

[b] Possession (1) by an agent (Bennett & Franz v. Burton, 44 Iowa 550), (2) or by a tenant (Babcock v. Gurney, 42 Iowa 154; Fleming v. Maddox, 30 Iowa 239, 243), does not necessitate notice.

[a] Notice of Levy on Growing Crops.—A statutory provision that the officer making a levy upon crops shall file a notice thereof in the office of the clerk of the township where such crops are at the time of the levy, and that such notice shall be constructive evidence of the interest of the plaintiff in the execution, is for the benefit of third persons, and a failure to file such notice does not, as between the parties, operate to limit the life of the execution to the return day thereof. Friyer v. McNaughton, 110 Mich. 22, 67 N. W. 978.

(III.) Waiver. — The statutory notice may be waived.<sup>85</sup>

(IV.) Presumption of Notice. — It will sometimes be presumed that the required notice was given.<sup>86</sup>

1. Certificate of Levy. — In some jurisdictions a sheriff, levying on realty a writ issued from another county, is required to file a certificate of levy in his own county.<sup>87</sup>

m. Successive Levies. — Although one levy has been made under an execution, the sheriff has power to make such further levies, during the life of the writ, as are necessary to satisfy it,<sup>88</sup> as where the property taken fails, at the sale, to bring a sufficient amount,<sup>89</sup> or been living, is not a compliance with the Tennessee statute. Lafferty v. Conn, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 221.

n. Abandonment and Release of Levy.—(I.) By Act of Plaintiff.—

(A.) IN GENERAL.—The plaintiff may voluntarily abandon or release a levy which has been made,<sup>95</sup> though it has been held that he cannot do so when it would result in injury to third persons.<sup>96</sup> The creditor may abandon a levy upon property not subject to levy or which does not belong to the judgment debtor.<sup>97</sup> But when a plaintiff has elected on what property to levy and has made his levy, he cannot release the levy and seize other property unless the defendant consents.<sup>98</sup> A plaintiff who orders the sheriff to suspend proceedings,<sup>99</sup> files a petition to have the debtor adjudged a bankrupt,<sup>1</sup> or consents to a change in the nature of the property,<sup>2</sup> or does some other act inconsistent with the continuance of the levy,<sup>3</sup> is held to have abandoned the levy. (D.) BY ISSUING SECOND EXECUTION. — According to some decisions the issuance of a second writ does not constitute an abandonment of a prior levy.<sup>9</sup> But others hold either that the issuance of a second

execution constitutes an abandonment of the levy,<sup>10</sup> or that it may be evidence tending to show an abandonment.<sup>11</sup> But the issuance of a void alias writ will not vitiate proceedings under the first writ.<sup>12</sup>

(II.) By Act of Officer.—(A.) RIGHT TO ABANDON.—An officer who has made a levy has a general right to abandon it.<sup>13</sup> When the property levied on is claimed by a stranger, the officer may abandon the levy,<sup>14</sup> or restrict the levy to the defendant's interest,<sup>15</sup> and he may release the property taken in excess of the amount required.<sup>16</sup> But it has been held that the officer making a levy cannot of his own motion release a levy and seize other property,<sup>17</sup> but such a release may be made by agreement with the debtor.<sup>18</sup>

[b] Notice to Creditor Necessary.

(1) An officer who in good faith has a reasonable doubt as to the liability of the property levied on to the execution has no right to release the levy without reasonable notice to the creditor that he would not sell without an indemnifying bond. Powell v. Barley, 2 Ky. Opin. 622. (2) A notice given at twelve o'clock of the day of sale is not a sufficient notice. Powell v. Barley, 2 Ky. Opin. 622.

[c] But where the receptor of attached property turns out other property to the sheriff to an amount sufficient to satisfy the execution, and the sheriff levies thereon, he cannot voluntarily abandon his levy, give up the property and make the receptor liable for the amount of the execution unless the property was afterwards claimed by other persons. Bowman v. Conant, 41 Vt. 479.

[a] But if the debtor were to repossess himself of the property after levy and prevent the officer from applying it to the satisfaction of the execution, the officer would have the right to release the levy and seize other property. Smith v. Hughes, 24 Ill. 270.

18. Smith v. Hughes, 24 Ill. 270. See Colburn v. Barton, 17 Ill. App. 391.

to an order of court to stay proceedings will not be deemed an abandonment,<sup>19</sup> neither will the fact that he permits another officer to sell the property under a subsequent execution and levy.<sup>20</sup>

Leaving Property With Debtor.—A levy is not to be deemed abandoned by leaving the property with the defendant,<sup>21</sup> or by leaving the property with a keeper in a building to which the defendant has access.<sup>22</sup> But if property actually seized is unconditionally re-delivered to the defendant, the levy is abandoned.<sup>23</sup>

(III.) Setting Aside Judgment and Execution.—The reversal of the judgment,<sup>24</sup> or the setting aside of the execution,<sup>25</sup> operates as a release of the levy.

(IV.) Effect of Abandonment.—When an execution has once been abandoned, it is absolutely discharged, and no effect can afterwards

Creighton*, 27 Nova Scotia 90, it may be doubted whether there is an abandonment where the sheriff leaves no one in charge and makes no arrangement with those in possession to hold the property for him.

[a] But in Roberts v. Scales, 1 Ired. L. (N. C.) 88, the court holds that a sheriff, who after seizure of goods leaves them on the premises not separated from other goods of the debtor and for the use of the debtor, prima facie loses his property in them on the grounds of presumptive fraud or abandonment.

[b] After seizing cattle, leaving them in the inclosure until an additional levy can be made on the yearlings, does not amount to a release of the levy. Burch v. Mounts (Tex. Civ. App.), 185 S. W. 889.

be given to it, under any circumstances.<sup>26</sup> An abandonment or release of a levy has the effect of releasing the lien of the levy,<sup>27</sup> discharging the property from the custody of the law,<sup>28</sup> and it carries with it all third oppositions.<sup>29</sup> The officer loses his special property and right of possession,<sup>30</sup> and he cannot maintain an action founded upon a right acquired by the levy.<sup>31</sup> A release of a levy rebuts the presumption of satisfaction of judgment arising from a levy upon sufficient property to satisfy it,<sup>32</sup> and a new levy may be made<sup>33</sup> unless the writ has expired.<sup>34</sup>

o. Right To Object to.—The debtor is the only person who can take advantage of irregularities in the levy.<sup>35</sup> The sufficiency of a levy, unless it be actually void, cannot be questioned in a collateral proceeding.<sup>36</sup>

Waiver and Estoppel.<sup>37</sup>—The judgment debtor may waive,<sup>38</sup> or be estopped from objecting to,<sup>39</sup> irregularities in the levy. Where the debtor furnishes a list of property to be taken in execution, or by any other act assents to the levy as having been legally made, he will not thereafter be heard to object that there was some omission or informality in the levy.<sup>40</sup> A judgment debtor who has given a forthcoming bond for the possession of the property, is thereby sheriff,<sup>57</sup> and of his right to possession of the property.<sup>58</sup> It is the levy which confers upon the officer his qualified title,<sup>59</sup> rather than the delivery of the writ to him, even where the property is bound from the time of the delivery of the writ.<sup>60</sup> When the execution is satisfied, any goods remaining in the hands of the sheriff are revested in the defendant or any person to whom he may have assigned his right.<sup>61</sup> The debtor may dispose of the property in any way that does not impair the lien.<sup>62</sup> The general owner may maintain an action of trespass or trover for an unlawful intermeddling with the property seized by a stranger,<sup>63</sup> particularly where the property has been left with him as bailee.<sup>64</sup>

[a] Nature of Sheriff's Property.

When the sheriff makes a levy, "the law gives him the property to enable him to raise the money he is commanded to make; and the property is given as far as it is necessary for that purpose, but no farther. As far as it is vested in the sheriff, it is divested out of the defendant; but of course no farther. This interest in the sheriff is called the special property; that is to say, such a right and possession as is deemed necessary to the special purpose of satisfying the execution debt; which enables the sheriff to make a sale of it, to defend his possession and to bring an action against one who disturbs his possession before the execution has been satisfied. But it results from the very terms 'special property' that, subject to the raising of the debt, the general property is in the former owner. . . . Upon payment of the debt to the sheriff, the general and unqualified property is ipso facto in the defendant; and the sheriff loses his property without having made a sale, and without any farther or other act by him and even against his will. Again, if the sheriff make a sale for a larger sum than is due on the execution, the excess belongs to the debtor and may be recovered in an action for money had and received. . . . The interest of the sheriff is therefore limited by the purpose for which it was created; which is the creditor's satisfaction." Popelston v. Skinner, 20 N. C. 293. To same effect Tyler v. Dunton, 1 Cooper's Ch. (Tenn.) 361.

This title in the sheriff is not divested by the return of the writ,<sup>69</sup> but continues so long as the property is needed to satisfy the writ.<sup>70</sup> It does not depend upon the removal of the property from the possession of the defendant.<sup>71</sup> But if the possession of the goods is left with the defendant an unreasonable time, the officer may lose his title.<sup>72</sup>

Right of Possession.—Where the property and the debtor's interest therein is of such a nature that there may be an actual seizure thereof, a levy gives to the officer the right to immediate and exclusive possession.<sup>73</sup> The officer, however, acquires no greater right to the possession of the property than the debtor has.<sup>74</sup>

(IV.) As a Satisfaction of Judgment. — The effect of levy as a satisfaction of judgment will be treated elsewhere in this work.<sup>96</sup>

[a] "Much of the apparent conflict among the authorities upon the subject of the nature and extent of the liability of receiptors of property to officers, has arisen from a failure to discriminate between contracts which, although coming under the general denomination of 'accountable receipts,' are yet clearly distinguishable from each other." If the receiptor's contract be a contract of indemnity, the receiptor will not be allowed to prove title in a third person, because for a valuable consideration (the release of the property) he had made an absolute agreement either to deliver on demand certain property, which he agreed to be the debtor's, or, in default, to pay a stipulated sum. On the other hand if the contract be one of bailment merely, he may always excuse himself for nondelivery by showing the goods were not the property of the debtor, but of a third person, into the property and does not do so on demand, the sheriff has a remedy against him by an action at law.<sup>54</sup>

[a] The declaration in trover against a receiptor need not allege that the execution is in full force and ef- fect at time of making demand for the property. Burk v. Webb, 32 Mich. 173.
